The apparatus employed in the capture of swordfish, Professor Goode says, is simple. It is a harpoon with a detachable head. When the fish is struck the head of the harpoon remains in the body of the fish, and carries with it a light rope, which is either made fast or held by a man in a small boat, or is attached to some kind of buoy, which is towed through the water by the struggling fish, and which marks its whereabouts after death. The harpoon consists of a pole fifteen or sixteen feet in length, usually of hickory or some other hard wood, upon which the bark has been left, so that the harpooner may have a firmer hand grip. This pole is from an inch and a half to two inches in diameter, and at one end is provided with an iron rod or shank about two feet long and five-eighths of an inch in diameter. This shank is fastened to the pole by means of a conical or elongated, cuplike expansion at one end, which fits over the sharpened end of the pole, to which it is secured by screws or spikes. A light line extends from one end of the pole to the point where it joins the shank, and in this line is tied a loop, by which is made fast another short line, which secures the pole to the vessel or boat, so that when it is thrown at the fish it cannot be lost. Upon the end of the shank fits the head of the harpoon.

The entire weight of the harpoon, pole, shank and head should not exceed eighteen pounds. The line is from 50 to 150 fathoms long. In addition to the harpoon, every swordfisherman carries a lance. This implement is precisely similar to a whaleman's lance, except that it is smaller, consisting of a lanceolate blade perhaps one inch wide and two inches long, upon the end of a shank of five-eighths inch iron, perhaps two or three feet in length, fastened in the ordinary way upon a pole fifteen to eighteen inches in length.

The swordfish are always harpooned from the end of the bowsprit of a sailing vessel. It is next to impossible to approach them in a small boat. All vessels regularly engaged in this fishery are supplied with a special apparatus, called a "rest" or "pulpit," for the support of the harpooner as he stands on the bowsprit, and this is almost essential to success. When the fish is from six to ten feet in front of the vessel it is struck. The harpoon is never thrown, the pole being too long. The strong arm of the harpooner punches the dart into the back of the fish, right at the side of the high dorsal fin, and the pole is withdrawn and fastened again to its place. When the dart has been fastened to the fish the line is allowed to run out as far as the fish will carry it, and is then passed in a small boat, which is towing at the stern. Two men jump into this, and pulling in upon the line until the fish is brought in alongside, it is then killed with a whale lance or a whale spade, which is struck into the gills.—New York Mail and Express.

A Grand Avenue to Mount Vernon.

It is proposed to construct a grand avenue from the tomb of Washington to the Federal capital, a work of interest to every citizen of the republic. This enterprise was first suggested by The National Republican, from whose columns we extract the following: "It is proposed that the avenue shall be 150 feet wide—twenty-five feet on each side for parking—and that each state and territory shall have apportioned to it 400 yards—or nearly a quarter of a mile—where it will plant as shade trees specimens of native growth, erect a marble tablet with the name of the state, its coat of arms, and in the case of the original thirteen the names of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, together with such statuary in bronze or marble as the state shall chose to erect. It is further proposed that the original thirteen states shall have choice of the ground, commencing at the tomb of the great leader, who, both in peace and war, is ranked as "first in the hearts of his countrymen," and that the other states and territories secure the next plats in the order of their creation as states and erection into territories.—Boston Herald.

In the Cathedral of Cologne.

In the Cologne cathedral there are 7 niches for the reception of statues at all the chief doors and at the side entrances. The height of the vestibule is 7 times 8 feet; 7 pediments for the figures stand in the same; 7 chapels surround the choir, the width of which, like that of the inner area of the church, is 7 times 22 feet, while the height of the choir is 7 times 23 feet; the height of the aisles are 7 times 10 feet, and twice 7 pillars adorn the choir. In the aisles are 7 times 8 pillars, and 4 times 7 shafts rise along the walls. The western portal is 7 times 33 feet wide, the length of the vast building is 7 times 76 feet, and the height to the summit of the principal towers was also fixed at 7 times 76 feet. The three transverse aisles are 7 times 15 feet wide. Not only does the number 7 enter so largely into the general architectural arrangements, but also into the smallest details as the parts of decorative work.—Chicago News.

MAN AND HIS JACK KNIFE.

A Peculiar Collection of Blades in the National Museum.

Professor Otis Mason, of the National museum, made an appeal to the public at large the other day for an Eighteenth century jack knife. That evening, before the professor finished his dinner, a gentleman brought to his house a rusty and broken old knife dug up on the battlefield of Ticonderoga—found side by side with the flint blade of an Indian knife. Yesterday some one, signing the name of Benjamin Franklin, sent the professor the knife with which, it is claimed, Franklin fashioned the sticks for his kite. It is not a jack knife, but a penknife of very modern manufacture, having, as some modern pocket knives have, a little pair of scissors in it, in place of one of the blades. Another gentleman, whose official position has given him opportunity to make such collections, has promised to give the museum, not a jack knife of the Eighteenth century, but a collection of Asiatic knives. The Ticonderoga knife is rusted and the blade is broken. It was a long, slender knife of one blade, and originally the blade turned on a hinge or spring so that the knife could be shut, but it is rusted stiff now.

Every boy knows what a jack knife is, and there are very few American boys who have not owned one. What a great museum wants of a jack knife, though, may puzzle not only the boys, but some of the old folks, too. Therein lies hidden the prime idea of the National museum, which is so planned and arranged that when the grand scheme is fully perfected it will tell the story of a man in all his relations. It will tell, in object lessons, how he was cradled, what he played with when a child, how he was dressed, what his occupations in manhood, how he went to the war, how and what he worshiped, what ceremonies attended his marriage and funeral. It will tell the story not only of one man, as he is known and seen today on Pennsylvania avenue, but of primitive man, of the red man, the African, the Esquimau. His social relations and his employments will be illustrated. All things laid under contribution for his use or amusement will have full exposition. And the jack knife tells something of this great story. The jack knife, Professor Mason says, is properly a knife of one blade. It derives its name from the French Jacques, which is a name given to low, illiterate fellows. Their knives had but one blade. When a man learned to write he had to sharpen his pen, and carried a penknife with two or more blades. To tell the history of the jack knife or one bladed knife would require a large case in the National museum. Professor Mason has the materials scattered about the shelves and drawers in his laboratory at the National museum.

He has the rude stone blades of the paleolithic and neolithic man, the rude savage that lived with the beasts before, perhaps, Atlantis sank beneath the wave, in ages so far back that even Hindoo chronology can hardly supply a measure for the time. Then he has a long and slender blade of bronze from Etruria, from the men who lived and wrought with exquisite skill in Italy before Romulus' and Remus' time, and who have left beautiful memorials of their existence, and inscriptions which no man has ever been able to decipher. But the most complete part of the collection is that illustrating the Indian jack knife, which the Indian used for every purpose. Blades of stone, flint or slate were bound upon a hasp of wood or bone. The edges were chipped or ground till they were sharp and pointed. Then when the Indian or Esquimau came into contact with the white trader their knives began to have iron or steel blades. One Esquimau knife is made out of an old can opener.—Washington Star.

A Drink from Father's Well.

The dying man, who was so poor at this moment that he could not purchase one hour of time, was rich in the worldly possessions he was about to leave forever.

He had houses and lands and bank stock. He had rich viands to tempt his failing appetite. It was his pleasure to drink of many different wines at his grand dinners. Yet his restless spirit craved one luxury—a simple, homely thing—that all his wealth could not buy.

Listen!

He is speaking and they bend eagerly to hear. He is asking for a drink.

He refuses it.

Then his loving child pours out a glass of his favorite wine and tenderly begs him to take it.

"No! no! not that!"

He speaks wildly, and they bend low and try to distinguish his broken and faltering words.

"Bring—me—the—gourd!"

"What does he mean?" asks his wife in despair.

"It—is—hanging—just—inside—the—curb!"

"Papa, dear, what is it?" asks his sweet faced child.

That was all. He closed his weary eyes to open them in his heavenly home, where, when life's little dream is over, we shall all one day slake our thirst from our Father's well.—Mrs. M. L. Rayne in Detroit Free Press.

Rustic Russian in Danger.

I have already alluded to the frequency with which the simple rustics seek to avert danger by the signs of the cross; during this thunder storm it positively assumed the form of a grotesque, gymnastic exercise, being done simultaneously by so many. With each clap of thunder every man, woman and child, stricken with instant terror and hushed into breathless silence, fell into a paroxysm of rapid crossing which continued about a quarter of a minute, and then, with an apparent consciousness of security, opened conversation again. An amusing feature of their picturesque evolutions was the fact that they followed each roll of thunder, while every flash of lightning was witnessed with utter indifference.—James Ricalton in Outing.

The Yellow Fever.

The panic in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee is very great; Louisville, Ky., is about the only place in the southwest that is not quarantined against every other place, and one case of fever has appeared there, the victim being a refugee from Decatur.

Surgeon General Hammond has returned to Washington from Florida, and thinks the worst is probably over. At Tampa, where the fever is supposed to have at first appeared, there have been no new cases for some days. The government officers have no doubt that the fever was in Jacksonville as early as last February, but its existence was concealed. St. Augustine has not had a known case yet.

The Surplus Not Reduced.

It is now stated that Mr. Cleveland's regard for the law relating to contributions being collected of federal office-holders restrained him from paying his subscription of ten thousand dollars to the campaign fund to be raised by the democrats. The statement, however, was sent broadcast over the land to have an effect upon other gentlemen whom the managers intended to assess. Mr. Cleveland in many matters, his political friends say, is a little nigh. He was not sorry to be able to quote the law, for which he at times has a wonderful respect, as a reason why he should not come down, at the instance of the committee on finance. This portion of campaign duty the candidate generously concedes to others.

DARTMOUTH ITEMS.

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 24th.

Dartmouth has cause to rejoice at the small amount of injury done to the Rollins chapel by the late fire. It had attained such headway when discovered that the probability of saving the building seemed small, and it was a matter of surprise to all when the damage was found to be so slight as to admit the holding of chapel services as usual, Thursday morning. About one-half of the organ was but slightly injured, and will be used again.

The delegates to the Y. M. C. A. Convention at Portsmouth, were: Warden and O. S. Davis, '89; Holton Ladd and C. M. Smith, '91; Strong and Hildreth, '92.

About forty '92 men have already joined the Y. M. C. A.

John Pickard, '85, principal of the Portsmouth high school, worked in the observatory a week this summer.

A handsome flag, bearing the names and likenesses of Cleveland and Thurman, has been raised just outside of the campus fence; Dartmouth is more than two-thirds republican, however.

Mr. Geo. Wilson of Kittery, Me., and a student of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of the University of Pennsylvania, has been taking the course of lectures in the Dartmouth Medical College.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, Sept. 24th.

The dull weather of last week impeded the farmers' work. Cornfields in this section look as if they had seen a winter.

A large number of our citizens attended the democratic conventions at Portsmouth and Exeter. Their flag raising last Monday evening was largely attended; the younger members had a torchlight procession, and people were kept awake until past midnight with their noise, fast driving, etc.

A republican club has been formed here; there are sixty members, and others will join this week.

Jamie DeLancey, the champion cow boy (but not a western) has a drove varying from twenty-five to thirty-five; some he drives over two miles; he reckons his travel for the season at some 1800 miles. These boys are not paid according to their labor. Jamie is obliged to cross the railroad track on his route.

Game is plenty at the beach, and halibut quite plenty in the waters. A few halibut have been sent to Boston of late, and one weighing twenty-eight pounds was sold at Exeter last week. The fishermen this season lack energy in this locality.

Since the shoe factory started, provisions, fruits, etc., are higher than in other places; grapes are seventy-five and eighty-seven cents a basket; the same are bought in Portsmouth at fifty and sixty-five cents. Lately some dealers here are cutting short on weight of groceries. Cantelope melons are sold here at twenty cents, and at Exeter fine musks weighing eleven pounds for twenty-five cents.

Report says Jones is to erect a large boarding house near the factory; some of the citizens here think he is the smartest man in town.

A large number of mechanics who worked at Amesbury early in the season are at home at present, not much business being done there on carriages just now.

Ex-Marshal Bazaine of France died in Madrid, Spain, Sept. 23d, of heart disease. He won his way to the marshalship by long and brilliant service. In 1862 he commanded the expedition sent to Mexico by Napoleon the Little, to make that country a virtual province of France, and aid in the disruption of the American union. During the earlier stages of the war between France and Germany, Marshal Bazaine acted a conspicuous part. On the capitulation of Sedan he retired to the fortress of Metz, which was immediately invested. After a siege of seven weeks the place capitulated, on which occasion three marshals, fifty generals, over 6000 officers and 173,000 men laid down their arms. For this surrender he was tried and sentenced to death, but the sentence was commuted to twenty years imprisonment, from which he escaped after being confined nine months. He never afterward returned to France

The democratic and prohibition orators and editors are all horror-stricken at what they pretend to (but do not) believe to be the "free whiskey" principles of the republican party. The New York Saloon Journal, the recognized central organ of the liquor interest of the country, is evidently afflicted the same way, for it says: "There is only one safe way for the liquor interest. They must unite to a man to work, heart and soul, day and night, for the success of the democratic party, and the best way for its delegates to spend their time is to consider the best means to achieve the success of the democratic ticket, state and national." The Saloon Journal of course cannot stand free whiskey, but goes in for democracy and prohibition.

It is estimated that 5,000,000 tons of coal are used yearly in London, of which nearly 2,000,000 are wasted in the form of smoke and gas.

MUSIC HALL.

"Hearts of Oak" at Music hall this evening. The piece is a romantic drama of the deepest interest, and the company playing it is one of the strongest on the road. See advertisement.

THE NEW SCHOOLHOUSES.

A meeting of the committee of the city council appointed to carry out the vote of the council in regard to the building of new schoolhouses, was held Monday evening at the city rooms, Mayor Hodgdon presiding.

A sub committee, consisting of Mayor Hodgdon, Alderman Urch and Councilman Furber, were appointed to select suitable locations, and to ascertain at what prices the land could be purchased.

The sub-committee were directed to report at a meeting of the general committee to be held at the city rooms on Thursday evening, the 27th inst.

DEMOCRATIC SENATORIAL CONVENTION.

The democratic convention for the 22d (Newmarket) senatorial district, which includes ward three of this city, was held at Newmarket on the afternoon of the 5th inst., convening in the town hall.

Lafayette Hall of Newmarket was chosen chairman, and R. M. Scammon of Stratham secretary; Daniel J. Ayers of Portsmouth, T. W. Willey of Newmarket and J. S. Wiggin of Stratham, committee on credentials; C. A. Morse of Newmarket, Timothy F. Cronin of Portsmouth and James E. Folsom of Epping, committee on resolutions.

The committee on credentials reported fifty delegates present.

This district at the election in 1886 gave the following vote: David Jenness of Rye, democrat, 1890; Daniel Lynch of Newmarket, republican, (again nominated this year,) 1137; scattering, forty-four; democratic plurality over all, 209.

BODY FOUND.

The body of a man about fifty years of age, five feet four inches in height, and weighing 140 pounds, dressed in a heavy overcoat, and having on two pairs of pants, those being tucked into his boots, was washed ashore at Salisbury beach on Saturday afternoon last. The remains were conveyed to Newburyport in charge of Medical Examiner Snow, and buried in the strangers' ground at the New Hill cemetery in that city by order of coroner.

On Monday the remains were identified as those of Christopher Killenbeck, of this city, who was drowned on Sunday morning, the 9th inst., by falling from the wharf of the Portsmouth Gaslight Co., while fishing for lobsters. The body has since been brought to this city for burial. The only thing on his person by which he could be positively identified, was a pair of spectacles. The body had been in the water fourteen days when found.

"IT IS ALL "REFORM."

The deputies of the United States marshal in Massachusetts have been notified to pay $50 each to the democratic campaign fund. Fancy our friend Edward Coffin subtracting such a sum from his hard earned receipts as deputy in this state! And yet it will have to come. The managers have stated that Coffin will give a soft snap in his run for sheriff, and he and the solicitor should contribute liberally to the general fund. What makes it an unpleasant surprise for the Boston deputies is, that the treasury officers cut down the marshal's fees in the most relentless manner. In one case, the other district was compelled [illegible] of a despatch from [illegible] and the sum was [illegible] comptroller of the [illegible] nothing in the United States statutes permitting the use of the telegraph. Mr. Garland, on the other hand, paid fifty thousand dollars to Mr. Thurman (the Ancient Roman) and his legal associates for their services in attempting to work a telephone racket.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Caroline H. Dall, formerly of this city, now a resident of Washington, D. C., is a guest of Mrs. Captain Walker at Seavey's island.

Mrs. F. L. Bowles of Dennett street left this city on Monday for an extended visit to Saginaw City, Michigan, accompanying M. Willis T. Knowlton and family, who have been visiting in this city several weeks.

Mr. Frank W. Moses, who during the summer has been in the employ of the Boston & Hingham Steamboat Co., arrived home last Saturday.

Mrs. William Leffingwell, formerly Miss Nettie Sillings of this city, who has been making an extended visit to her parents here, left for her home in Denver, Col., Tuesday.

Miss Kate Laighton of Cambridge, Mass., is visiting at the home of her brother, Mr. Charles M. Laighton of Miller avenue.

Mr. Myers Dempsey started Tuesday morning on a visit to friends in Rhode Island and western Massachusetts.

Mr. Mortimer L. Raynes is on a vacation trip to Boston and other Massachusetts cities.

The Times says the Cleveland adherents will paint things red in Dover on Monday night. The affair, like the Biddeford celebration, will doubtless be bigger in the prediction than in the reality.

Col. Charles A. Sinclair of this city has been nominated as the democratic candidate in senatorial district No. 22. While Col. Sinclair has not had experience as a member of the legislature, he doubtless from his outside knowledge of legislative modes, will be able to satisfy his constituents in his senatorial career, and even give points to those who visit the capital in aid of projects before the General Court.

Quite a large party of Gypsies were encamped on Lafayette road, just this side of the bridge over Sagamore creek, Monday evening.

The call for subscriptions in aid of the yellow fever sufferers is being liberally responded to. The subscription book was opened on Tuesday morning, in the city treasurer's office, and before night a goodly number of names, pledging from $1 to $25 each, were recorded.

The Japanese Village at Franklin hall is assured of a week's brilliant success here, the entertainments Tuesday afternoon and evening drawing throngs fully as large as the one of Monday night, and including many who attended the first performance. Any one of the Japanese experts will afford an evening's entertainment. The Sanford Girls' orchestra furnishes excellent music, and the sleight-of-hand and mesmeric performances are the best of their kind. Ladies and children are notified that the afternoon exhibitions are exactly the same as those in the evening, and the crowd is likely to be less in the afternoon. The admission is but ten cents.

The outbuildings of the Varrell place at Rye, years ago known as the Pine Tree Cottage, were burned early Tuesday morning.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

John S. Weeks, of Newmarket, has been granted an increase of pension.

Mr. George Abbott of this city, carpenter, who fell several weeks ago while repairing Borthwick's store on Market street, and was severely injured, resumed work on Tuesday.

The steamer Oceanic had an excursion party of about one hundred on her trip across Great bay and to South Newmarket on Tuesday afternoon.

It would be regarded perhaps as proper, when the owners take down a building, for the city to remove the street sign and the gas pipe and lantern. But these little affairs do not come under the head of executive duty. What's everyone's business is nobody's business.

Says the Boston Journal of Monday, the 24th: "The laws relating to the navy provide that there shall be no increase in the working force at any navy yard within sixty days before a presidential or congressional election, unless the secretary deems such an increase absolutely necessary, and publishes a certificate to that effect. It is now less than sixty days before an election, and yet there were 133 more workmen on the rolls of the Brooklyn navy yard on Friday last than than there were on Thursday. If Mr. Whitney has issued any 'certificate' that those extra men were absolutely needed no one has seen it. Is war with Costa Rica the emergency which demands their services?"

The hearing upon application for an injunction to restrain the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad corporation from pledging its credit in aid of the construction of the Lake Shore railroad, was begun before Chief Justice Doe in Concord on the 25th inst.

The 13th annual fair at Rochester opened on Tuesday, and continues until Friday.

The school in district No. 1 at Hampton Falls is being taught the present term that in district No. 3 by Miss Etta Tabor, and that in district No. 4 by Miss Emma E. Emerson.

The democrats of Biddeford had an extensive torchlight parade on the evening of the 24th inst., campaign companies from many other cities and towns of Maine taking part. Several unfortunate accidents took place. About midnight, just before the visiting companies left, a man named Welch, member of a Kennebunk company, had a leg broken by jumping from a wagon and striking the curbstone. One of the cavalry horses broke away from his rider and dashed through the crowd, injuring two men and three boys. One of the men, Francis LaMontagne, was suffering intensely next morning, and his injuries were considered critical.

The coroner's jury in the case of Chas. H. Eastman of Berwick, whose body was found in the river at Great Falls on the 16th inst., rendered a verdict on the 26th, to the effect that he was murdered by some person unknown, by being kicked and beaten, and then thrown into the river.

Two little boys of Kittery, aged seven and eight years, sons of George O. Wilson and Horace Philbrook, without saying anything to their parents started last Saturday morning, with two shotguns, to walk to the place of Joseph Frost of Eliot, grandfather of one of the boys, a distance of about eight miles. At Spruce creek the little fellows were chased by a number of bigger boys, and the younger, having on his brother's boots, found it hard work to run through the deep mud of the road. A friendly teamster drove off the big boys, and the excursionists arrived at Mr. Joseph Frost's in time for dinner, to which they were just sitting down when the father of one of them arrived, being out on a search after them with a team. They said they had had a splendid time.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY, ME., Sept. 25th.

We have no objections to having our items copied by the Biddeford papers, and put in their correspondence columns without credit; it is rather flattering than otherwise, being a tacit acknowledgement that the items are worth appropriating; but when they do give credit for any item, it would be more satisfactory if they would name the paper in which the article appeared and which it was written for, rather than one in which it did not appear at all.

Howard Collins and George Hill, of Kittery Point, have been at work in Newcastle, N. H., the past week, clearing up and improving a place recently bought by Dr. J. H. Thatcher of Portsmouth.

Mrs. Rufus Remick and children, of Malden, Mass., are visiting her parents, Mr. George W. Muchmore and wife of North Kittery.

Success Lodge of Juvenile Templars, of North Kittery, are to have a supper on Thursday evening in the vestry of the 1st Methodist church, for the benefit of the lodge.

"Old Dr. Baker," as he is familiarly known in these parts, is on his annual circuit around here. The old gentleman has failed much since his last previous visit, judging from his looks as he wearily plods along under the heavy burdens of wares and weight of years. He seems an object of pity to all, though he does not ask it from any.

We notice that a correspondent from the lower part of the county chronicles green peas in that section on Sept. 17th. Well, that is good, but we can do better here. Mrs. Frank Bartlett of North Kittery had green peas Sept. 23d, and there were enough left on the vines for another mess later.

J. W. Warner's family, of Gerrish island, are to leave for Cambridge, Mass., this week.

Mr. Frank Pickering has bought a farm at South Wakefield, N. H., and will move there about the middle of October. Mr. Pickering has just purchased a nice team to take up there.

The Ladies' Republican club will have a rally next Monday evening.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying, to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Ath-lo-pho-ros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 3, 1887.
Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.
CHAUNCEY B. REDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec 26, 1887.
I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence and having had its fangs fastened upon me for the past 20 years I know whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA THILTON.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. SCHOLTE'S

The Progres Medical publishes a paper by Drs. Regnard and Loye on the examination of the head and body of a convict immediately after his decapitation by the guillotine.

The prisoner was calm to the last and not pale, even when his neck was fixed ready to receive the fatal knife. Two seconds after the decapitation the cheeks were still rosy, the mouth wide open, with moderately dilated pupils, the mouth firmly closed. When a finger was placed close to one eye no change of expression took place, but on touching an eye or the tips of the lashes during the first five seconds, the lids closed just as in life. This reflex could not be excited from the sixth second after decapitation. The jaws were tightly closed and could not be opened by manual force. No similar muscular contraction could be detected in the trunk or extremities. One minute after death the face began to turn pale, the trunk remained flaccid, the carotids continuing to throw out blood remaining in the circulatory area. At the end of four minutes the face was quite pale, the upper lids were half closed, the jaws less firmly clenched than before. The knife passed through the lower part of the fourth cervical vertebra.

These researches show that not a trace of consciousness remains two seconds after beheading; that reflex movement of the cornea can be excited for two seconds; that the heart may beat for an hour, the auricles continuing to pulsate alone for half that period, and that, putting aside the reflex movements of the eyelid, the contraction of the jaws and the jets of blood from the carotids, it seemed in this case as though a corpse had been decapitated, so inert were the remains of the convict. Drs. Regnard and Loye note how calm and free even from physiological death struggle symptoms is death by the guillotine. There is not even asphyxia.—British Medical Journal.

The Baby Beaver's Dam.

"I know of a naturalist down in eastern Maine," said a well known Maine college professor, "who wouldn't be convinced that beavers could build dams till he saw it done with his own eyes. He is an awful incredulous fellow, any way. I bought a baby beaver of a hunter who traps them, one day, and sent him to my skeptical friend. He grew greatly attached to the little fellow and kept him in the house, but he often wrote me that his beaver didn't show any propensity at all for dam building. One Monday, washing day, his wife sat a leaky pail full of water on the kitchen floor. The beaver was in the kitchen, he was only a baby then, too, and he saw the water oozing out of a crack in the pail. He scampered out into the yard, brought in a chip and began building his dam. The naturalist was summoned. He watched the little fellow, thunderstruck. Said he, 'Leave that pail there, wife, till doomsday, if need be, and let's see what the little fellow will do.' The beaver kept at it four weeks, until he had built a solid dam clean around the pail. My naturalist friend is quite a beaver man today. They say, you know, that way down east there is a beaver dam that $200,000 couldn't build the like of. Oh! men don't know everything. The wasp knew how to make paper before we did."—Lewiston Journal.

Bogus Epileptic Fits.

Epileptic fits are often stimulated by beggars to excite sympathy, and by prisoners to avoid work. A few years ago a combination of a peculiar kind was discovered. This consisted of one man who imitated an epileptic attack while his confederates picked the pockets of the spectators, whose attention was directed toward the man in apparent convulsions. Some of these imitations are artistically done; the cry at the outset of the fit, the fall and violent convulsions, together with frothing at the mouth and the unconsciousness which should follow a real attack are well simulated. The absolute insensibility to pain can hardly be imitated. The French police generally detect the simulators by forcing the point of the thumb nail under that of the suspected dissimulator. This is actually painful to one who has his senses, while it can do no harm if the case is one of genuine epilepsy. In the real disease, the pupils of the eyes become widely dilated when the attack begins; the upper half of the face is very pale; and there is a short period (a few seconds) when all the muscles of the body are rigid before they are alternately contracted and relaxed in the fully developed fit. These symptoms cannot be feigned, no matter how well the simulator has studied the disease.—Globe-Democrat.

The First Lightning Rod.

If we are to believe an Austrian paper the first lightning rod was not constructed by Franklin, but by a monk of Seuftenberg, in Bohemia, named Prohob Diwisch, who installed an apparatus June 15, 1754, in the garden of the curate of Prenditz (Moravia). The apparatus was composed of a pole surmounted by an iron rod supporting twelve curved up branches, and terminating in as many metallic boxes, filled with iron ore and closed by a boxwood cover, traversed by twenty-seven sharp iron points, which plunged at their base in the ore. All the system was united to the earth by a large chain. The enemies of Diwisch, jealous of his success at the court of Vienna, excited the peasants of the locality against him, and under the pretext that his lightning rod was the cause of the great drought, they made him take down the lightning rod which he had utilized for six years. What is most curious is the form of this first lightning rod, which was of multiple points like the one which M. Melsu afterward invented. —La Lumiere Electrique.

A Mantle for the Pope.

Princess Clotilde has just finished a mantle she has embroidered for the pope at her seat at Moncalieri. The mantle, which is of white satin embroidered with golden flowers, will be sent to the approaching exhibition to be held at the Vatican on the occasion of the pope's jubilee.—New York Graphic.

Portions of the Bible have already been printed for the blind in 249 languages, using the invention of Dr. Moon.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

To the Deaf: A person cured of deafness and noises in the heard of twenty-three years' standing by a simple remedy, will send a description of it free to any person who applies to Nicholson, 177 MacDougal street, New York.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Eat With Comfort and Be Happy.

It is by no means uncertain, but on the contrary, a well ascertained fact, that upon the well being of man's stomach depends that modicum of happiness which is vouchsafed to him in this world. Dyspepsia, the foe of all others to the stomach's tranquillity, and most to be dreaded, is a complaint to the preliminary relief and eventual cure of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is specially adapted. It enables those who use it with a reasonable degree of persistence to eat with relish, because it imparts a healthful appetite; to digest with ease, because it strengthens the stomach; and to assimilate the food which is eaten and digested, thus bestowing health, promoting flesh and sustaining the exercise of the physical and mental faculties. It, moreover, facilities the secretion of healthy bile, accelerates without discomfort the habit of body, and tends, when taken upon retiring, to produce healthy slumber. Malaria is conquered by it.

Congress have generally, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsoubded.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

"I cannot paise Hood's Sarsaparilla half enough," says a mother whose son, almost blind with scrofula, was cured by this medicine.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

When symptoms of malaria appear, in any form, take Ayer's Ague Cure. It will prevent a development of the germs of disease, and eradicate them from the system. A cure is warranted in every instance.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Wise Patron of The La. S. Lottery.

A worthy Chicagoan is Mr. Peter Kleis, doing business at No. 99 E. Kinzey St. He is a benevolent, frank and social fellow—like all old-time "Fatherlanders" he will invest a spare dollar in a lottery and on a former occasion secured an $5,000 prize in the Louisiana State Lottery in association with his brother-in-law. Of his latest good luck, he was the possessor of a fractional ticket No. 3,894 which drew $50,000 in the drawing, Aug. 7th; he collected the count, $1,000, through the Express company. His present business place is a wooden frame building for vending refreshments, cigars, etc. He will erect, on the lot which he owns, a modern brick block.—Chicago (Ills.) Occident, Aug. 24th.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. eeowjan8

A SUMMER IN EGYPT.

Egypt in summer is commonly said to be an unfit residence for Europeans, but that is a mistake, and one which would be less prevalent, perhaps, if it were not fostered by foreign officials, who wish to prove that they need a three months' holiday every year. Of course, if a man begins the day with brandy and soda and unlimited lemon squashes, followed up by a heavy lunch, and then retires beneath the musquito curtains for a siesta until 5 o'clock, he will wake up unrefreshed. If he then calls a carriage and is driven about till dinner time, he will probably only begin to feel alive about 10 o'clock. He will not feel disposed to retire until the small hours, and will waken in the morning as weary as when he went to bed. This is a matter of course, for which he should not blame the climate much. Compared with Indian heat the temperature of Egypt is refreshing; for, however sultry the day may be, there is a long, cool night. The only real trial is the length of the hot season. A couple of months of more intense heat would be much easier to bear than the steady, gentle grilling from May to October. But, after all, an average temperature of 90 in the daytime out of doors—which may be reduced to 80 in the large native rooms—sinking some 10 degrees or 15 degrees at night, does not constitute a very formidable summer climate.

It is interesting to study an entirely different Egypt from that described by the hundred and one authors who have undertaken, at the solicitation of their friends, a record of their experiences. There is perpetual delight in watching the slow and solid rise of the mighty Nile, swollen by the rains in unexplored lands beyond the equator, rolling along its thousands of miles below Khartoum without a tributary, always giving to the thirsty fields on either side, never receiving, but ever flowing with a daily increasing tide—truly one of the world's greatest wonders. Gradually it fills the canals, and, mounting its banks, climbs softly up till it laps over and floods the landscape, till as far as the eye can reach from the river bed Egypt is one great lake. The villages with their clusters of palms lie dotted here and there, like tiny islands in the sea, and the fellah has time to cross his hands and look on with silent pleasure at the great Nile fructifying his acres with rich mold from the heart of Africa. Then as quickly or as slowly as it has risen the river sinks, leaving stagnant pools which the sun licks up, and the new layer of mud cracks into great chasms dear to the heart of the cultivator and ready for the quick springing crop.

The fresh growth is almost miraculous in its rapidity. Where one week all that that meets the eye is a muddy marsh covered with waterfowl, ten days later the lovely tender green of the young corn or berseen is covering the land. Then the real work of the fellah commences; which is to prevent too much water lying on his acres, and yet to supply the requisite amount of moisture. The pickax and shovel, the donkey and camel, baby girl and the baby boy, all are pressed into service, till gradually the proper supply is obtained and the crop springs up victorious, a home for the winter flight of quail and a carefully prepared hunting ground for the sportsman. Wild duck and other aquatic fowl rejoice in the Nile flood, and a goodly flock of pelicans are to be found. The summer plumage of the 1-year-old birds is peculiarly beautiful, the underside of each feather being of a shell like rose color. One bird will give eighteen inches square of the most lovely feathers, and a dozen skins will make an opera cloak beautiful enough to cause any woman's eyes to glisten. Soon in lower Egypt the cotton fields are in full bloom, a mass of glorious yellow between gold and primrose color, whose blossoms mean money. Quickly the color fades to the universal brown of the pods, till they break out again with the snowy fluff of ripeness, and the cotton crop is ready for the picker. Probably not one in a hundred of visitors to the Nile land has ever seen a cotton field in flower. It is one of the sights reserved for the summer martyrs.

What the cotton plant is to the delta the sugar cane is to the country between Cairo and Assouan. The cane is laid down in the early summer in pieces of about a foot long, overlapping each other in the long furrows. Boys then walk along stamping down the ends, and the earth is turned over. The process of taking root does not require much time, and when once the spikes appear above ground they shoot up almost visibly. By the end of August the planter's work is over, and he will tell you that there are many worse places in which to spend the summer than Biboh, Magagah or Erment. The morning rides and the moonlit strolls through the plantations would supply material for sketching much less hackneyed than mosques, pyramids and camels.

Whatever Europeans may feel, summer is the season the native really loves. In the winter he goes about with his head wrapped up in multifarious shawls, cursing the Franks who have brought rain and cold, and bemoaning his own hard lot. The few piasters he can earn will not afford him a fire, and his house, if he has one, is wretchedly bare. In the summer he can sprawl about on the ground in comfortable warmth all night long, and a few beans in the pod or a couple of yards of sugar cane and a pumpkin give him a cheap and delicious meal. Dust is better than mud for bare feet, and the baking of the sun is pure delight to the Arab born. In the town he can have his nightly fantasias or other open air amusements, which cost nothing.

The beasts have their share of enjoyment from the overflowing abundance of food, and the humblest donkey banquets royally. No one who has ever seen a mule or a donkey roll in the dust when his saddle is taken off can guess the joy he feels. The expression of satisfied desire showing on the tip of a bullock's nose and from out his great, sleepy eyes as he rolls porpoise like in the canal, after a long day's round in the sakieh, is enough to make a Christian envy the beast.—St. James' Gazette.

An amendment to the constitution of Switzerland has been adopted looking to the establishment of a government patent office.

DRUNKEN CABBIES OF LONDON.

How a Lady Journalist Was Frightened Almost to Death—Reckless Driving.

Now that the season is over, the cabbies are taken to getting drunk. They have not much else to do, for one thing, and they make a little money that I suppose they think will go farther in malt than in meat. At any rate, two of them, in different stages of intoxication, have fallen to my lot lately, and with the first one my life had nearly ended in a tragedy.

I was going to a little dinner in Pall Mall the other night, and I asked for a plebeian "growler," as I feared the draught in a hansom. It is a short shilling fare from Langham street to Pall Mall, and to save the trouble of paying when I got there, I handed my man a shilling. He said: "It's eighteen pence to Pall Mall, and I shan't go for no shilling." "Please give him a sixpence," I said, weakly, to my pretty landlady, who was standing by. "It's only a shilling," she remonstrated. "I know that, but never mind, let him have his way." I fancied that thereby I should earn the good will of my charioteer; but never was I more mistaken.

He mounted his box and drove off in a mad but purposeless manner, turning innumerable corners, and seemingly bewildering himself more and more at every turn. At last he glared in at me. "Wherever d'you say you was a goin'?" I repeated the address I had given him at starting, distinctly and with emphasis. He went on more recklessly than ever, nearly overturned an omnibus or two, barely cleared the cabs he met, turned round his own lumbering vehicle and drove back on his path, with no motive whatever, and behaved so like a madman generally, that I was almost frightened to death. Then he glared in at the window again, like a fiend, and howled: "Whever did you say you was a goin'?"

Again I told him, very distinctly indeed; and again he whirled on, up and down, back and forth, round and round, until, after a perilous interval, he shouted a third time in at the window: "Why don't you tell me where you're a goin'?"

"I have told you three times already that I am going to Garlant's hotel, Suffolk street, Pall Mall," I answered, "and I tell you now to stop this cab, for I want to speak to a policeman."

This word of terror must have galvanized his drunken senses into life for a moment, for he lashed his horses savagely, and tore on through the gathering dusk, until he brought up in Suffolk street, half way up the street, at the head of which is Garlant's hotel. Then he stopped, tumbled down somehow, and opened the cab door. "Drive to the hotel at the top," I said, with all the dignity which madness of terror had left at my disposal. "I shan't go no farther," said my man, "an' if you keep me a stannin' 'ere you've got to pay for the time."

"I have paid you a sixpence more than your fare already," I said, beginning to get out, which seemed to me the wisest thing I could do under the circumstances. "You ain't paid me a single penny," he bawled, his drunken memory as to that little financial transaction having entirely failed him. I got by him somehow, I hardly know how, and hurried on to the hotel, pursued by his cries of "You ain't paid me. I should think you'd be hashamed ter live. You ain't paid me a single penny."

My other drunken cabman, now I think of it, I encountered before the season was over, at jubilee time, and he had had too many tips, no doubt, from pleasure seekers. At least he was good natured. I had been to the theatre with two ladies. They saw me into a four wheeler and went on their own way, and then came my perilous transit. Why don't the Salvation Army or the blue ribbon people "go for" the cabmen and convert them, for the benefit of the rest of us? On this particular evening my man drove me as surely never woman was driven in a four wheeler before. He lashed his horse into a frenzy. He shouted and yelled as he drove, and everything got out of our way, as if we were a steam engine. We got to Langham street in safety, however, and somehow the man pulled up his horse and got himself out and opened the door. He was very amiable in his cups, and seemed to wish to leave on my mind a good impression.

"Spose you was frightened—'fraid you was, marm?" "I should think so," I said. "I never expected to get here alive." "I spose so, marm, but you see this 'oss is an old racer, and when 'e gets a goin' 'e thinks e's a racin', and nobody can't stop 'im. But 'e don't mean any 'arm, not a bit."—Louise Chandler Moulton's London Letter in Boston Herald.

The Creole and Her Suitor.

Creole girls have scant opportunities for meeting men in the social freedom granted to American girls. Male visitors who go week after week, month after month, are not encouraged in their aimless attentions. The creoles consider this attention, which does not mean marriage, as more or less compromising to a girl and as preventing the visits of eligible suitors. Not more than a decade since a man who sought the society of a girl at her father's house several times in quick succession without declaring his intentions was liable to have them demanded by father, brother or mother. More than one man, a stranger to this custom, has, from a Quixotic sense of honor, married a girl whom he had never thought of as his wife rather than have it be supposed that he had compromised her. This custom has given way before the march of American manners.

It must not be supposed that the presence of a chaperon in any way interferes with the gayety and ease of intercourse between young people. As both sexes are brought up in the most intimate companionship with their elders, the latter always keep their hold upon the thoughts and feelings and pleasures of youth, and never cease to have sympathetic companionship with young people.—Harper's Bazar.

A Plucky Powder Boy.

When Farragut's squadron was before New Orleans one of the powder boys saw a shell drop dangerously near the magazine. The fuse was burning furiously, but the boy picked up the shell and tossed it overboard. The boy was Oscar Peck. He lives in Bridgeport, Conn., and he has just received, in consideration of his bravery, back pension money amounting to $4,220.—New York Sun.

...tsmouth, ... cases ... deaths occurred, Sept. 25th, though four persons were reported to be critically ill. A case of fever was reported to have developed at Bolton, eighteen miles west of Jackson.

Chattanooga, Tenn., on the 25th, announced that railroad traffic was being resumed with many points. There was a light frost in the mountains near Chattanooga on the night of Sept. 24th.

Two new cases and two deaths were reported at Decatur, Ala., Sept. 25th; the town is almost deserted, but the provisions for what population remains are almost exhausted.

At Louisville, Ky., the situation of the yellow fever refugees was unchanged on the 25th; the one case of the disease, among the refugees from Decatur, was of a mild type. Many of the refugees were leaving for the north.

Evansville, Ind., on the 25th decided to receive and care for all refugees from fever stricken points in the south.

A despatch of Sept. 25th to the post-office department at Washington from Jackson, Miss., reported but few trains running; and another said: "No new cases of yellow fever or deaths have occured at Jackson to-day, but this fact does not seem to abate the excitement in the least. There are no trains running between Selma and Meridian, and Montgomery and Akron. A fumigating station has been established at Decatur. No station can as yet be placed at Jackson, as the neighboring towns threaten if moll or anything else, fumigated or not, is taken on or near Jackson, they will tear up the track and burn the bridges. Arrangements are made to establish a station at Jackson as soon as the excitement subsides. There are slight evidences of reaction. Business men begin to feel the presure, and are commencing to resist the mob element."

A letter dated Sept. 12th, from St. Jago de Cuba, says: Yellow fever reigns supreme, both in this city and at the military hospital outside. A servant of the American consulate has just been sent to the hospital with it. La Autonomia of this city yesterday published the following item: "Of ninety-six men of the battalion of San Quentin on duty in Santo Espiritu, twenty-three have fallen victims to yellow fever; seventeen more have been attacked with it, and three of them are dangerously ill. Of a detachment of nine men on duty at Parades, a spot noted for its salubrity and good sanitary condition, all were attacked and seven died of the fever. The mortality has been terrible." El Pais of that city one day reported twenty-four deaths from it. Both natives and foreigners have been swept away. The epidemic has been sweeping the island. The terrific inroads made by yellow fever may be gathered from the following: Out of a full company of men all but eight have been swept away in this city. The island of Nassau, knowing the danger, has declared a forty-day quarantine against us.

He Stands For Protection.

John Neeson, the Irish democrat who stood on the platform in Hamilton, Canada, with William O'Brien, with a revolver in his hand to protect the patriot from the mob, and spent several days in a Canadian prison, is out for protection. He says:

I think this country needs more, rather than less protection for its industries. It is an insult to the Irish race the way Grover Cleveland toadied to Chamberlain and his flunkies. All the English papers are for Cleveland, and that settles it for me. There is no patriotic Irish blood in his veins who votes for Cleveland. Morton helped to fill a ship with food for Ireland, and he is the man for me. I am an iron maker and have seen the effects of free trade; have seen men working for seventy cents a week, I myself have worked for six cents a day. I am vice-president of the Emerald Association and president of the Association of Ex-Regulars of the United States Army, and you can bet there are plenty who belong to those societies who feel as I do.

The Governor and Council.

At a special meeting of the governor and council on Sept. 25th, John M. Mitchell of Concord was appointed railroad commissioner to succeed E. B. S. Sanborn, whose term has expired. In ac-

...ent, ... HARRISON ... INDIANA.

...R VICE PRESIDENT, LEVI P. MORTON OF NEW YORK.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS,
George W. Nesmith of Franklin,
Charles D. McDuffie of Manchester,
Charles S. Whitehouse of Rochester,
Frank A. Cofran of Carroll.

FOR GOVERNOR,
DAVID H. GOODELL OF ANTRIM.

FOR CONGRESSMAN, FIRST DISTRICT.
ALONZO NUTE OF FARMINGTON.

FOR CONGRESSMAN, SECOND DISTRICT,
ORREN C. MOORE OF NASHUA.

A Result Assured.

If there has been in the mind of any one a lingering doubt as to the re-election of Hon. William E. Chandler to the United States senate, such uncertainty must give way when it is seen that the New York Times is opposed to Mr. Chandler's re-election. It is said that one of the early successful moves of that wily politician, Mr. D. Bennett Hill, was to compass the opposition of the Times to his renomination and re-election as governor of the Empire state. If there is anything which the democrats of New York are disgusted with to the full, it is the attempt of the Times to move into the party and essay to dictate as to its management. The democrats know that the Times represents the interests of foreign merchants and manufacturers, and while the democracy are willing to receive contributions from this source of supply of needed sinews of political warfare, they do not care to be wholly turned over to free trade and encounter the same disaster which followed the transfer of the party to the slave power many years ago.

We have not learned of the especial reasons which array the Times against Mr. Chandler, but fortunate indeed for our senator, is the opposition of that paper. It ensures success, if there is anything certain in the book of fate. There would be no doubt of the election of Warner Miller to the office of governor of New York, did not the Times inject the unsavory support it gives the ex-senator because Gov. Hill will not come to its terms. The Times has a chronic contest with Mr. Chandler's senatorial conduct. It believes, or at least asserts, that he is insincere in his devotion to the principles of the republican party, and that he presents and advocates measures in the senate only for effect, and not from an honest motive.

Coming from a journal which pivots its support or opposition solely in the interests of its free trade clients, this is one of the most potent instances of a rebuke from a sinful quarter that has appeared in the present political campaign.

Things Have Changed Since Then.

The republicans of the 5th congressional district of Massachusetts having nominated Gen. N. P. Banks, the democratic convention of the district on Sept. 25th nominated by acclamation Col. Thomas Wentworth Higginson as the democratic candidate. It was not so very long ago—it was long after the war was over—that the name of the fiery abolitionist and patriot was spelled "twhigginson" by the democratic papers. But at that time he had not come out as an advocate of British free trade in opposition to the interests of American workingmen.

Congressman McKinney's Cadet.

Congressman McKinney of the first district of New Hampshire has written a reply to the charge of the Manchester Mirror, setting forth all the facts regarding his appointment of a cadet to the military academy at West Point. The charge was that McKinney appointed a parochial school pupil for his district over the heads of nine or ten applicants who outranked him on examination. The fact is, as McKinney writes, that the examinations, both physical and mental, were impartial, and Mr. McKinney appointed the boy who passed highest on the mental examination, who was also certified as physically competent. The next highest boy, fitted physically, was appointed alternate. The first boy was thrown out for a defect of hearing, and the alternate failed to pass the mental examination at West Point. Mr. McKinney then appointed a boy from Pembroke, whom he had never seen, who was never inside a parochial school, and whose father is an outspoken republican. Mr. McKinney left the whole matter to the examining boards, but as the applied tests were less severe than those at West Point, the first two boys failed.

The Yellow Fever.

There were 184 new cases and four deaths at Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 25th, most of the new cases being among the ... Mar... chester was appointed trustee of the New Hampshire state library, to succeed Amos Hadley; member of state board of agriculture, Alonzo Towle of Freedom; state commissioner to the centennial celebration of the anniversary of Washington's first inauguration at New York in April, 1889, Samuel C. Eastman of Concord.

Charles Bradlaugh, member of parliament, incurred an expense of £1200 in his contest over the oaths bill, but his friends have come to his aid, and more than £1000 has already been subscribed to reimburse him. He has accomplished his purpose, and will never again be required by law to take the oath.

One million spindles in Lancashire, (Eng.) mills have begun running on short time, the mill owners' object being to defeat the American cotton ring.

Three lads named Joseph Barberies, George Edward and Laurance McHugh were drowned in Dalnousie harbor, New Brunswick, Sept. 22d, at nightfall, by a boat upsetting.

The Texas notorious "lone highwayman" was shot and killed by a woman a few days ago.

A London despatch says: The judge has refused to grant the motion on appeal made in behalf of the governor of Tullamore prison, to quash the verdict of the coroner's jury in the case of Mr. John Mandeville. It will be remembered that Mr. Mandeville died in prison while serving a sentence for offences un-cou t at Portland, Me., Sept. 25th. He pleaded guilty to the indictment. He appeared calm and unmoved. His mother and father were in the court room, and he bowed to them soberly. Afterwards he was taken to the ante-room and had an interview with them.

The Wagner Car company has been systematically robbed by its car conductors during the past three months. The amount taken is estimated at $50,000.

Re-enforcements of British troops have been ordered to Suakim, where the Soudanese rebels have assumed a threatening attitude. General Grenfel and Colonel Kitchener are proceeding in haste to that place.

The Greek minister has presented to the Porte a note from the Greek government protesting against the illegal seizure of Greek ships at Chios, and demanding the release of the vessels and the payment of an indemity.

Lewis Davis, who for six months had been confined in the St. Louis jail on the charge of murdering David Miller, was taken to Cuba, Miss., Sept. 18th, for trial, but was taken from jail by a mob early Sunday morning, the 23d, and hanged.

The number of names on the voting lists in Boston is about 1800 larger now than it was at this time last year.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No To Itself other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

Mr. P. A. Moulton, from Carroll county, was charged by Post-office Inspector Bano with depositing a letter in a post-office, having on it a stamp previously used for the purpose.

Mr. Moulton repudiated the idea, and contended that the charge resulted from a threat made by a person with whom he had before had a legal controversy.

The evidence was conflicting, but in the opinion of the commissioner was sufficient to warrant the order for recognizance to appear at the October term of the Circuit court. Bail was promptly furnished. Frink, United States attorney, appeared for the government.

THE JAPANESE VILLAGE.

Notwithstanding the storm of Wednesday, the Japanese Village entertainment in Franklin hall was given in the afternoon, as advertised, and it actually was attended by quite a number of ladies and children. The evening reception drew a good number of visitors, though the attendance was of course much diminished by the condition of the streets.

There is but one opinion expressed by those who have attended this show, and that is, that it is one of the most interesting, entertaining and instructive exhibitions ever presented here, and that though the price of admission is but ten cents, the amusement afforded is greater than is to be had at any ordinary fair. The skill of the several Japanese artisans is wonderful, and the more closely it is watched the more interesting it becomes. The performances are pleasing as exhibition should be seen by every lady and child in the city, and is of no less interest to the men. It is a first class show.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

WEDNESDAY, Sept. 26th.

William Clark and Edward Pitts Philbrook, for drunkenness, were each fined $5, costs $6.90. From long practice, the parties named are able to get away with a $5 drunk every time they try, the average drunk being only a $3 one.

James Smith and Kate Carey, for drunkenness, were each fined $3, costs $6.90.

All four were ordered to Brentwood to work out—or board out—their assessments.

RANCH NO. 10.

"Ranch 10" was played to a large audience at the theatre last evening, and was loudly applauded. The piece is laid in the wild west, and some of the scenery—especially the burning of the corral and the snow storm in the Rockies, was very fine. The drama can be termed not only lively, exciting and laughable, but entirely unobjectionable to the most prudish.—Richmond Dispatch.

This play will be put on the Music hall stage next Wednesday evening, Oct. 3d.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

Among the charters reported Sept. 25th were the schooner Daniel Pierson, from Elizabethport to this port with coal at ninety-five cents a ton, and the schooner Searsville, from Hoboken to this port with coal at ninety cents a ton.

The largest amount of coal ever put out in one day at the Concord railroad wharf was landed on Tuesday of this week, 1800 tons, by ten gangs of workmen.

The Times of the 26th inst. said: "One of our valiant policemen arrested a young man for obstructing the sidewalk last evening. More of it could be practiced with good results." There will be no question as to that, from any of the hundreds of decent men and women who have been annoyed by the vast gang of sidewalk loafers during the past six months.

The steamer Oceanic, Capt. Robinson, was announced to make her last excursion trip for this season on Wednesday, the 26th inst., to Star island, Isles of Shoals. Owing to the howling gale and pouring rain which prevailed, the trip was omitted.

The George Williams house at the Lower Foreside, Kittery, bought not long ago by Mr. Octavius Libbey of New York, is being fitted with two large Lutheran windows and a wide verandah, and when completed will be one of the prettiest cottage residences in this region. Messrs Pendexter & Marden of this city are doing the work.

The governor has appointed John M. Mitchell, Esq., of Concord, as railroad commissioner to succeed Hon. E. B. S. Sanborn. The law requires one of the commissioners to be of a different political party from the other two. As Messrs. Putney and Prescott are republicans, of course the present appointment comes from the democracy. The governor perhaps thought that notwithstanding Mr. Mitchell is a director in the Mount Washington railroad company, and perhaps owns stock in that and other railroad corporations, and is employed as counsel for other railroads, nevertheless as he presided at a recent state convention of the democracy his appointment would be satisfactory to the democrats. How far this may be we wot not. The Pearson ring will rejoice and be exceeding glad. How the other fellows will feel can be better conjectured than expressed.

Amelie Rives-Chanler's book, "A Brother to Dragons, and other tales," is dedicated to Thomas B. Aldrich, her first editor. Mrs. Chanler is in New York, and is not writing anything at present. She is to remain at her home in Virginia until December, is to spend Christmas in England, and pass the winter in Paris.

MORRIS C. FOYE,

No. 4 Market Square.

The two portraits of Napoleon with which the general public is most familiar are those known as the Delaroche and the Fontainebleau pictures. Delaroche's portrait represents the emperor in his cabinet, standing, with his face half turned; the face is placid and calm, like that of a man who had not a care in the world. On the contrary, the Fontainebleau portrait, said to have been taken after the battle of Leipsic and subsequent to his first abdication, represents a man oppressed by gloomy thoughts. The lips are firm set; the eyes look out from their depths with a mournful expression. It is not the look of a man who is beaten, however; for in a year this same man was back from Elba and fought the historic campaign of the Hundred Days.—Chicago Tribune.

Baking Soda and Saleratus.

Bicarbonate of soda is very often put up in packages and labeled saleratus, but this is an adulteration, or rather a fraud, as real saleratus is the bicarbonate of potash and is obtained from entirely a different source. There is, however, an easy method of distinguishing between the two. If some of the suspected substance be sprinkled pretty thickly over some loose cotton and saturated with alcohol and the alcohol set on fire, the flame will be bright yellow if the substance is baking soda, and purplish if it is real saleratus.—Anti-Adulteration Journal.

The Life of the Leg.

The perfect leg, like the life of man, suffers many changes in its career. The infant's leg is chubby and of uncertain shape and promises. Its superfluous flesh is apt to leave it at 6 years old, and ten or eleven years must pass before its curves grow picturesque. At 20 it fulfills its destiny, and remains perfect in a healthy figure until nearly middle age. At 50 it begins its decline, which may be marked by scragginess, but is more often distinguished by a settling of the fat below the calf, so that the leg is all one size from knee to shoe top.—New York Sun.

Studying Heated Metal.

A French microscopist has made a new application of photography. Being unable otherwise to examine the structure of heated steel, he photographed the white hot metal and then placed the negative under the microscope.—Arkansaw Traveler.

To Be Avoided.

Like repulsive features, awkwardness hurts a person's business. I shun, first the man of slovenly person; second, the totally unreliable man; third, the awkward, bungling man.—Winters Hewit in Globe-Democrat.

The "bang" is going out of fashion in London, and high, intellectual foreheads are again the mode.

Those who live to be a century old are generally most remarkable for nothing else.—Uncle Esek.

No success is to be had by trusting to chance.—Napoleon.

The Society Gossip Business.

First Newspaper Proprietor—Yes, business has been pretty dull this summer. Advertising has been awfully poor.

Second ditto—My dear sir, you should go into the society gossip business. We save hundreds of dollars every week in composition, and our receipts are threefold what they ever were before."

"I don't understand."

"Easiest thing in the world. We get one of our men to go through the directory and pick out a lot of names. Each name is worked into a paragraph. Every man and every woman who sees his or her name in the paper sends down an order for fifty or a hundred papers to distribute among friends. We use the same matter every day for a week or so. People don't read the stuff, you know; they only look for their names, and down comes another order every day that a name appears. I tell you, sir, it is a big thing. Advertising is nothing to it."—Boston Transcript.

A Woman's Temper.

If I want to tell a woman's temper I watch her eyelids. You can read a man the same way, but not so readily. A woman with a fiery temper will move her eyelids with a snap, and that snap betrays her. Another who is easy going and hard to arouse moves her eyelids languidly. One with a quick brain and a temper furious when aroused just winks steadily, but neither quickly nor slowly, until engaged in interesting conversation. —Cor. Boston Journal.

Two Valuable Church Bells.

There are two church bells at Messilla, Mexico, that are valuable. They were cast in 1775, and it is said that just before the casting was made at least $1,000 worth of gold and silver jewelry was dropped into the molten mass of metal by the devout, who thought thus to propitiate their patron saints. The bells are to be melted and the precious metals recovered.—New York Sun.

A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences. Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Ath-lo-pho-ros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 3, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

CHAUNCEY B. REDDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec 28, 1887.

I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence and having had its fungs fastened upon me for the past 30 years I know whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA CHILTON.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

rious task, being accomplished under many difficulties. After any engagement, whether big or little, the correspondents had the greatest trouble to obtain correct information from the forces that had taken part in it. During the first year, and more, of the conflict, many minor officers of the regular army despised the volunteers, and few took pains to conceal their feeling. They seemed unwilling to give them any credit, and the same injustice prevailed to a certain degree among the volunteer commands.

When we inquired, therefore, of a brigade or division as to the part they had taken in battle, they would, if they had participated at all, be likely to appropriate most of the credit to themselves. Then questioning some other brigade or division, they would declare the honors of the day belonged to them, and would deny the truth of the previous report specifically and emphatically. Thus, an Ohio brigade would assume to have done everything, and to have saved an Indiana brigade from being cut to pieces; while an Indiana brigade would make the same assumption for themselves, and disparage the troops of the neighboring state. The same was true of Iowa and Wisconsin, of Michigan and Minnesota troops. Each command had turned the tide of strife, and covered itself with glory, so that there was very little left for the remainder of the army to achieve. The West Pointers had no faith in the volunteers, come from whence they might. They not infrequently disputed their courage; and when they did not, they proclaimed their incompetency. War was an art, a science; how could novices be expected to acquire it without study and experience?

Regulars and volunteers corrected in time this vicious habit. With their increase of military knowledge, they became more intelligent and more tolerant; they understood themselves and others better. In truth, the first two years were little else than a series of experiments: they served as a sort of training school for learning the trade of war.—Junius Henri Browne in Lippincott's.

The British Sailor's Dinner.

At 11:45 the bugle calls the cooks to the galley, and at noon the sailor gets his dinner. The arrangements are much the same as on the training ship. The mess never exceeds twenty, and is in charge of a petty officer, who is responsible for the mess traps. There are two cooks, one in each watch, and the boys are divided among the messes and have to do most of the cleaning and polishing, it being the watch below's duty to keep things straight. Let us take the Minotaur on a boiled beef day. The galley is a masterpiece of compactness, in which every inch of heating space is utilized. On one side the cooks are standing for their meat, which is picked out of a copper with a huge three pronged fork and ticked off by the steward as it is dropped into the mess tin. The soup comes pouring out of a tap about two inches in diameter into a half tub that may hold some forty gallons, from which it finds its way into the cans, one for each mess. As the meat is scored off, so is the soup.

A sailor's victualing allowance is a liberal one. He has each day a pound and a quarter of biscuit or a pound and a half of soft bread, two ounces of sugar, one ounce of chocolate, a quarter ounce of tea. When fresh provisions can be had—which is always when in port, and for at least two days afterwards—he has a pound of fresh meat and half a pound of vegetables. When he is at sea he has a pound of salt pork or salt beef, or three-quarters of a pound of preserved meat and certain quantities of split peas, flour, suet, raisins, rice, or preserved potato, dependent on circumstances, all having interchangeable values. Sometimes he may have mixed vegetables, or dholl, or even calavances, which are a kind of bean. In some ships he has coffee at about 9 o'clock, but then he has to pay for it himself.—New York Graphic.

How a Woman Reaches Conclusions.

In close connection with this more delicate physical constitution of the woman is the fact that her emotional nature is more keen, her sensibility more quick, her passions more violent, her instincts more imperious, and less submissive to necessary limitations, than in the man. This strongly rooted sensibility in women is the cause of their characteristic persistency in all matters that depend in any considerable degree on sentiment. It is in vain to combat sentiment with reasons. A woman of strong passion and fine sensibility will hold by her instincts, and leave your arguments to float, and in so doing may, in not a few cases, be right; but if the case is one in which cool judgment, and not keen feeling, is to decide, she will probably be wrong.

Arguments in such cases are stronger with a man, because he is either naturally less richly furnished with sentiment, or has trained himself to keep his sentiment in subjection; but with the woman it is omnipotent, as belonging radically to the constitution of her nature. You may bend the branches of a tree, and force them to grow, as we sometimes see, contrary to nature, downwards; but if you tug at the roots, you kill it.—Professor J. Stuart Blackie in Cassell's Magazine.

Secret of Petrifaction

Forty years ago there died in Padua the physician and chemist, G. B. Massedaglia, who had succeeded in petrifying several animal bodies, which he bequeathed to the University museum. To his will he had attached a sealed letter containing the secret of his method of petrification, which was only to be divulged to his legal heirs. Until recently all search for the heirs of Dr. Massedaglia remained fruitless, but they have at last been discovered, and are offered very large sums for the secret, which, however, they refuse to disclose for the present.—Boston Transcript.

Indicator for Ovens.

A new heat indicator for domestic ovens resembles a watch dial and is marked "bread," "meat," "pastry," "burning," etc. It can be attached to any oven door by drilling a hole through it to insert the spindle of the indicator. —Boston Transcript.

If the elephant may get angry, so may the ant.—Central African Proverb.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

To the Deaf: A person cured of deafness and noises in the heard of twenty-three years' standing by a simple remedy, will send a description of it free to any person who applies to Nicholson, 177 MacDougal street, New York.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the cause of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Eat With Comfort and Be Happy.

It is by no means uncertain, but on the contrary, a well ascertained fact, that upon the well being of man's stomach depends that modicum of happiness which is vouchsafed to him in this world. Dyspepsia, the foe of all others to the stomach's tranquility, and most to be dreaded, is a complaint to the preliminary relief and eventual cure of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is specially adapted. It enables those who use it with a reasonable degree of persistence to eat with relish, because it imparts a healthful appetite; to digest with ease, because it strengthens the stomach; and to assimilate the food which is eaten and digested, thus benefiting health, promoting flesh and sustaining the exercise of the physical and mental faculties. It, moreover, facilities the secretion of healthy bile, actuates without discomfort the habit of body, and tends, when taken upon retiring, to produce healthy slumber. Malaria is conquered by it.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

When symptoms of malaria appear, in any form, take Ayer's Ague Cure. It will prevent a development of the germs of disease, and eradicate them from the system. A cure is warranted in every instance.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A worthy Chicagoan is Mr. Peter Klein, doing business 45 No. 99 E. Kinsey St. He is a benevolent, frank and social friend—like all old-time "Fatherlanders" he will invest a spare dollar in a lottery and on a former occasion secured an $5,000 prize in The Louisiana State Lottery in association with his brother-in-law. Of his latest good luck, he was the possessor of a fractional ticket No. 2,384 which drew $500,000 in the drawing, Aug. 7th; he collected the money, $500,000, through the Express company. His present business place is a wooden frame building for vending refreshments, cigars, etc. He will erect, on the lot which he owns, a modern brick block.—Chicago (Ills.) Occident, Aug. 24th.

The Proper Nautch Dance.

The Nautch girls arranged themselves into a half circle, their scarlet costumes forming a bright crescent terminating at either end in a mass of spectators, whose half naked bodies, varying in color from pale olive to mahogany, were arrayed in costumes scarcely less showy than the dancers'. The chaperone tom toms an appropriate Nautch accompaniment on a drum with his fingers and four pretty girls advance from the half circle and, favoring me with a quartet of killing smiles and a quartet of coquettish glances from their bright, dark eyes, they commence to dance. An idea seems to prevail in Occidental minds that the Indian Nautch dance is a very naughty thing, but nothing is further from the truth. Of course, it can be made naughty, and, no doubt, often is, but then so can many another form of innocent amusement.

The proper Nautch dance is a decorous and artistic performance when properly danced; the graceful motions and elegant proportions of the human form, as revealed by lithe and graceful dancers, are to be viewed with an eye purely artistic and critical as a Venus or other production of the sculptor's studio. Only the British matron would consider a Nautch dance in any degree indecorous. The four dancers take the hem of their red garment between the thumb and finger of the right hand, spreading its ample folds into the figure of an open fan by bringing the outstretched arm almost on a level to the shoulder. A mantle of transparent muslin, fringed with silver spangles, is worn about the head and shoulders in the same indescribably graceful manner as the mantilla of the Spanish senorita. Raising a portion of this aloft in the left hand and keeping the fan intact with the right, the dancers twirl around and change position with each other, their supple figures meanwhile assuming a variety of graceful motions and postures from time to time. Now they imitate the spiral movements of a serpent climbing around and upward on an imaginary pole; again they assume a charming posture, their dusky countenances half hidden in seeming coquetry behind the muslin mantle, the large red fan waved gently to and fro, the feet unmoving, but the undulating motions of the body and the tremor of the limbs sufficing to jingle the tiny ankle bells.—India Cor. Boston Herald.

On the Summit of Mount Shasta.

The wind and cold were so severe that our stay on the summit was shorter than one could wish; however, one hour is about as good as two for a scene to which weeks could not do justice. Northern California and part of Oregon lay spread out like a great bird's eye map. To the southeast, seventy-five miles away, the snows of Lassen's peak seemed quite near, and far beyond it are visible the white tops of other peaks in the great Sierra; while at an equal distance north the beautiful symmetry of Mount Pitt in Oregon shows white above the Cascades, which stretch ridge after ridge for leagues beyond. Beyond the rugged and broken ranges toward the coast the air is cloudy, and we are unable to see the Pacific. The valleys at our feet are so smoky that the lower part of our view is much limited. The view of Mount Shasta itself is grand beyond description. West of us, more than half a mile lower, and two or three miles distant, is the great crater of the mountain. More than half of the great rim is yet intact—what is left of a huge bowl a mile in diameter, whose side seems to have been burst out by its molten contents. In other directions, from the summit, great serrated ridges of rock stretch down into the forest; while between them ever narrowing areas of snow extend for miles to meet the trees, like guards to keep the green from infringing on its white domain. From our great height the lower part of the snow, steep though it really is, looks nearly level, as do the wooded slopes and valleys beyond; and a passing cloud looks in the sunshine like a white sheet spread on the dark green carpet of pines.—F. C. Freeman in Overland Monthly.

Charles Sumner and His Friends.

Sumner was very careful of the feelings of his personal friends, many of whom disagreed emphatically with him on political subjects. Some of them were not of the same party with himself; some were not of the same wing of the party. After President Grant and his cabinet became estranged from the senator, certain of his friends failed to follow him. Among them was the journalist, Maj. Ben: Perley Poore, who, in his letters and telegrams, took strong ground for the president and against the senator. The contest at the time was exceedingly bitter, and "Perley's" dispatches reflected the degree of acerbity felt by the president's friends.

Sumner's friends were inclined to take issue with the journalist, holding that the tone of his letters was incompatible with his personal relations toward the senator, and brought them to Sumner's attention. He would hear just enough of them to know what was being spoken of, and then, if the paper had been handed him, would throw it into the waste basket, exclaiming: "I like him too well to read his letters." He was once asked, "How can you like him when he speaks of you in such terms?" and his reply was: "I like the person, not the writer; I do my duty as I see it; let him do his as he sees it. Why should we quarrel?"—Arnold Burges Johnson in The Cosmopolitan.

The Beaver's Awkward Gait.

Released upon the ground the beavers make off, with a curious shambling gait, a compound of shuffle and a waddle, with a strong tendency to fall forward upon the nose at every step. On closer examination the cause of this ungraceful style of locomotion was found to be twofold; first, their hind legs were at least one third longer than their fore legs, the extra length being in the femur; and secondly, they were digitigrade in front, and plantigrade behind, or, as our French cook, Francois, expressed it: "Ze front ligue, he go teeptoe, comme de dogue, or le chat; ze behind ligue, he make walk flat foot—pied a terre—like ze bair, or ze man." If one will try to walk on all fours, with the soles of the feet and the tips of the fingers touching the ground, he will have a tolerably fair idea of beaverine locomotion.—H. P. Alford in Outing.

Canada's population is estimated at 7,000,000.

SUGAR AND MOLASSES.

The Part Filled by Sorghum Down South During the War.

At home and abroad sorghum came to take the place of the vanished sugar. The children at home ate it in their ginger cakes, and the soldiers in camp drank it in their rye coffee. The molasses and sugar of Louisiana were procurable in degree till the fall of Vicksburg; but the spirit of independence was rife, and each state desired and determined to rely as much as possible on its own products. The theory of state sovereignty was extended even to sorghum; and its introduction was hailed everywhere as one of the greatest boons of a beneficent Providence. The juice of the cane, extracted in a primitive fashion by crushing the stalks between wooden rollers revolving upon wooden cogs and impelled by horse-and-little-darky power, was caught in an ordinary trough, boiled down into proper consistency in preserving kettles, kitchen pots, or whatever might be utilized for the purpose, and barreled for use as sorghum molasses. The syrup thus produced was quite a palatable one, with a slightly acidulous and not disagreeable flavor, but with an unpleasant tendency to make the mouth sore. It was known as "long sweetening," in contradistinction to its predecessor, "short sweetening," the sugar that was scarce.

From its use in the place of sugar sorghum soon leaped into high repute as an almost universal food staple. It was warranted to cure any case of hunger in man or beast. Writers in the suggestive daily press undertook in elaborate and exhaustive essays to show that sorghum syrup was nearly as nutritious as meat and an exceedingly good substitute for it, while the seed of the sorghum cane was capable of being ground into a meal that made a most excellent and wholesome brown bread. They claimed that the problem of blockaded existence had been solved in the discovery of a plant which produced in itself meat and bread for the human family and provender for cattle. Yet the average denizen of the Confederacy, whether at home or in the army, while rendering due credit to the ingenuity and skill with which the cause of the "food staple" was advocated by its champions, appealed to the higher arbitrament of his own digestion; and though willing to accord sorghum its real merit as serviceable and useful in the place of something better, he was always ready to exchange it for the more certain and familiar nutriment of bacon and "corn pone." To see it fulfill the functions of sugar in the latest recipe for Confederate coffee and tea was well enough; but quietly to submit to its usurpation of the high place of pork and corn was more t[illegible] the appetite of hungry rebeldom w[illegible]ure.

There was a secondary use to which sorghum was put, in which it met with decided favor from a select few. This was its use in the manufacture of blacking. The manuscript recipe books of that day say that "wonderful shoe blacking, as good as Mason's best," can be made of sorghum molasses, pinewood soot, neat's foot oil and vinegar.

Yet, on the theory of the survival of the fittest, the average Confederate must have been right and the theoretic writers in the newspapers wrong about the value of sorghum, for bacon and corn bread have long since regained their wonted ascendency in the south, and sorghum has vanished entirely from the fields where it once flourished, save, perhaps, where here and there some man and brother cultivates it yet in his little "truck patch," making "long sweetening" for the consumption of his family in as primitive a method as that in which he helped his quondam owner to make it "endurin' o' the wah."

In the hardest times of the war period, when provisions were the scarcest, the latch to the larder of every southern housekeeper hung out to each southern soldier, no matter how ragged or humble. For him the best viands about the place were always prepared; and his was the high prerogative of receiving the last cup of real coffee, sweetened with the solitary remnant of sugar. With compassionate pity the women recognized the hardships in the army life of the Confederate soldier, and were always ungrudgingly ready to mitigate its severities in every possible manner.—A. C. Gordon in The Century.

Methods of the "Key Fitter."

A dangerous burglar is the key fitter, because from the very nature of his operations he is rarely ever discovered. He is not considered a first class man by the professional cracksman because he is as much of a sneak as he is burglar. Wholesale jewelers, furriers, and other firms who frequently have their places of business in upper stories of houses are selected as victims. The key fitter usually operates in gangs of three. He will approach an employe of the firm to be victimized carrying a tin box or a valise and pretending to have an office in the same building. Politely he asks if the person approached has a key to fit the box or valise, he himself having lost the "open sesame." In nine cases out of ten a bunch of keys is produced, and while the key fitter pretends to try them his "stalls" or assistants come in and divert the attention of the employe or business man long enough to permit the man who had the box take as many impressions from the keys on the bunch as are considered necessary for the subsequent robbery. The impression is generally taken on a substance made from fresh beeswax, oil, and lampblack. From these impressions the expert key fitter readily makes the keys required. The balance of the operation is easy.—Chicago Times.

She Took Advice.

The case went against her, and she had to pay costs into the bargain.

"Well," she snapped to the court, "I'll never take the advice of older heads again."

"Of whom did you take advice?" he inquired.

"Of my old grandmother. She is a woman of a very few words and is supposed to have lots of hard sense. I related the case to her and made up my mind beforehand to do just what she said."

"And what did the old lady advise?"

"She heard me clear through, then she [illegible] her specs, wiped 'em and put [illegible] and says she:

Tit for Tat.

There are those in the democratic party who insist that the appointment of John M. Mitchell to be railroad commissioner was a hit back by the governor upon Jones and Sulloway, for their movements against his excellency since the veto of the Hazen bill.

It is asking us to believe a great deal, when we are told that Gov. Sawyer would prostitute the high office he fills, either to reward his friend or to humble his enemy. It will probably appear that the Pearson adherents of the democracy demonstrated to the governor that the Jones-Sulloway combination controlled the national patronage, and the other wing of the party ought to have a voice in state offices. Whether the governor should have listened to this talk; whether in the interest of civil service reform the displacement of a man of the experience of Mr Sanborn, and his acknowledged fitness of the position, and the substitution for a gentleman, of course able, learned and abundantly competent, but who was counsel for a great railway interest whose rights and liabilities might perhaps come before the board, was advisable, we are not prepared to decide; but as the Concord Patriot, which may be regarded as an authority in such matters, says the reappointment of Mr. Sanborn was "nowhere expected," we must presume that the present action is all right.

The Patriot pays a high compliment to Mr. Mitchell's accomplishments. Indeed, that paper regards the appointment with high approbation. In fact, its delight is almost as enthusiastic as is its pleasure at the nomination of Col. Sinclair for the state senate. In short, Gov. Sawyer has not pleased the amiable editor of the Patriot so much since the Hazen veto.

The Yellow Fever.

At Jacksonville, Sept. 26th, 103 new cases were reported, thirty-one of them among the whites and seventy-two among the colored people; and seven deaths. Total cases to date, 2237, with 229 deaths. On the same day McClenny reported four new cases and one death, all of whites; twelve cases at Fernandina, and three at Ellaville; one death at Gainesville.

At Decatur, Ala., on the 26th, two new cases, but no deaths; much suffering, and money badly needed.

At West Point, Miss., the quarantine was continued, even mails being refused admission. A Decatur refugee died at Perkins Mill, twenty-five miles west of West Point, on the 26th, and another person was taken sick. At Meridian, Miss., the quarantine was partially relaxed.

There has been frost in many parts of Tennessee and Alabama, and the fever fears are subsiding.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

In the hearing on the application for an injunction to restrain the directors of the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad from aiding in the construction of the Lake Shore road, before Chief Justice Doe at Concord on Sept. 26th, the plaintiffs called as witnesses Hon. John W. Sanborn of Wakefield, superintendent of the northern division of the Boston & Maine railroad, S. S. Kimball and Hon. E. H. Rollins of Concord, C. A. Russell of Laconia and Hon. Samuel N. Bell of Manchester, directors of the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad, and J. Frank Webster of Concord, treasurer of the Lake Shore. Mr. Webster, who is also cashier of the Concord railroad, testified that, under the direction of Hon. B. A. Kimball, chairman of the executive committee of the Concord railroad, he had paid bills for work on the Lake Shore aggregating about $14,000 from the funds of the Concord railroad in his hands, with the understanding, however, that Mr. Kimball was personally responsible to him therefor. Defence called John T. Busiel of Laconia, who subscribed for ten shares of Lake Shore stock upon the understanding that the Boston, Concord & Montreal authorized the subscription for stock of that corporation. Documentary evidence was then presented to show that resolutions of stockholders of the Boston, Concord & Montreal, adopted at their annual meeting, authorizing the directors to subscribe for stock of the Lake Shore, were published in the newspapers at the time. This closed the evidence, and Hon. Harry Bingham of Littleton and Hon. Jeremiah Smith of Dover summed up for the defence. A recess was then taken until the 27th.

On the 27th Judge Doe announced his decision, declining to grant the injunction prayed for.

The year which closes on Sunday, the 30th inst., is reported to have been by far the most prosperous in the history of the Boston & Maine railroad. Not far from 30,000,000 passengers have been transported in the cars on this system during the year, and the passenger mileage will closely approach the enormous amount of 500,000,000 miles, while the earnings of the passenger department will fall not much short of $7,000,000.

New Hampshire Items.

The farm buildings of W. A. Chamberlain of Concord were burned on the night of Sept. 25th; loss $2000; insurance $1,200.

Russel & Shepardson's shoe box factory at Winchester was burned Sept. 26th; total loss, $2500; insurance on stock, $600.

Jacob Coan's farmhouse in Ashland was burned Sept. 26th; loss $1500; fully insured.

Mr. T. O. Reynolds of Kingston, N. H., who has been reported as having come out for Cleveland and Thurman, in denying the soft impeachment, says: "I am and ever have been a republican, casting my first vote for Abraham Lincoln in 1864, while I was in the army. I am a republican because I believe that party has redeemed its pledges to the people. I am a republican because I believe it has always been on the right side of all great and important national questions."

The Champion Bigamist.

James W. Brown of Detroit, Mich., was on Sept. 25th found guilty of bigamy, the jury taking only four minutes to consider. Mr. Brown has been a very enterprising scoundrel, having since 1883 married thirty-three women, fifteen of whom were in court to testify against him, though only five of them, with five clergymen, were called on for testimony. It was shown that Brown's method was to advertise for a housekeeper, select as a victim the one from among the applicants who pleased him most, and marry her as soon as possible. He would desert her after a few days.

The Priest Must Rule.

At Chicago, Ill., there is a ferment in the parish of St Adelbert's Polish Catholic church, Rev. Father John Radziejewski pastor. Six Catholic societies, numbering nearly seven hundred members have been excluded from the church because they have refused to accept resolutions sent to them by their priest, with the demand that they be adopted. These resolutions provide that each society shall be under the control of the archbishop and the management of the parish priest, and that when present the priest shall preside. The latter part of this is very obnoxious to the people, but not so much so as the second article, which provides that the parish priest and his assistants shall be present at all elections, and shall have the authority to reject all officers elected if deemed unsuitable by the priest. The final article gives the priest absolute power, by declaring that no change shall be made in the constitution or by-laws without his sanction. All the societies refused to adopt the articles, and have petitioned the archbishop for reinstatement in the church. If he refuses, some line of action will be decided upon.

The third district republican convention of Massachusetts, at its second session, nominated State Treasurer A. W. Beard for Congress on the twenty-fourth ballot, after Edward L. Pierce, of Milton had withdrawn. Ex-Senator H. Z. Boardman, Beard's principal competitor, was nominated for elector.

Warren Schell of Somerville, Ga., saw bear signs in a meadow a quarter of a mile from his house, and that afternoon cautiously visited the place armed with a Winchester rifle. He was rewarded by seeing two old bears feeding and two cubs playing about them. When he drew near the old he bear turned tail and ran, the cubs got on a rail fence, and the mother charged the hunter furiously. He put one bullet into her breast, but it did not stop her; the second made her turn, and a third killed her. A bullet apiece killed the cubs, one of which showed fight.

Contractors on a railway in course of construction in Canada ran off with $25,000, leaving 700 Italians destitute, and unpaid for six weeks. Rioting resulted, in which one Italian and four Hungarians were killed, and thirty or forty wounded. Troops were sent from Sherbrooke on the 24th inst. to the scene of the trouble.

London street rowdies put up small boys to throw themselves in the way of bicycles, and on being struck by the machines [illegible] howl and pretend to have been badly hurt. Then the rowdies crowd around in the role of indignant and sympathizing citizens, and the bicyclist is glad to pay the gamin roundly and get off with a whole skin. Afterward the rowdies and the gamin divide the proceeds.

Surgeon-General Hammond says the yellow fever was first carried to Jacksonville, Fla., from Tampa, by a lover, who broke into the quarantined camp at the latter place to see his sweetheart, and brought the yellow fever back with him to Jacksonville. Love makes a lot of trouble in this world.

The people of St. John, N. B., are calling upon the Dominion government for money to dredge their harbor, which it appears is too shallow for large vessels.

The senate has passed a bill granting a pension of $3,500 a year to the widow of General Sheridan.

The Roland Reed combination has cancelled its proposed southern trip on account of the yellow fever epidemic and scare. This change of programme may alter the plans of Mr. A. N. La Brie who was engaged to accompany this company.

Rosemary Cottage at Eliot, the summer home of the Little Wanderers of Boston, has closed for the season.

A large number of our citizens went to Rochester on Thursday, to attend the agricultural horse trot and fair. The morning train had an extra car for their accomodation.

Dover Democrat of Sept. 26th: "At the democratic convention for the 22d senatorial district, holden yesterday, one Charles A. Sinclair of Portsmouth was nominated."

It is announced that Joseph D. Roberts of Rollinsford, nominated for councillor from this district by the democratic convention in this city some time ago, and who it was reported declined the nomination, has sent a letter of acceptance to James Ryan of Dover, who was secretary of the convention.

Says the New York Sun: "Mr. James Langdon Curtis of this town accepts the American party nomination for president in a beautiful and politically economical letter of about 2,175 words, of which we quote six: 'All wealth comes from the soil.' How about codfish."

The republicans of Richmond, Va., found their fine campaign flag cut down and trampled in the mud of the street one morning about a week ago. They rescued it and hoisted it again, but last Sunday night it was cut down a second time.

"Did n't know 't was Loaded"

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reestablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, Sept. 27th; present the full board; Mayor Hodgdon in the chair:

Requests of Wm. H. Norton for leave to encumber Dennett street, and of Joshua Stackpole for leave to encumber Water street, for building purposes, were granted.

Petition of George A. Mudge for naphtha light on Little Harbor road, was referred to the committee on street lights.

Petitions of William Andrews for a brick sidewalk on Hill street, and of Ozro J. Hobbs and others for a brick sidewalk on Bridge street, were referred to the committee on streets, with power.

Bills to the amount of $3000 were ordered to be paid.

Adjourned for two weeks.

THE JAPANESE VILLAGE.

Franklin hall was crowded Thursday evening, the audience including many of the most refined and intelligent people in the city. This most interesting exhibition closes to-morrow night, and as the receptions are sure to be thronged Saturday afternoon and evening, to-day is the best time to attend. No one should miss seeing the Japanese Village.

RUNAWAYS.

A young man on horseback was thrown from the saddle on State street, opposite the post-office, Thursday morning of this week, by the stumbling of the horse, the animal rolling over him, and then getting up and running off up the street to near the Rockingham house, where he was stopped. The rider had his nose cut, received a number of scratches and bruises, and his clothes were somewhat demoralized, but no serious harm was sustained.

About noon on Thursday a horse attached to a phaeton, belonging to Mr. Dole Wadley, ran away from in front of his house on Islington street, down Congress street and into Market street, where the phaeton collided with the store team of Ordway Hall, which was being driven by a boy. Both vehicles were capsized, Hall's wagon having a shaft and several spokes of one wheel broken, while the [illegible] had the crossbar, whiffletree and [illegible] broken. Mr. Wadley continued up Market street [illegible] the railroad gates, where he left the track to the depot, where he was stopped.

About 6:45 o'clock Thursday evening a team belonging to Mr. Albert L. Pray of Newington road, and driven by a young lady, while entering the city collided on the north millbridge with a team going the other way, the young lady being thrown out, but fortunately escaping serious injury, and the dasher and whiffletree of her wagon being broken. The cause of the collision is alleged to have been the non-showing of the electric light near the bridge.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

Charles R. Parsons, a mail carrier on the route between Rochester and Barnstead Centre, was brought by the United States marshal before United States Commissioner Hackett on Thursday, charged with a violation of the United States statute which requires every route agent or other carrier of the mail to receive mail matter prepaid by stamps, and deliver the same for mailing at the next post-office at which he arrives. In the case against Parsons, it was shown that the letter received by him was carried by the post-office at South Barnstead, and mailed at the office at Barnstead Centre. The defendant concluded the [illegible] Frink for United States; Hodgdon for defendant.

DEMOCRATIC FLAG RAISING AT RYE.

The democrats of Rye had a flag raising on Wednesday evening of this week, when a very handsome flag was displayed at Rye Centre. This is the first campaign flag. There was a very good attendance of spectators, of both (or all) parties and both sexes; Spear's Brass band furnished good music, and the Cleveland & Thurman club of Rye, with about thirty-five torches, (quite a number of them carried by lads too young to vote,) and the Hampton club with about forty torches, made really a very pretty show in their bright uniforms; and a number of the houses at the Centre were handsomely illuminated. Of enthusiasm there was absolutely none; and when the captain of the Rye club, as the flag was hoisted, called for three cheers, the response was a burst of silence which could have been cut into slices, it was so dense, although three faint cheers were subsequently given.

It had been announced that Walter C. Harriman, Esq., (formerly city solicitor of Portsmouth and county solicitor of Rockingham county, by virtue of votes given him because he was the son of Gen. Walter Harriman,) a new recruit to the free trade party, and Mr. Little of Manchester, would address the people in the town hall after the flag raising, but they did not appear, and a gentleman faom Exeter spoke to the company, which nearly filled the hall. From first to last the affair was of the tamest description.

When Governor Hale then came out from the democracy, what seas of ink were expended by the democratic editors in their abuse of the departed patriot! How the Binghams and Georges delighted in their abuse of the "Butter General!" But now all is forgiven. The prodigals have returned to the fold.

THE LATE GALE.

The fierce but fortunately brief gale of Wednesday, the 26th inst., was not, as was generally supposed, the wind-up of the previous week's dull and rainy weather—a sort of grand finale. It had no connection with the previous drizzle, but was a new thing entirely, coming from the sea, and organizing its forces and moving along the coast with a rapidity which baffled the weather experts. Correspondents in seaports say that no warning was given of the approach of this storm, and correct forecasts of the weather for the next six months will not make the mariners forget this. Many vessels that had been anchored in the small harbors along the coast waiting for the previous long storm to spend its strength, started out on Tuesday, the 25th, and caught this storm right in the teeth.

Everywhere within the scope of the storm's centre, trees suffered greatly and fruit was blown to the ground in great quantities; shaky chimneys were tumbled down, loose slates and shingles wholly removed, and the total of damage is very great.

In Boston the wind blew almost at the rate of a mile a minute, and the water ran down the gutters in muddy, furious streams. The effect of the storm's work was most quickly and generally observed in the tattered campaign flags that swung across Washington street. The democratic banner suffered most, but the others looked frayed and limp. The Fisk and Brooks flag—prohibition, and should have been able to stand cold water—was found in the street, very dirty and much torn. Several minor accidents happened to vessels in the harbor, and steamers were delayed in leaving. At City Point, South Boston, ten or twelve cat boats went down at their moorings, and a few were driven on shore.

At Providence, R. I., the state fair at Narragansett park was all but drowned out. In the city, trees, fences, chimneys, unfinished buildings, over head wires and campaign flags all suffered. At the anchorage of the Rhode Island yacht club house at Pawtuxet, the steam yacht Stilo had her cabin washed off and the upper works stove, the damage being estimated at $1000; the sloops Alice A., Rowena and Donzelle were badly damaged; the sloop Undine struck a rock, filled and sunk; the sloop Ada dragged her moorings, but escaped serious damage; and a number of catboats and rowboats were injured or wholly destroyed.

At Gloucester, Mass., the gale was appalling, and business in the city was largely suspended during its height. Several fishing schooners were driven on shore, but were all hauled off without damage. At Coffin's beach, Annisquam, the two-masted schooner I. W. Hines, Sanders master, light, bound from Newburyport to a Maine port with a crew of four men and one passenger, was driven ashore high and dry, and her crew escaped without difficulty. At the same place, but much farther out to sea, the three-masted schooner Abbie P. Cranmer, 305 tons register, of Baltimore, coal laden and bound from Baltimore for this port, dragged ashore from an anchorage in Ipswich bay. When she was discovered, about noon, her crew of six men were lashed in the rigging, with one lady; the sea was making a clean breach over the vessel, staving her upper works to pieces and making a complete wreck of her. The crew of the Bay View life-saving station were notified, and on arriving at the scene of the disaster used up all their ammunition without getting a line to the vessel, she being too far out. A volunteer crew then got the Annisquam lifeboat to the spot, overland, and after [illegible] attempts all hands were safely [illegible] with herring, dragged ashore at the same place. Both crews were taken off by the life-saving crew. The bricker it was thought would come off, but the fisherman was badly damaged.

The three-masted schooner Lizzie J. Call, at anchor in Portsmouth lower harbor, dragged her anchors and was in danger of going ashore, but was assisted to a safe anchorage by the steamer Valora.

The schooner Valparaiso, of Deer Isle, while anchored off Jerry's Point, Newcastle, dragged her anchors, and her crew were taken off by the life-saving crew. After the gale it was found that her windlass was broken and that she was leaking some, but she continued her voyage on Thursday.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Samuel B. Childs of Brooklyn, N. Y., formerly of this city, is stopping at the Rockingham house, and looking up his old friends of the time when he was a clerk at the Portsmouth navy yard twenty-five years or more ago.

Mrs. W. H. Leary and daughter, Miss Mabel Leary, of Pleasant street, arrived home on Wednesday evening, Sept. 26th, after a three months vacation.

Miss Clara Merriam of Brooklyn, N. Y., who has for several weeks been visiting her sister, Mrs. George S. Heaton of Northwest street, started on her return home on Wednesday, the 26th inst.

Mr. John A. Peterson was on Thursday drawn as petit juror from ward four, to serve at the October term of the supreme court for Rockingham county, to convene in this city on Tuesday, Oct. 16th.

Pears' Soap secures a fine complexion.

The United States steamer Iris, lighthouse tender, arrived at this port from Portland on the afternoon of Thursday, Sept. 27th, and took a berth at one of the north end wharves.

At a largely attended meeting of the ward four democrats, held at the south end ward room last evening, a Cleveland and Thurman club was organized, over eighty voters enrolling themselves. Much enthusiasm and interest was shown, etc., etc.—Times, Sept. 26th.

There were thirteen persons in the room. Only this and nothing more. Democratic arithmetic is usually as reliable; but it is always safe to take off seventy-five per cent for shrinkage.—Penny Post, 27th.

Hon. Daniel Marcy has given twenty-five dollars toward the relief of the yellow fever sufferers at Jacksonville.

Says the Penny Post of Sept. 27th: "It is doubtful if there are any marching campaign organizations formed in this city, by either party, during the present political canvass. Pyrotechnics are well enough, perhaps, but votes are not made that way." We hope there will not be a single company of the kind formed. We always regarded them as a costly nuisance, and never had an idea that they influenced a single vote. If one party gets them up, the other must; but the money they cost could be much better expended in legitimate campaign expenses, such as the circulation of campaign literature and the getting home of absent voters.

It is understood that some of the democrats of ward three are urging the nomination of Hon. Frank Jones as a candidate for representative from the ward to the Great and General Court of New Hampshire. There can be hardly a doubt that Mr. Jones can secure the nomination if he wants it, and his candidacy would make the ward almost a certainty for the party.

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Ath-lo-pho-ros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 3, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

CHAUNCEY B. REDDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec 26, 1887.

I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence and having had its fangs fastened upon me for the past 30 years I speak whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA CHILTON.

INGALLS' MANDRAKE COMPOUND

Among the various organs of our system, none perform a more essential part than the Liver and Kidneys, and so many people are afflicted with diseases of these organs, causing the Blood to become impure, that it is our first duty to assist them in their work. This is done in a thorough manner by Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, which is purely Vegetable, and is worthy of a fair trial.

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

HE TOOK IT ALIVE.

Startling Remedy for Fever and Ague Prescribed by a North of Ireland Woman.

"Malaria?"

"Yes, malaria."

"No, sir. I'm no more afraid of malaria than I am of you," and as the speaker was at least ten inches taller than the reporter and proportionately broader, his fear of that dread malady was probably not excessive. "I've had malaria and I've been cured."

"Yes, but a man can have malaria more than once."

"Not if he is cured the way I was. About ten years ago I was living in Indiana, in Vigo county, near Terre Haute. In those days a man was regarded as a stranger until he had drank about a gallon of whisky and quinine and shaken down his bedstead three or four times with the ague. I had a rather reticent nature, and I suppose it took the climate longer to get acquainted with me than it did the ordinary run of men. For I had to drink about a barrel of whisky and take whole pounds of quinine before I could get strong enough to even shake myself, let alone a bed. Old citizens told me that I had the worst case of 'fever 'n ague,' as they called it, that the county had ever seen."

"How were you cured?"

"I was just coming to that. I was living with the Dennis family, from the north of Ireland. Mrs. Dennis used to tell me she could stop my chills if I only would take her medicine. She never would tell me what her medicine was, but always said if I would let her be the doctor she would cure me. Finally, one day, I agreed. She waited till evening. Then she brought to my bed a towel.

"'Bind that around your head so you can't see,' said she.

"'What's that for?' said I.

"'Who's the doctor, you or me?' said she.

"So I bound the rag about my head.

"'Now,' said she, 'take this glass of water in your right hand, open your mouth, take your dose and a drink of water the second it is in your mouth. Be sure and swallow what I give you.'

"I promised, but there was something so ominous about her preparations that it was with no little apprehension that I opened my mouth, held my breath and braced up to take my punishment."

"Did it taste bad?"

"It didn't have any taste at all. It felt like a little ball of dust such as you find in the corner of the carpet. I washed it down several seconds quicker than instantly, you may be sure. Just as it was going down I felt a sharp pain in my throat as if it had scratched.

"'Is it down?' asked Mrs. Dennis.

"'Yes,' I said.

"'All down?'

"'Yes, now tell me what I've taken.'

"'I'll tell you to-morrow, and then you'll have no more shakes.'

"I slept soundly that night, but when I woke up in the morning my throat was swollen and very painful. About 10 o'clock Mrs. Dennis came to my room. She had a little pasteboard box in her hand.

"'There,' said she, 'look in there and see what it is.'

"I looked. Then I felt the blood leave my heart. I turned cold and fainted. When I recovered Mrs. Dennis was standing by my side.

"'Did I take one of those?' I asked.

"'You took the mate of that one.'

"That was years ago, and I never had a chill after that day. My throat got well in time and so did I. I was effectually cured, but I wouldn't take another dose of that medicine to save my life."

"What was it you swallowed?" asked the reporter.

"It was a big, hairy black spider, and it was alive."—New York Mail and Express.

Brown Bread and Mind Cure.

The beneficial effect of the mind cure process is shown by the experience of a young man who had been "bucking the tiger" in Portland, Me., and had met with the usual run of bad luck. He started in with over $100, and at the close of his sitting he had but twenty-five cents remaining. This sum was not enough for a stake, and so the unfortunate player left the den in search of some other turn of luck. Not far from the gaming house he met an acquaintance who complained of a very troublesome disorder in his nervous system, and asked advice on the subject. The gamester thought it over, and finally made an agreement to meet his friend later, after which he departed in search of food. Baked beans and brown bread made up his fare. While eating he mechanically rolled some of the bread into a ball, then an idea flashed upon him. He proceeded to roll the bread into good sized pills, until he had made thirty-six of them, all of which he took to his suffering friend, and after giving directions regarding their use, received $3 for the three dozen. With this money he sped to the gambling table, and in a short time won $150. A few weeks afterward he met his friend and received his blessing for effecting so speedy a cure of his trouble.—Boston Globe.

The Otter as a Fisher.

Otters will frequently help themselves to trout, which they catch with some dexterity under the rock shelves, and invariably bring out of the water to some favorite spot where they can be eaten at leisure. A Scotch story tells of a shepherd's wife who used day by day to visit a certain favorite position of this kind where the otter was wont to land with its prey, take a bite of its shoulder, and leave the rest. These relics the old wife gathered morning by morning, feeding herself and household from an excellent and never failing supply. One day the laird shot the otter, "puir beastie," and much did she lament the loss of her fishmonger.—Fur Trade Review.

A Tidal Water Wheel.

The water wheel that runs the works of the Sagadahoc Fertilizer company, at Bowdoinham, Me., is probably the only one of its kind in existence. It is twenty-seven feet in diameter, with a foot of its rim out of water at high tide. The spokes are wide, and set diagonally, like the vanes of a windmill. It turns eighteen hours of the day by tide power, running one way with the flow, the other with the ebb. With one footfall of the tide this wheel gives about fifty horse power. It has been in use since 1861.—Industrial Journal.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Eat With Comfort and Be Happy.

It is by no means uncertain, but on the contrary, a well ascertained fact, that upon the well being of man's stomach depends that modicum of happiness which is vouchsafed to him in this world. Dyspepsia, the foe of all others to the stomach's tranquility, and most to be dreaded, is a complaint to the preliminary relief and eventual cure of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is specially adapted. It enables those who use it with a reasonable degree of persistence to eat with relish, because it imparts a healthful appetite; to digest with ease, because it strengthens the stomach; and to assimilate the food which is eaten and digested, thus benefitting health, promoting flesh and sustaining the exercise of the physical and mental faculties. It, moreover, facilities the secretion of healthy bile, actuates without discomfort the habit of body, and tends, when taken upon retiring, to produce healthy slumber. Malaria is conquered by it.

Congress have deliberately, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

When symptoms of malaria appear, in any form, take Ayer's Ague Cure. It will prevent a development of the germs of disease, and eradicate them from the system. A cure is warranted in every instance.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Wise Patron of The La. S. Lottery.

A worthy Chicagoan is Mr. Peter Klein, doing business at No. 93 E. Kinsey St. He is a benevolent, frank and social friend—like all old-time "Fatherlanders" he will invest a spare dollar in a lottery and on a former occasion secured an $8,000 prize in The Louisiana State Lottery in association with his brother-in-law. Of his latest good luck, he was the possessor of a fractional ticket No. 8,864 which drew $30,000 in the drawing, Aug. 7th; he collected the amount, $15,000, through the Express company. His present business place is a wooden-frame building for vending refreshments, cigars, etc. He will erect, on the lot which he owns, a modern brick block.—Chicago (Ills.) Occident, Aug. 24th.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughta's a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

ADAMSON'S BOTANIC COUGH BALSAM

More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

TOO BIG A HURRY.

Advice to City People—The Craze for Rapid Transit.

Rapid transit! So that is what you want? Well, you don't want anything of the kind, taking want to mean need, as properly it does. What you mean to say is that you desire rapid transit. Very well; you are a very foolish person; that's all. You desire rapid transit as children desire things not good for them. Why do you pine for rapid transit? What are you in a hurry about? To get to business? Then start ten minutes earlier and take your time; you will do your work better and more easily if you take it up with unshaken nerves. To get home? Home will be "there" at 5:35 p. m. just as surely as at 5:25; "the kids"—children, if you are too proper a person to accept the classic slang—and their mother had rather see you come home in a placid than in a ruffled state of mind. What are you in a hurry about, anyhow?

For every beating pulse we tell
Leaves but the number less.

So sung a very pious and truthful versifier of the last century. Why do you desire to double the number of pulse beats by the uncomfortable excitement of "rapid transit?" "The numberless" is accomplished rapidly enough by the slowest process. "Soon shalt thou forget all things; soon by all things shalt thou be forgotten," said Marcus Aurelius some 2,000 years ago. Why do you desire to quicken the trot of the procession toward the inevitable chasm of oblivion?

What you need—no matter what you desire—is comfortable transit. Transit that jars no nerve by rumbling cable, jolting spring, clatter of hoof on stony pavement, direful groan of laboring engine, more direful shriek of steam whistle or most direful jangle of brass bells out of tune. You don't want to be packed in a surface traveling car of any sort; you don't want your nerves to quiver with apprehension for the fate of the reckless newsboy—too often newschild—who exposes himself to more danger while "hopping cars" for an hour than many a battle field disclosed in a day. And you don't want to be hoisted into an enlarged edition of a cash and parcels basket, and whirled by steam or electricity at an elevation too high for safety, too low for comfort. High enough to insure disaster in case of accident, low enough to catch the smoke of household chimneys, and the odors of household cooking. Still less do you want to be shot through the bowels of the earth by atmospheric or other force. As has been said, you will explore the subterranean regions soon enough. "Jam te premet nox, fabulaque manes," said Horace. They were too wise to hanker after underground railways in his day.

But the more comfortable transit, how are you going to get that? Easily, if you have a talented pair of legs; otherwise, with difficulty or not at all. And even the most gifted legs will suffer disquiet at the bridges and crossings of the most crowded streets. Comfortable transit is as yet afar off from you. Your grandfather had it; your uncle who lives in the country has it. But your grandfather was never in a hurry, and your uncle never is. Therefore your grandfather's nerves were and your uncle's are as of steel. The fierce jolt and hideous rumble of the thimble skein farm wagon are and were to them luxurious and musical. You have hurried your nerves into a jumble of sensitive mucus. For you comfort means quiet. It will be so—"only more so"—with your unfortunate children. Science and humanity will provide for them; they can hardly be expected to help you, who are the original sinful hurrier. The coming man may cease from being in a hurry, or humanity may decree that every other street be reserved for passenger traffic and foot travel only; or some large and strong tamable birds, graceful as the swans of Leda, may be discovered, upon whose backs, or drawn by whom in aerial cars, the tired and nervous may be borne quietly, and quickly, too, to and from business; or balloons may convey people at salubrious heights through the calm of air, or chloroform may be administered to each street car passenger by the conductor in such quantities as to render him or her oblivious to the perils and discomforts of travel. This latter experiment might well be essayed under the existing condition of street transit, which is neither comfortable nor rapid.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Farms of New Brunswick.

In extended travels over the New Brunswick and Intercolonial railways one has practical opportunity for observation of country and study of those who are sustained by it, and any one with half a disposition to fairness must admit that our own country cannot anywhere show finer farms or more bright and prosperous villages. The manner, motive, conversation and characteristics of native passengers traveling between interior settlements and towns tell as much as statistics. The face of this fine province, as a whole, is filled with interesting pictures of thrift, amplitude, content. Englishmen, Scotchmen and Irishmen seem to have assimilated and merged into another race, retaining the best qualities of each. The farming population as a class average as well as, or better than, our own in point of intelligence and a certain admirable quality of not unpleasant assertiveness and self reliance, and in many sections, like the central, western, southern and southeastern valleys, the beauty of villages, shaded highways and outlying farms cannot be surpassed in the states or in any part of garden like England.—Edgar L. Wakeman's Letter.

Don't Write "Cold Slaw."

Noticing a recipe for "Kauldslaugh," it occurred to me that I might enlighten readers as to the meaning and original spelling of that word. It is composed of two Dutch (Holland) words and signifies a salad made of cabbage; kool (pronounced cole) means cabbage; sla (pronounced slaw) means a salad, and the proper name in Dutch is "koolsla." It is simply prepared; the cabbage is shaved fine, seasoned with pepper and salt and then with a little vinegar is heated in a pan until the cabbage is wilted. I have seen it written in recipe books as "Cold Slaw," the word cold being used as the opposite of hot, and in that sense must have been taken from the sound and not the meaning of the word.—Cor. Good Housekeeping.

A Doctor's View of Rabies.

The writer asked Dr. Watts how it was he avoided getting bitten by a rabid dog now and then.

"I can't avoid it," he replied, simply. "Look at my hands; you can see for yourself they are covered with scars, many of which have been inflicted by what people call 'mad dogs.'"

"But if so, why have you not had hydrophobia?"

"Because there is no such disease," said the doctor. "What you call hydrophobia or madness in dogs is merely a sort of fits, brought on by worms, constipation, overheating, or various other causes. Highbred animals, being of a more nervous temperament, are more likely to run crazy with it in summer than ordinary curs. Under such conditions the poor brute loses its head and tears about, snapping at whatever comes in its way. It will never chase you, as is vulgarly supposed, but will keep right on blindly, without seeing or knowing where it is going, until stopped with a bullet or club. If it bites any one, that person is likely to die from a complaint propagated through the imagination — by causes not at all understood—the most important symptoms of which are convulsions and an abhorrence of water. Now it is quite certain that many have died of a trouble apparently identical, who never were bitten at all; while I, who have been fairly lacerated a hundred times by mad dogs, am as well as possible. This I attribute simply to the fact that I have never permitted myself to be frightened by trifles of the kind. Statistics show that, since Pasteur's alleged discoveries, more French people have succumbed to hydrophobia than ever before in the same length of time. I have no doubt that his operations are responsible for the increased death rate. Every scared person that comes to him who is not subsequently taken with fits he counts as a cure, while the few resulting cadavers are not thought worthy of scientific consideration. As an example take the case of the children who were sent across the water some time ago for treatment by means of a subscription gotten up for their benefit. One of the boys subsequently died of hydrophobia, but the dog that bit them is still alive and kicking."—Boston Cor. Chicago Tribune.

A Peep at Castle Garden.

During my visit to Castle Garden Mrs. Boyle took me to the different departments of the institution. In the store rooms the trunks, parcels, bedding and other baggage of the immigrants were stowed away in neat piles, and were so arranged that the persons in charge could with little trouble put a hand on anything required. In one corner there was a miscellaneous collection of bundles, large and small—the unclaimed belongings of numerous steerage passengers. They are kept for months, perhaps years, in the hope that they will some time be called for. Within Castle Garden there is a restaurant, or rather eating place, where bread and sausages, milk, beer and other edibles are to be had at stipulated prices. A huge slice of German bread, with about one-quarter of a yard of sausage, costs ten cents, a cup of milk five cents, and so on. The staple article is bread, and a woman, with a family of little children buys a loaf and goes off to a corner to give them each their portion.

There were some buxom looking women, and an occasional one with a pretty face, picturesquely dressed in the costume of her country, but usually the countenances were thin and often haggard. In one of the outside buildings a half dozen or more women were waiting patiently the arrival of their friends. Their names were to be found on cards in the hands of an officer in authority, and it was here they were to receive sister, aunt or brother, as the case might be, who was to introduce them to their new world and life. A few steps away from this apartment was the temporary hospital, where Matron Elisser had charge. A half dozen beds were in the room, and adjoining was a comfortable dining room, where the invalids were served with food and drink suitable to their state of health.—Florence C. Ives in New York Press.

Cholera's Career in Sicily.

The British consul at Palermo, in his last report, observes that business during last year suffered greatly from an epidemic of cholera in Sicily, the mortality being very great in most of the towns. The population of Palermo lived for some months in a state of "savage panic." The effects were heightened by the ignorance and superstitious character of the people generally. In the poorer quarters it was believed, as in the Middle Ages, that the government and the richer classes were disseminators of the cholera poison, in order to exterminate the poorer population. Sisters of Charity were stoned in their visits to the houses of choleraic patients, and even doctors were sometimes obliged to visit the sick under military escort. A man with a decent coat on his back always walked in danger of being assaulted, since it was believed that all were agents in a conspiracy for the extirpation of the poor. In interior towns tragic scenes ensued in consequence of this superstition.

"The popular mind in Sicily seems inaccessible to any idea of the virtue of clean water and soap," and sanitation has been so completely neglected that it may be doubted whether cholera has not became endemic. For a time Messina became a veritable desert; many of the chief medical men fled, as well as numerous apothecaries; every house was closed and food was most difficult to procure, and what was obtainable was of the very worst quality. The mortality was almost entirely confined to the humbler classes, all who could leave the city having fled.—Scientific American.

The Pleasure of Eating.

There is no rational ground for the common notion that the pleasure of eating depends mainly upon what is eaten; it depends upon the eater, the vigor of digestion and the condition of the nerves. If all these are sound and true, the precise kinds of food and drink are matters of little consequence. But—and this is a very, very large but—if you will keep them sound and true they must not be abused by overwork, or by having work forced upon them for which they were never intended.—"The Man in the Moon" in Good Housekeeping.

The Lake Shore Controversy.

Another round in the wrestling match of Pearson, champion of the Concord road, against Jones of the Boston & Maine, has been fought, and Umpire Doe decides that Pearson may wear the belt until the next call of time. The chief justice designates the suit wherein Col. Sinclair attempted to have the directors of the Boston, Concord & Montreal railroad restrained from doing what they were neither doing or intending to do, as illusory. Of course it was. Everyone knew that. The fact came out that the payment of funds for building the Lake Shore came from the overflowing treasury of the Concord railroad, which of course seeks to hedge the Lake Shore to prevent traffic from leaving the B., C. & M. R. R., at the point where on New Year's day it is to connect with the new line, and being sent to Portsmouth and Boston via Dover and the Boston & Maine, instead of down the valley of the Merrimac. As far as proving the source of supply, perhaps the complainants in the suit achieved a result. This may have been what lawyers sometimes designate as a "fishing expedition," a groping after evidence attainable more easily by this than by other process. At all events, the parties nor their counsel could not have expected the court to enjoin the B., C. & M. R. R. from paying out what they had not, and from doing what they could not possibly do. As Mr. Jones is a large holder of stock in the Concord road, perhaps he may deem it proper to ask the court in some future state of the controversy to restrain the cashier of the Concord railroad from paying out large sums to individuals upon an "understanding that it would be all right," etc. Of course no one pretends that the controversy is anything but an attempt on the part of the Concord railroad to control the piece of road from the Weirs, or wherever it starts, to Alton Bay. That the public would be better served if this road was operated by the Boston & Maine road, which should have built it long ago, there is, of course, no question. The learned chief justice says that the plaintiffs have been guilty of laches. In other words, with a knowledge of the right of the B., C. & M., by legislative enactment, to aid in building the new road, they should have earlier stirred in the matter, before acts were done which would make an injunction now inequitable. Of course there is no answer to this legal proposition. It is "the early bird that catches the worm." If one railway seeks to enjoin another, the managers should rise early enough to take the first train, if they do not expect to be badly left. However, it may be found that in the hearing the opponents of the Concord road have learned a point or two. To the non-professional eye it would seem that the only apparent benefit of the battle would be the spoils of war gathered by the eminent legal contestants, who went through the farce as if in all seriousness it might be expected that an injunction would issue.

Notes of the Storm.

The schooner Eddie Pierce, Capt. Angus Holmes, bound from Eastport, Me., for New York, with a cargo of sardines valued at $20,000, took the gale of Sept. 26th about fourteen miles northeast of Cape Cod, and in a short time had her sails blown away and became unmanageable, the cargo shifting and throwing the schooner on her beam ends. The captain was washed overboard and drowned, but the rest of the crew, four in number, took to the rigging, and between four and five o'clock in the afternoon were rescued by a boat from the British steamship Bavarian, from Liverpool, and taken into Boston.

Late in the afternoon of the 26th it was reported in Portland, Me., by telephone from Cape Elizabeth life saving station that a vessel was observed in a sinking condition about eight miles off that point, near Cod ledge. Only one mast of the vessel was left standing, and on that a number of men were seen. The name and rig of the vessel could not be made out, but she was of large size and apparently could not float much longer. The crew of the life-saving station had started at once for the scene. Leaving the life saving crew the tug boat proceeded, taking them and their boat on board. The waves were very high, and broke over the smoke stack. After cruising about three hours the tug returned, having been able to discover no trace whatever of any wreck.

The schooner Sarah Louise, of Boston, was seen drifting southward on the afternoon of Sept. 26th, off Cape Elizabeth, Me. Word was sent to the life saving station, and in the driving storm and sea the crew pulled off to the rescue. By the aid of glasses what appeared to be persons were seen clinging to the rigging. The life-saving boat, however, found the vessel deserted and her boats gone, indicating the method of escape adopted by her crew. The schooner was loaded with lumber; the seas were breaking high over her with great fury. What appeared to be men at a distance turned out to be her lantern boxes and a number of blocks in the rigging. The mainmast was broken short off at the deck, and the bowsprit and fore rigging gone.

Capt. Lawler, of the Boston pilot boat Hesper, on Sept. 26th picked up the crew, four in number, of schooner Hattie L. Curtis, from Bangor for Boston, with a cargo of lumber. In the heavy gale of that date the schooner sprang a leak, and became unmanageable. The crew, with the exception of Luke Borden, the steward, abandoned the vessel, as she was fast going to pieces. The crew took to a raft made from the deck load of lumber. The steward, who refused to leave the wreck, was lost.

The schooner Mary Louise, wrecked off Cape Elizabeth on the 26th, was towed into Portland on Thursday, the 27th. No tidings of the crew. The captain had his wife and children on board when she sailed from the Kennebec on the morning of the 26th. The davit-tackles falls were cut.

The wage-earners of the state of Massachusetts have been able to save out of their earnings, and deposit in savings banks, for use on rainy days, more money than have all the wage-earners in Great Britain and Ireland together. They have done this, too, under protection. This is the American protective idea in a nutshell, and is of more practical value as an argument in political economy than all the theories in the world. Give it to the first revenue reformer who wants to argue his case with you. He can't get over it if he talks all day, and you need to add nothing to it, unless you say that General Harrison not only represents this brand of protection, but that he also represents the best mind, manner and manhood of American life.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

[illegible] Commonwealth, published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston. "Indiana" is by J. P. Dunn, Jr., author of "Massacres of the Mountains;" the book is a 16mo, gilt top, and contains a map of the state. For sale by M. Goodrich; price $1.25. Mr. Dunn is a resident of Indiana, and thoroughly familiar with its history. By adequate knowledge and literary skill he is peculiarly competent to treat the subject broadly and in accordance with the scope of the series, which has been well stated by a competent critic: "The books are not mere state histories; they are something much more and very much better than that. They are attempts to embody what is most distinct and peculiar in the political life and history of each state, and to show how that has contributed to the development of the whole. The widespread interest awakened in the past of our nation will find much to satisfy it in these volumes, for the design is original and the execution excellent." Mr. Dunn's book possesses a special interest from the fact that it is the only record of the official and political life of William Henry Harrison while he was governor of Indiana territory, and gives for the first time the details of the struggle over the question of slavery in that commonwealth.

A despatch from Brockwayville, Pa., says: "As Forepaugh's show was unloading at Dubois on Tuesday, Sept. 28th, John Poggy, an elephant trainer, of Salem, N. J., was attacked by the elephant "Tip" and killed. Poggy was trying to get the beast out of the car, but it had been angered by men and boys teasing it and feeding it apples which contained tobacco and pepper. It struck [illegible] and trampled on him. The other elephants grew angry and tore up another cage and struck two other men, but they were not severely injured.

Pearline
Washing Compound

Invented by James Pyle, New York, 1876,
Introduced to the Public, 1877.

An article to take the place of soap. One which makes clothing, paint, woodwork, in fact anything perfectly clean, with less rubbing, and in less time than anything yet discovered, and which is withal absolutely harmless. Above is a diagram of the comparative growth of sales during the last ten years—mark the yearly increase and especially that of 1888, which represents only the first six months of the year. To-day PEARLINE is used in over one million families, from Maine to California. This wonderful growth in the face of many imitations, which are damaging to clothing and paint, and make people regard an honest article with suspicion, is marvelous and can be due alone to merit.

A fair trial, which will cost but a few pennies, will make a convert of the most skeptical. See that you get the genuine article, which alone will give satisfaction. Every package bears the name of "JAMES PYLE, New York."

DIED OF THE FEVER.

A despatch was received in this city on Friday evening from Jacksonville, Fla., addressed to Mrs. Joseph Hellen, announcing the death in Jacksonville on Tuesday, Sept. 25th, of her husband, from yellow fever. Mrs. Hellen, who is a daughter of Mr. James C. Crosby of Gates street, has with her infant child and its nurse been passing the summer on a visit to her father.

THE JAPANESE VILLAGE.

This interesting exhibition at Franklin hall closes to-day, and to enable all to see it, there will be three receptions—from 10:00 to 12:00 A. M., 1:00 to 5:00 and 7:00 to 10:00 P. M. For the forenoon performance (which is exactly like those of the afternoon and evening) the price of admission is only five cents. Every person attending this evening, will receive a souvenir of Japanese work.

At the afternoon reception the diamond ring offered as a prize to the one who should make the largest number of words from the letters composing the words Japanese Village, will be presentedt o the winner. Over 200 competitors have sent lists of words to Mr. Rufus Somerby, the manager.

Franklin hall was packed with visitors Friday afternoon and evening, and will be again to-day. The sales of Japanese trinkets were very large.

To-day's chance is the last one to see this unique exhibition.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Cocheco Manufacturing company, held in Dover on Thursday, Sept. 27th, it was reported that during the past year 38,170,115 yards of cloth were made, 26,797,159 yards printed at the Print Works, and 27,698,926 yards sold. The following officers were elected: President, T. Jefferson Coolidge; directors, T. Jefferson Coolidge of Boston, John McDuffee of Rochester, Howard Stockton of Boston, Charles W. Amory of Brookline, George P. Gardner of Boston, Amory A. Lawrence of Boston and Thomas S. Edmands of Newton; treasurer, Thomas S. Edmands; clerk, John Holland. The annual dinner was served at the American house.

THE FIREMEN'S RIOT IN '49.

The Portsmouth correspondent of a Boston paper writes an account of an audacious hoax played by some young fellows in this city nearly forty years ago, and which created a great stir here at that time. After a brief introductory dissertation regarding the volunteer fire departments of former days, and their numberless conflicts, he says:

Remembering all this, it will be possible to conceive some idea of the intense excitement that was aroused in Boston early in June, 1849, by the publication in the Daily Mail, the sensational Boston paper of that day, of a letter from this city giving all the details of a bloody and long-continued firemen's riot here. This startling story was of course honored by the Daily Mail with a "scare head." But newspaper management has changed since that day, as well as fire department discipline, and the Daily Mail's "scare head" occupied only about two inches—less than a country paper now gives to the report of a base ball game when the home club beats the visitors from the next town. The facts regarding this sanguinary conflict, which was undoubtedly the most bloody and desperate affair which ever did not take place in this city, were as follows:

At that time the Portsmouth fire department was, of course, a volunteer one, and was composed of young men who, by serving as firemen, were exempt from service in the militia, though most of them did duty in both capacities, as firemen and soldiers. One of the companies, Franklin No. 6, was composed of young men who often "broke her down" with claw hammer coats and white vests (real beaver hats they wore, too) on, and sometimes even with white gloves; the other companies called them "the dandies," which name they gloried in, and with all the intense rivalry between the several companies, the high-toned "dandies" were never found wanting when duty called.

One afternoon about June 1st, '49, a few choice members of No. 6 company were assembled in an office on the Parade, thirsting for excitement and glory, and talking over their previous exploits. As there had been no alarm of fire for some time, it was decided to wake up the old town, which had been asleep since the burning of the old stage coach on the Parade long ago, as narrated by Tom Aldrich in his story of "A Bad Boy." Having decided to wake up the town, they were not long in revolving upon the modus operandi, and their plan was immediately put into operation. It was startlingly effective.

The following day a lot of the old boys—young men then, remember, now the fathers of the city—gathered at the Athenæum, as was their wont then, about the time that Newman (who is still in the flesh, but for many years past engaged in other business) came down Congress street with the afternoon papers from Boston. There were Capitals B— and E— and G—, the latter since governor of the state, and Messrs. —J— and S— and T—, all of whom afterward occupied high stations in the gift of their fellow citizens, and a host of others, then and afterward prominent in the town and state affairs. Suddenly came down the parade the ringing cry of Newman:

"Here's the Da-a-ily Mail! All about the great firemen's riot in Portsmouth!"

"What's that? What's that you're hollerin', Newman?" shouted the excited habitues of the Atheneum, crowding out the door.

"It's a d—d lie," roared one of the old Atheneum sea-dogs, savagely jealous of the honor of his native town.

"It's all true," retorted Newman; "if you don't believe it, buy the Mail and satisfy yourself."

All Newman's papers were sold that afternoon with a rush, and the office had taken care to send him a large number extra.

In the paper appeared a letter from our staid old town, signed with the name of one of the best known and highly respected citizens, giving all the harrowing details of a terrible riot; relating how, on the previous day, a fire started on Court street, in going to which companies No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 became engaged in a desperate and vindictive fight, in which several of their members were killed outright and between twenty and thirty wounded, many of them fatally; how the police, in attempting to quell the riot, were repulsed, and three of them—all married men and worthy citizens—ruthlessly slain, while others were maimed for life; and how, as a last resort, the authorities not being able to rely on the militia, so many of the militiamen being also members of the rioting fire companies, the selectmen swore in the members of Franklin Engine Company, No. 6—most estimable and worthy young gentlemen of unimpeachable habits and reputation—who immediately charged most gallantly upon the rioters, put to flight or captured them all, and also stopped what threatened to be a disastrous conflagation.

The account closed with a genuine spread-eagle panegyric of "the dandies;" but this was not just the kind of remark made about those enterprising young gentlemen by the people of the town, who at once jumped to the conclusion that in the ranks of No. 6 company could be found the authors of the audacious hoax. The town was in an uproar, and the Parade was packed with excited citizens demanding that the reckless scamps who had so damaged the town's fair name should be hunted down and condignly punished. The selectmen met in solemn conclave that evening in their office in the Treadwell building, and decided to send one of their number to Boston on the early train next morning (there was no telegraph then, it must be remembered, and only three railroad trains a day between Boston and Portsmouth) to ferret out, if possible, the name of the author of the hideous scandal. Of course their session was secret, but the boys of those days were wide-awake, and just at that time the boys of Franklin Engine Company No. 6 regarded it as advisable for them to be particularly so.

The early train to Boston next morning carried one of the selectmen, filled with the resolve to clear the fair name of the town. On the engine which drew the train was also a young man of the town—engineers in those days were allowed to take a friend into the cab whenever they chose, and for any distance—who had taken a sudden interest in the running of locomotives, and induced the engineer to let him make the trip to Boston on the machine. On the arrival of the train in Boston the young man who had ridden on the engine disappeared in the most quiet manner, modestly omitting to make his presence known to any of the passengers from this town, and when an hour or so later, the worthy selectman arrived in the sanctum of the Daily Mail's editor, and in his official capacity demanded the name of the author of the account of the firemen's riot, and the letter giving the account, he was politely informed that a young gentleman from Portsmouth had but a few moments before called, and in the name of the selectmen of the town, demanded the letter, which had been unhesitatingly handed to him, the impudent young scamp having actually had the assurance to introduce himself under the name of the staid and respectable chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

The authors of the hoax were never discovered—by the general public. Most of them have since passed on, but many of them before leaving this life were elevated to high office in the city, state or national affairs, and a number of them are still living and deservedly classed among our best and most honored citizens. As their grandchildren read this account of the terrible riot of '49, they probably wonder aloud in answer to the young people's inquiries, who could have been so wicked about forty years ago; inside they will wonder who it is that so well remembers circumstances connected with the hoax never till now made public. Probably few of the present generation ever heard of the affair which made so great a stir in June, 1849.

Pears' Soap secures a fine complexion.

Capt. Wm. Robinson, of the steamer Oceanic—during the summer season—this week left for Atlantic City, N. J., to take charge of the Appledore house at that place for the winter.

It is rumored that a very important element in the democratic party of this senatorial district is displeased with the nomination of Mr. Conn, on account of his prominence in the Knownothing party at the time that party was in existence.

The officers of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. C. A. Wendell; vice presidents, Mrs. McGinley, Mrs. Meloon, Mrs. Silas Philbrick, Mrs. Jos. White, Mrs. Edward Clark, Mrs. Green; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lizzie H. Perkins; recording secretary, Miss Lizzie Tripp; treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Spinney.

The United States Car Fire & Light Extinguisher Co. has been organized at Kittery, with a capital stock of $500,000; paid in, $150; par value of shares, $50. President, David M. Weston, Boston; treasurer, Addison Boyden, Boston. The business to be prosecuted is manufacturing car-fire and car-light extinguishers. Certificate filed, September 25th.

Charles H. Chase of Hampton Falls, before reported killed on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad on Sept. 19th, lost his life by a collision, the passenger train which he was running as engineer crashing into the rear of a freight train, owing to a telegraph operator failing to deliver a message. His body was brought to Hampton Falls on the 22d, and funeral services took place there on the 23d, after which the remains were taken to Everett, Mass., for interment.

From the Times of Sept. 28th: "A single cask of lime could not be purchased in this city yesterday, a thing that has not been known to have ever occurred in this city. The building and repairing going on has opened a brisk market lately for bricks, lime, cement and lumber."

The coal schooner Abbie P. Cranmer, of Baltimore, bound from that port to Portsmouth with coal, and totally wrecked on Annisquam beach in the gale of Sept. 26th, was consigned to E. F. Sise & Co. of this city.

The death is announced of Rev. Elihu Scott, a retired Methodist minister of Hampton. He was born at Greensboro, Vt., Dec. 11th, 1805, and joined the New England Conference in 1825. During his career as a Methodist minister he has been settled in various towns in Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts, his last settlement being at Hampton, where he closed his services in 1874. He has been presiding elder of the Concord and Dover districts; several times delegate to the general conference, and for more than twenty-five years treasurer of the "Conference Trustees." He was an able preacher.

The republicans of Dover had an enthusiastic rally on the evening of Sept. 27th: the city hall was packed, and hundreds unable to get in. Rev. James Thurston, one of the Harrison veterans of 1840, presided, and twenty-five others who voted for William H. Harrison and will help elect his grandson to the presidency, were vice presidents. Gen. Green B. Raum was the speaker of the evening, and devoted himself almost wholly to the tariff issue, holding the vast audience until past ten o'clock.

In the Newmarket senatorial district the republicans have a candidate who will receive their hearty support. Mr. Daniel Lynch of South Newmarket is a man too well known to need words of commendation from any source. His tower of strength is his standing at home. His point of ability is the peer of any man who has ever represented the district. Realizing the situation the democrats have nominated Col. Charles A. Sinclair, of Portsmouth, in this district, but with united and hard work the republican candidate can be elected.—Exeter News-Letter.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Mr. P. B. Coggswell, for many years editor of the Concord Monitor, has recently led to the altar Miss Pillsbury, daughter of the late Parker Pillsbury. Miss Pillsbury that was, Mrs. Coggswell that is, is an accomplished lady, with many personal attractions which will gladden the heart of Brainard. We wish the couple much happiness. Mr. Coggswell has not rushed into the matrimonial state with the impulsiveness of youthful indiscretion; he has taken time to act with due deliberation, and the result we trust will be happy. A large number of journalists and printers made a congratulatory call upon the newly married couple this week. John M. Hill, a former proprietor of the Patriot, made an address, and a pleasant time was enjoyed. Mr. Coggswell has long been identified with successful journalism at Concord. His new life will be hailed with pleasant anticipations by friends all over the state.

Thomas Lynch, a tramp aged thirty years, who while drunk was breaking down the door of a house in Greenfield, Mass., in which there were only women, Sept. 26th, had his skull broken by a stone thrown at him by Michael Dorsey, aged seventy.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER. Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

The Toilet in Confederate Days.

With the adjuncts of the female toilet the blockade made sad havoc. Silken stockings became undreamed of luxuries; and their accompanying articles of apparel, which, when first donned by a bride, must always be composed of fell far short of easy silk elastic, being made of knit yarn or cotton. Stockings of wool or cotton were the best that the most luxurious might aspire to. Shoe strings were made in quantities by the children on little bobbins, or by plaiting or twisting threads together. Ladies' button boots were things almost unknown. Shoes were sometimes made of the pliant leather found in the flaps of disused cartridge boxes and of the discarded belts of the soldiers. Oftener they were fashioned of cloth cut on the pattern of old shoes and sewed to leathern soles. Crinoline and corsets were constructed of hickory splints in lieu of whalebone and steel springs; and the prepared bark of certain kinds of trees or certain plants furnished the ladies with a supply of braids and switches. Then as now, however, the style of arranging the tresses of the female head frequently changed under the dictates of a fashion feebly endeavoring to assert itself wherever possible; and at one time even a small amount of natural hair easily served the purpose of covering the crescent shaped pillows on which it was put up, the startling names of which were "rats" and "mice."

Something old and something new,
Something borrowed and something blue,

Buttons, pins, buckles, hook and eyes disappeared by degrees from the face of the southern Confederacy. Some wooden buttons were turned upon lathes from maple and similar wood, and there were horn buttons here and there; but both spools were for the most part clumsy and ill shapen. The whites of the Confederacy were content with them, while the slaves answered their "galluses" to their trousers with wooden pins or the thorns of the locust.

Combs were made of horn or wood; and bristle tooth brushes were replaced with twigs of the dogwood, the black gum, the sweet gum and the althea. The latter was especially valued as serving the double purpose of brush and dentifrice at once. Turkey wing fans and fans of peacock feathers supplanted those of a more or less artistic and elaborate design and finish; and many other articles of use or ornament, dear to the feminine heart and not easily attainable, were ingeniously simulated.—A. C. Gordon in The Century.

A Poacher's Cunning Device.

Along the coast of France, where the land line is formed by long stretches of sand banks lying between the high cliff uplands, there used to be found innumerable rabbits, who made their burrows in the dry sand above high water mark. They ran one hole into another, so that the labyrinth of underground passages frequently extended for several hundred feet, rendering it next to impossible to dislodge the inmates in the usual manner by slipping a ferret into one of the holes. For, if this were done, the ferret would simply drive the rabbits from one corner of the network to another, where they would hide as soon as they evaded him.

The continental poacher, ever prolific in devices, knowing that the instinct of the crab will lead him always to descend in search of water, elaborated a system of placing a bolt net at the mouth of every hole he could locate, no matter how many there might be. Then, taking a dozen or so of good sized crabs, he fastened about half an inch of composite wax candle to the center of each shell, fixing them firmly enough for his purpose by slightly melting the wax at the bottom, and then pressing it into the shell. These pieces of wax candles he obtained from the inn keepers and lodging house keepers in the adjacent coast town. He then lighted the candles and turned one crab into each of the main runs.

The crab, just taken from a damp place, immediately sought the lowest ground in the burrow, carrying his light with him, where light had never penetrated before. The rabbits, frightened almost to death, rushed madly through the runs to the mouths of the holes, sprang out into the bolt nets and hopelessly tangling themselves in the meshes, lay panting until the poacher came and put them out of their misery. More than 100 rabbits have been taken from a single burrow at one haul, and the practice proved so destructive to the rabbits that the French government took the matter in hand and subjected every offender to a heavy fine and imprisonment.—The Argonaut.

The Eyes of Poets.

It would seem, indeed, that it is by the eye, the eloquent and radiant expression of the eye, the poet may at once be known. Everybody recalls the poet eye of Robert Burns. "It was large," says Sir Walter Scott, "and of a cast which glowed (I say literally glowed) when he spoke with feeling or interest. I never saw such another eye in a human head, though I have seen the most distinguished men of my time." And says Professor Walker: "In his large dark eye the most striking index of his genius resided." It was said of the eyes of Chatterton, the marvelous boy who perished in his pride, that "fire rolled at the bottom of them." And Moore tells us that Byron's, though of a light gray, were capable of all extremes of expression, from mirth to melancholy, from benevolence to scorn or rage.

As for Shelley, his blue eyes were very large and prominent. "They were at times, when he was abstracted, as he often was in contemplation, dull, and, as it were, insensible to external objects; at others they flashed with the fire of intelligence." In the face of Scott there was not much, I think, to indicate the author of "Marmion" and "Waverley," though it wore a general expression of power and resolution; but he had fine eyes—eyes so keen that, as his little son said, "it was commonly he who saw the hare sitting." To refer to Goldsmith, his eyes were the redeeming features of his face.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Our Mule Trade.

The largest market for the purchase and sale of mules is St. Louis, where the trade reaches $6,000,000 a year. Atlanta comes next with a trade of $3,000,000.—Chicago Herald.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. As they serve the interests of Europe, we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Eat With Comfort and Be Happy.

It is by no means uncertain, but on the contrary, a well ascertained fact, that upon the well being of man's stomach depends that modicum of happiness which is vouchsafed to him in this world. Dyspepsia, the foe of all others to the stomach's tranquility, and most to be dreaded, is a complaint to the preliminary relief and eventual cure of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is specially adapted. It enables those who use it with a reasonable degree of persistence to eat with relish, because it imparts a healthful appetite; to digest with ease, because it strengthens the stomach; and to assimilate the food which is eaten and digested, thus benefitting health, promoting flesh and sustaining the exercise of the physical and mental faculties. It, moreover, facilities the secretion of healthy bile, actuates without discomfort the habit of body, and tends, when taken upon retiring, to produce healthy slumber. Malaria is conquered by it.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effects of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We must now place our manufacures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

When symptoms of malaria appear, in any form, take Ayer's Ague Cure. It will prevent a development of the germs of disease, and eradicate them from the system. A cure is warranted in every instance.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Wise Patron of The La. S. Lottery.

A worthy Chicagoan is Mr. Peter Klein, doing business at No. 99 E. Kinsey St. He is a benevolent, frank and social friend—like all old-time "Fatherlanders" he will invest a spare dollar in a lottery and on a former occasion secured an $3,000 prize in The Louisiana State Lottery in association with his brother-in-law. Of his latest good luck, he was the possessor of a fractional ticket No. 2,924 which drew $30,000 in the drawing, Aug. 7th; he collected the amount, $15,000, through the Express company. His present business place is a wooden-frame building for vending refreshments, cigars, etc. He will erect, on the lot which he owns, a modern brick block.—Chicago (Ills.) Occident, Aug. 24th.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. mon.wed.fri.6Ojal

The Population of Portsmouth

Is about 10,000, and we would say at least one-half are troubled with some affection of the throat and lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics, more numerous than others. We would advise all our readers not to neglect the opportunity to call on their druggist, get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. Trial size free. Large bottles 50c. and $1. Sold by all druggists. ow22

The Handsomest Lady of Portsmouth

Remarked to a friend the other day that she knew Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs was a superior remedy, as it stopped her cough instantly when other cough remedies had no effect whatever. So to prove this and convince you of its merit, any druggist will give you a sample bottle free. Large size 50c. and $1.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. eowjan29

Get rid of that tired feelling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health.

She Tried and Knows.

A leading chemist of New York says: "No plasters of such merit as the Ath-lo-pho-ros Plasters have ever before been produced." They are a novelty because they are not made simply to sell cheap, they are the best that science, skill and money can produce, and will do what is claimed for them. For sprains, aches, weakness, lameness, etc., they are unequaled.

☞ Fulton St., Sandusky, O. Nov. 21, '87. The Athlophoros Plaster acted like magic. It is the best I ever tried and I have used many kinds. Our druggist said "plasters are all about the same" but I don't think so now. I sprained my arm and shoulder in July, and it has been painful since, but it does not pain me at all now. MRS. WILLIS MAGILL.

A Life on the Ocean Wave

Indurates the stomach against sea sickness, but a single or occasional transit across the "illimitable wetness" is productive of grievous qualms, especially when it is stormy. Ocean travelers, ship surgeons, yachtmen, commercial buyers sent abroad, voyages by steamboat, and all who are occasionally or frequently called upon to be where "billows are buffeted," should take along Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest known antidote for seasickness, malaria, biliousness, and disorders of the stomach and bowels. Many travelers by railroad, with delicate stomachs and nerves, likewise suffer severely en route. These will find the Bitters surely helpful and consolatory. Traveling, even in swift, steady and commodious steamships and sumptuous palace cars, is not always a source of unmixed joy and delight, and the Bitters does much to counteract the discomforts attending it, aggravated by delicate health. Rheumatism, brought on by damp weather, kidney troubles and debility, are effectually relieved by the Bitters.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

"I have taken, within the past year, several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and find it admirably adapted to the needs of an impoverished system. I am convinced that this preparation, as a blood purifier, is unequaled."—C. C. Dame, pastor Congregational church, Andover, Me.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Could not Keep

Shop without them. I consider your Sulpher Bitters a remarkable blood purifier. I know of several people, whose cases were considered hopeless, that have been cured by your medicine. Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. 1ow12

THE LUNCH.

A gothic window where a damask curtain
Made the blank daylight shadowy and uncertain;
A slab of agate on four eagle talons
Held trimly up and neatly taught to balance;
A porcelain dish o'er which, in many a cluster,
Plump grapes hung down, dead ripe and without luster;
A melon cut in thin, delicious slices;
A cake that seemed mosaic work in spices;
Two china cups with golden tulips sunny,
And rich inside with chocolate like honey;
And she and I the banquet scene completing
With dreamy words—and very pleasant eating.
—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

The Variety of Uncouth Names.

The number and variety of such unsuitable names is so great as to defy enumeration. Not only is history, sacred and profane, ransacked for such names, but hybrid combinations are invented which might be safely worshiped without breaking the second commandment, for they are like nothing in the heaven above or in the earth beneath, or in the waters under the earth. An English observer has noticed that American boys and girls are sad. I should not at all be surprised if many of them were sad about the uncouth names which have been saddled on them without either their knowledge or consent. I heard the other day of a Chicago gentleman who has four fine children, and who is determined that they shall never be sad on this account. For, instead of imposing any distinctive name on them, he has simply designated them as "One," "Two," "Three" and "Four." These designations answer all the purposes of names, and when the children reach years of discretion they can assume such names as they desire.—New York Tribune.

No Solitude for the Fair.

To a woman in what is conventionally known as good society, the love of solitude is utterly unknown. She is chaperoned and escorted and accompanied till she has not only no clear idea of her own identity, but no very clear identity of which to have an idea. To achieve this result is, under circumstances that very frequently occur, a tax that becomes a serious burden materially, as well as a constant clog mentally. A man may betake himself to any place or resort he pleases, be a spectator of its life and yet retain, if he likes, the personal solitude of the primeval wilderness; but if a woman would go to the mountains, to the sea, to the city—anywhere she will, she must have at least a woman companion with her in the guise of a chaperon, friend or maid. Otherwise, she will acquire, at best, a reputation for eccentricity, and, at worst, something even less desirable. And thus she never tastes the sweets of solitude.—Boston Traveler.

No Substitute for Hard Work.

The power to think for one's self has too little standing in the schools; and we do not insist enough upon the appreciation of the worth of the school work. Too often we try to wheedle our children into knowledge. We disguise the name of work, mask thought, and invent schemes for making education easy and pleasant. We give fanciful names to branches of study, make play with object lessons, and illustrate all things. To make education amusing, an easy road without toil, is to train up a race of men and women who will shun what is displeasing to them. But there is no substitute for hard work in school if we are to have a properly trained people; we must teach the value of work and overcome the indifference of children to ignorance.—The Century.

The Charge of Insult.

The laugh at the twelfth juryman who alleged that he had eleven incorrigible colleagues is a laugh at Columbus and Galileo and Jenner. They all insulted the ignorance of their time, and ignorance is generally in the majority. The charge of insult in such circumstances is generally the cry of the wounded. It is a confession that the shaft has struck home. An arrogant arraigner of other men and of common course, a man who plainly assumes a personal superiority and merit, is the true Pharisee, who is instantly and instinctively repudiated by honest men.—Harper's Magazine.

London's Lost Dogs.

London has long had its home for lost and stolen dogs, and as a commercial affair it pays its way. All dogs brought there are received and are left for several days. If not claimed, the mongrels and aged are killed by an ingenious arrangement, which gives them, many at a time, a painless death by suffocation. A small charge is made for the keep of dogs that are claimed, and the unclaimed ones are sold at good prices.—Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Not Signs of Death.

It will probably surprise most people to learn that both cessation of respiration and of movement of the heart are rejected as signs of death by a French lecturer, in considering the precise moment when life ceases. Heart beats have been known to continue for an hour after the body was beheaded, while, on the other hand, they may temporarily cease in fainting.—Boston Budget.

Oldest Woman's Club.

The oldest woman's club in the United States is the Women's Physiological Institute, of Boston. Forty-one years ago it was organized with the purpose of promoting the more perfect health of women. There is one surviving charter member, a Mrs. Hobbs, and she is 80 years old.—New York Sun.

A Cheap Catamaran.

An enterprising small boy has nailed a large soap box on some boards and then fastened the whole to a couple of logs. He has made a sail of a potato bag, and sails the main as happy as the owner of the finest yacht afloat.—Chicago Herald.

A Highland Custom.

A Highland custom is that of ushering in the morning by the music of the bagpipe; the piper plays under the windows of the castle and thus arouses the inmates.

It is stated that over 500,000 rose plants are annually imported into America from England, France and Holland.

There are about 15,000 photographic establishments in this country, employing 40,000 people.

More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

AMONG THE DUTCH BOERS.

Some Very Queer Costumes—Medicine and Quackery—Dancing.

The traveler (I speak of one who is supposed to understand Boer speech and habits) arrives at a farm house in, say, the Orange Free state. A farm house may have one field of forage and a stone kraal; otherwise the farm is open country. He will not off saddle his horse without receiving permission; this having been asked for and granted, the farmer leads him through the half doors into the main apartment. There is home made furniture, numerous pink and white paper flowers, and painted on the walls vases of fruit like those seen depicted on the London pavements. The visitor will proceed to shake hands, commencing with the stout vrauw and ending with the baby in arms. This is not the English "handshake," but a resting of palm within palm. The coffee, which is made from sunrise to sunset, is then brought in in bowls, tobacco pouches are exchanged, and conversation, which seldom varies, commences. The visitor and the farmer answer or reply pretty much as follows: "The veld is green. The clouds are heavy; there will be a thunderstorm to-morrow. I have a very fine red horse running. Nachtmaal (communion) will be next month. My vrauw has a cold. The president is a fine man. Japie de Villiers (pronounced Vilje, and minus the prefix) has had a ram born with five heads. The English are thieves." The handshaking ceremony is then repeated, the horse, fed and rested, is brought round; the traveler mounts, smacks his sjambock, shows off his steed and proceeds on his journey.

The farmers have trained ponies to a special pace called a "tripple," and a good "trippler" is always prized. With this pace no "porting" of the saddle is required, and on a long journey the trippler will arrive each night without turning a hair, while the trotting horse, his companion, may be done up. Distance is reckoned by time—six miles to the hour. If an Englishman near the hour of sunset asks a Dutchman where such a village lies, he will be answered by a raised hand and "a little way over that hill." You then ride ten miles and sleep out in a thunder storm, perhaps. You reach the village the following midday. Superstition and fear of contagious diseases are great among this people.

The Dutch are accomplished herbalists, doubtless obtaining the knowledge of the Hottentots and Bushmen; they have herb brandies for colics and plants for sores. They are often the prey of quack doctors; the more as genuine practitioners, who have to go long distances, charge heavily. A Dutchman is satisfied with the treatment so long as his medical adviser brings to the house a quart bottle of physic; if he present him with a small vial he doubts his skill and sends for another man. The dead are buried on the farms, and over them traveling masons erect mausoleums of brick. Dutch women are enormous in size, good cooks in their style, gobble sweets and cakes all day and take little exercise. But now and then a Dutch wife and her daughters may be seen kraaling the sheep at evening. A Boer likes his wife's company, and will leave passengers by his wagon stuck in the mud and half starved while he tracks off fifty miles with another vehicle to pay a visit to the vrauw. Feather beds are greatly prized by this people; they generally carry their beds with them on journeys.

The trekkings of the Boers are remarkable. Annually the farmhouse on the "low veld" is shut up, and the sheep and cattle are taken scores of miles up to the "high veld" for mountain pasture. Beside some rushing stream the wagons are camped, perhaps tents are pitched, and domestic life goes on as usual. Fowls cluck among the wild grasses, and the cows are milked beneath the shadows of mighty mountains. The general belief in the excellence of Boer shooting is no delusion.

The people are excessively fond of music and dancing; concertina, harmonium and fiddle are their delight. A withered Hottentot dwarf will draw a strain from the sole of an old shoe strung with sinew, and men and maidens will vigorously dance to it for hours. For dancing there is no touching the English Afrikander, and his measures seem quite original. The Boers have a bad character for pilfering. When the men and the women enter an up country store they are allowed to carry off small goods like sweets or ribbons, which they unconsciously pay for in the bill. The farmers are not often rich in money, their wool crops being mortgaged sometimes to the stores for two seasons ahead. "Young bloods" are impudent and wild. A smart curveting horse and hat with white ostrich plume usually denote this species. When a Boer drinks he is an entire fool. In order to keep a firm hand over the young men riding transport, the elders of the free state recently passed a bill prohibiting the sale of liquor at wayside canteens, and thereby lost a large revenue. However, there are smugglers.

The Boers are great religious formalists; and at certain times they and their families ride into the villages from great distances to celebrate the Nachtmaal (night meal or communion), their wagons loaded with produce—presents for the parsons. At this time business is brisk and the streets are like a fair. Yet, where natives and land are concerned, the Boer's constant violation of the Commandments does not need pointing out. The Boers are by no means modest, and their family conversations are at times boisterously indecent. Household arrangements, save on rich farms, are necessarily meager, and the traveler must be prepared to sleep on the floor in the midst of four or five sisters and their three or four brothers, all grown up, while the head couple snore on an elevated and ponderous feather bed in a curtained corner of the room. When sleeping at a superior Transvaal farmhouse, it is well to examine the mattress; if it rests on sheepskins, throw the skins out.—St. James' Gazette.

TRY THE S. S. S. FOR THE BLOOD. TRADE MARK

PEEP'S MILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without profit, and began to despair of curing her at all. I was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the disease all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child has just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. R. C. WOODCOCK.

RICH HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl when but three weeks old broke out with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and heavy head of hair—as robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, H. T. SNOW.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1880 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Crab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit. HARDY M. BURT, 24 West Ninth St.

HOMER, LA., May 25, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again. All that the physicians done for me brought no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course, my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it; for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. F. BUDDS, J. P.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Athlophoros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

Some More Democratic "Reform."

Perry S. Heath, correspondent of the Indianapolis (Ind.) Journal, has delivered to Senator Hale of Maine, chairman of the select committee on reform in the civil service, a copy of a confidential circular issued by General Benet, U. S. A., chief of ordnance, which Hale will make the basis of a request for an official inquiry by the senate. The circular is as follows:

ORDNANCE OFFICE, WAR DEPT.
WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.

To the Commanding Officers of the National Armories at Springfield and Rock Island, and of the United States Arsenals at New York, West Troy, Philadelphia, Boston and Benicia:

While arsenals and the armories are not intended to be converted into political machines, two political parties in this country are recognized. It is therefore ordered that hereafter in employing or discharging employees of any or all grades, other things being equal, and qualifications satisfactory, democrats will be favored, the object being to divide the force in the different grades gradually between democrats and republicans. This rule will apply to women and children as well as to men, and will be strictly enforced.

S. V. BENET, Chief of Ordnance.

Mr. Heath informed Senator Hale that he had shown the circular to General Benet, who acknowledged its genuineness, and stated that it was issued by direction of Secretary Endicott, President Cleveland's "reform" secretary of war.

He is a Republican.

The Cawker City (Kansas) Times publishes the following letter, written by William C. Whitney, postmaster of Cawker City, and addressed to John M. Galloway, chairman of the democratic state committee of Kansas:

My Dear Sir: Yours of August 20th, making assessment on this office for the sum of $56 for campaign purposes, is at hand. Allow me to say that it is no fault of mine that I am postmaster at this place. I am a republican. I was appointed by a republican administration, and for three years and a half have been telling the democrats that this was their office, and to come and take it; but, although I weigh only 300 pounds, and am one of the best-natured men in the world, they "don't take," and I am left, "they say," the only republican in the state holding a presidential office.

I have no desire for democratic success, and most respectfully decline your kind invitation. Your letter will be placed on file, and if the whirligig of time sends a democrat into this office before election, I shall take pleasure in calling his attention to it, and of suggesting to him that "delays are dangerous."

With earnest wishes for your personal success and political defeat, I am respectfully yours,

WM. C. WHITNEY, etc.

That letter must have been rather a "corker" on the civil service reform disciple of Cleveland who is running the reform canvass in Kansas.

They Are Civilized.

Information comes from Dougherty, Tex., that Governor Guy marched into Tishmoningo, Indian Territory, the Chickasaw capital, yesterday, with an armed force, and took his seat. Governor Guy was legally elected governor, but was counted out by the Byrd party, and Byrd took his seat as governor. Gov. Guy quietly gathered some of his party, and took the capital and Byrd's party by surprise. The legislature had not adjourned. The administration has been calling on the Guy officers for the possession of all moneys, reports, etc., but was quietly put off until Governor Guy was ready to take possession again. Mr. Byrd was so dumbfounded when he recognized Governor Guy at the head of his men marching to the capital, that he was unable to speak for several moments. Exciting times are expected very soon.

This shows that the redskins, when they have control of the election machinery, are the equal of the Louisiana democrats at counting out their opponents. Mississippi and South Carolina are better aware than they that the shot-gun is mightier than the ballot, as a last resort. And yet there are people who maintain that the Indians are not capable of attaining the highest civilization!

Are Your Pullets Laying?

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought foward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail at high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

That able journal, the New York Independent, puts the logic of the political situation into an epigram when it says that a vote for the democratic party is a vote for the saloon; a vote for the republican party is a vote against the saloon. Between these two parties lies the only actual choice; for either Harrison, who is a pronounced anti-saloon republican, and the nominee of a temperance party, or Cleveland, a pronounced anti-sumptuary-legislation democrat, and the nominee of a saloon party, will be elected. The votes that count for Harrison and temperance will be those that are cast for the republican party; the votes that count for Cleveland and the saloon will be those are cast for the democratic and third-party candidates.

It will be remembered that about a year ago the safe of the Boston & Maine railroad company's office at Farmington, Me., was blown open, and robbed of its contents. A few days ago the stolen tickets and papers were found by a gang of section men, under a rock beside the railroad, about a half mile from the station.

The Rockingham Universalist Association will meet in the Universalist church in Nottingham on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 10th and 11th. The parish cordially invites the public to attend any and all of the meetings. Meeting opens at eleven A. M., Oct. 10th.

Ex-Governor Cheney of Manchester has bought the estate of the late Ex-Gov. Straw in that city, with the intention of remodelling it for his own use. This puts an end to the prospect of securing it for a state hospital.

A man named Jefts was seriously injured at Chesterfield a few days since while chopping in the woods, the tree which he was falling splitting up when partly cut through, throwing him several feet among rocks, knocking him senseless and breaking ribs, shoulder and collar bone.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

MRS. KENISTON.

Prof. Geo. H. Kalteyer, the well known chemist of Texas, investigated the baking powder question, and wrote: "I submitted Prof. Horsford's preparation to a chemical examination, and found it composed of pure and non-poisonous materials. The idea of Prof. Horsford was, indeed a good one, in supplanting the indigestible tartrates, which are the final result of all cream tartar baking powders, by the soluble phosphates, the very nutritive property of bread, and the bone-producing element of nature. It is certainly the best and most healthful bread-raising preparation ever offered to the public."

The British schooner Herald, about 100 tons register, lumber laden, abandoned during the storm of Sept. 26th, went ashore on Petit Menan island, coast of Maine, on the 28th, and will be a total loss, though part of her cargo may be saved. Her crew landed on Trafton's island after abandoning her.

Edson A. Brown of Hillsboro' Bridge, twenty-seven years of age, suicied by hanging in his father's barn Tuesday forenoon, Sept. 18th, during the absence of the folks.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

Franklin hall, which was filled at the exhibitions the first part of the week, was packed on Saturday at all three entertainments. Mr. Rufus Somerby, the business manager, as agent of a show is a hustler, and knows how to work up patronage as well as any one we have ever met. And then he never comes around with anything which is not good.

DEMOCRATIC WARD CLUB.

The democrats of ward four last Friday evening organized a club with the following officers;

President, Hon. Daniel Marcy; vice presidents, J. Albert Sanborn, Henry Wendell and William A. Cullen; treasurer, John J. Laskey; finance committee, Horace W. Gray, Robert W. Phinney, George McCarthy, Howell C. Russell and Michael H. Gregg; secretary, Charles F. Richards.

Capt. Marcy accepted the presidency of the club.

LAMENTABLE DISREGARD.

The following, in the shape of a circular dated Sept. 28th, was distributed on Saturday among the young democracy of this city:

Dear Sir: It is desirable that a Young Men's Democratic company be formed in this city, as soon as possible, for the coming campaign, to consist of young men from the various wards. A very generous offer in pursuance of the above object has been made to the committee having the matter in charge, and in order to take advantage of the same and bring the matter before your notice, you are hereby notified that there will be a meeting of all interested in this object at the Democratic headquarters on Daniel street, Monday evening, October 1st, at eight o'clock. As the time left us is short, immediate action will be necessary, and we would like your aid in making this as successful an organization as the young men have had heretofore. Hoping you will give this matter your personal attention and not fail to be present, we are yours, etc.,

F. F. CHURCH,
W. L. CONLON,

We are pleased to know that a very generous offer has been made to the young democrats if they will only come out and make some show of enthusiasm for Cleveland, the old-liners positively refusing to do anything of the kind; the offer should include free uniforms, torches, hall and band, and refreshments every time there is a parade. But it is with regret very nearly bordering on anguish that we notice the name of Mr. F. F. Church affixed to the call. Mr. Church is a federal office-holder, a clerk in the post-office, and we fear that this display of pernicious activity on his part, in defiance of Mr. Cleveland's celebrated civil service reform order, will cause that gentleman to abandon his reform notions altogether.

It is with scarcely less sorrow that we notice that Mr. Charles F. Richards, deputy collector of internal revenue for this district, has also become perniciously active, being secretary of the ward four dymocratic club, organized last week to secure the election of Mr. William Conn as state senator from the Portsmouth district. If Mr Cleveland should hear of this it would finish him, and there would be no more civil service reform under this administration.

PERSONAL.

City Messenger Samuel R. Gardner leaves this morning for a trip to western Massachusetts and New York, to be gone a week or ten days.

Mr. George A. Cobbett and wife of Northwest street, and Mrs. H. H. Cobbett and son of Dennett street, who have been visiting in Belfast, Me., returned to this city last Friday.

Mr. Cornelius Lewis and wife, formerly of Portsmouth, now of Boston, arrived in this city Saturday for a visit of a few days.

Miss Mary Weeks and Miss Alice J. Sheldon of this city, and Miss Mary Piper of North Hampton, are passing a few days at Bethlehem, this state.

Mrs. Knapp, wife of Mr. James M. Knapp, formerly foreman boiler maker at this navy yard, is visiting at Lincoln Hill cottage, this city.

Mr. John A. Broderick, wife and child, of Boston, who have been visiting Mr. Broderick's parents in this city, returned to Boston on Saturday.

Mr. William Ward arrived home last Saturday from a business trip of three weeks in Missouri, Kansas and Colorado.

Joseph F. Dearborn, Esq., and wife, of Melrose Highlands, Mass., who have been sojourning with Mrs. David Marston of Hampton, cousin of Mr. Dearborn, have returned to their home. Mr. Dearborn is a native of Hampton, was a student at Hampton academy, a graduate of Dartmouth college and Harvard law school, and successfully practised law in New Bedford and in Boston; he is a cousin of Mr. Wm. E. Noyes of Kittery, the well known correspondent of the Chronicle. Mr. Dearborn is now agent and attorney of the Empire State Co. of Vermont, having his office in Boston.

Charles G. Conner, Esq., of Exeter, for thirty years the genial clerk of the supreme court for Rockingham county, and his wife, celebrated their silver wedding on Sept. 25th. One hundred and fifty guests were present. Many valuable presents were received, beside letters of congratulation from judges and from prominent members of the Rockingham bar.

RANCH NO. 10.

"Ranch 10" as produced on the stage of the Grand Opera house, is a strong play, and the principal characters have each a powerful personality which appears to great advantage. The scenery and mechanical effects are realistic in a high degree.—New Haven Register.

At Music hall next Wednesday evening; tickets at Goodrich's.

Fire alarm boxes 53, 28, 43, 7 and 19 will be struck during the regular monthly test of the fire alarm apparatus to-day.

The old barn which formerly stood on piles at the northerly end of the south millbridge, near Charles W. Coleman's store, has been torn down, and a new building is to be put up there.

We received on Saturday four potatoes which weighed five pounds; they were raised by Mr. Charles Knight, on the Rollins farm at Newington.

The trotting horse Frank, entered by Edgar D. Stoddard of this city in the three-minute race at the Rochester fair on Friday of last week, took first money, $150, beating seven competitors. The race was mile heats, best three in five, and Frank won the first two heats and the 4th; time, 2:35 3-4, 2:35 1-4, 2:34 1-4. The third heat was taken by a Lynn horse in 2:35, Frank being "pocketed."

The "Whatsoever" Band of King's Daughters will hold a sale of home-made cake and preserves at St. John's chapel on Thursday, Oct. 4th, from four to nine o'clock, in aid of the Jacksonville sufferers. Ice cream and cake served throughout the evening.

Physicians say that there is no remedy for consumption. In some cases this may be correct. We know however of many cures made by Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and will guarantee relief.

A sensible man will not fail to keep a bottle of Salvation Oil on hand for men's cuts and bruises.

The mastic coating on the southerly side of the city building is being repaired.

Ice was to be seen in shallow puddles in the roads and streets in this vicinity, Sunday morning.

Pears' Soap secures a fine complexion.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

The schooner Emily C. Dennison, Capt. Garland, driven ashore at Biddeford Pool after parting her chains in the great gale of Sept. 26th, was pulled afloat by a tug after jettisoning her cargo of bricks; she was not leaking much, but Capt. Garland thinks she has lost her shoe.

The fishing schooner Franklin S. Schenck, which has fished out of this port for several winters past, lost her anchors and cables in the gale of the 26th ult., and had a hard time of it otherwise, but arrived at Boston without serious damage.

E. Newton & Co. have commenced buying fish at Commercial wharf. Last Friday they received fifty big mackerel, averaging two lbs. each, and 100 small ones; and on Saturday afternoon they received fifty fifty large ones from William Randall. G. H. Carlton has opened his fish market at Liberty bridge. Capt. Robinson of Saker street has for some days been buying fish at Russell & Odion's wharf; fish were very scarce the last week, and he paid as high as $5 a hundred pounds. Wm. Randall brought in 2000 lbs. of cod and haddock on Sunday, and the schooner Jesse 500 lbs., which Jos. H. Jameson of Commercial wharf bought at $2 per hundred.

Capt. Symonds' dredging flotilla was at the draw of Portsmouth bridge Saturday morning, bound for the Cocheco river, to continue the excavations there.

Mr. Henry A. Marden of Kittery, late mate of the steamer Undine, has taken command of the steamer James Sampson.

The North Berwick News reports that John Sarchfield, who is under arrest, charged with killing his wife by beating and kicking her while he was ugly drunk after a visit to this city, has not tasted food of any description since he was locked up, and refuses to eat or drink.

Naval Intelligence.

Chief Engr. Wm. H. Harris is detached from the bureau of steam engineering, and placed on waiting orders.

Passed Asst. Surgeon Arthur C. Heffenger is detached from the naval hospital at Widow's island, Me., and placed on waiting orders.

Surgeon Manley H. Simons is ordered to the naval hospital at Widow's island, and to special duty as medical attendant of the navy and marine corps at this city.

Lieut. Comdr. Charles W. Tracy, retired, is granted one year leave of absence from Oct. 1st, with permission to leave the United States.

Capt. W. S. Schley was on Sept. 25th confirmed as chief of the bureau of equipment and recruiting, with the relative rank of commodore.

LITTLEFIELD'S
Constitutional
COUGH SYRUP
— FOR —
CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.
MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD.
Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:

A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences. Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER. Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

From Quaint Old Nantucket.

Apropos of Nantucket, one hears some rather odd sayings and of some quaint happenings there.

"You see, we are somewhat out of the way," said one of the islanders; "so tramps seldom trouble us, and it is only when our summer visitors come that we think of locking our doors at night."

Last fall a man was tried for petty larceny, and sentenced by the judge to three months in jail. A few days after the trial the judge, accompanied by the sheriff, was on his way to the Boston boat when they passed a man sawing wood.

The sawyer stopped his work, touched his hat and said: "Good morning, judge."

The judge looked at him a moment, passed on a short distance, then turned to glance backward, with the question: "Why, sheriff, isn't that the man I sentenced to three months in jail?"

"Yes," replied the sheriff, hesitatingly, "yes, that's the man; but you—you see, judge, we—we haven't any one in jail now, and we thought it a useless expense to hire somebody to keep the jail for three months just for this one man; so I gave him the jail key, and told him that if he'd sleep there nights it would be all right."—R. A. Marr in Harper's Magazine.

Not a Pleasant Resort.

When an invalid goes to the Carlsbad Spa or cure, in Germany, he is informed upon his arrival that the spa is not a pleasure resort. There are rules of habit and diet that must be observed. All guests of the spa must arise at a certain hour in the morning. At 6 a. m. there is a grand promenade concert. Full dress and a required juncture on this occasion. One hour and a half later is the breakfast hour. The fare is of the simplest. Should a patient grow restless consequent upon the meagerness of the menu, and indulge in forbidden luxuries, the physicians of the cure flatly refuse to longer treat him. He is practically banished from the spa. The whole thing is, of course, under government control. A most careful diagnosis is made of each arriving patient. If so be it is found his ailment is not one to be benefited by the waters, the patient is told so. I can recall an instance of a St. Louis grain merchant who went to Carlsbad. When the examining physician got through with him, he said: "I can recommend but one place that will do you good; it is the Hot Springs of Arkansas."—Dr. Enno Sander in Globe-Democrat.

Wouldn't Be Popular Today.

"Macaulay," said a talker whose conversation ranged over three generations, "did not talk, he lectured. He chose his subject, it mattered little what, and he delivered a discourse on it; poured out masses of facts, or arguments, of historical illustration. He was not witty, he had no humor, he was not a critic, as he himself confessed, he was devoid of imaginative or poetic faculty. But he had the most prodigious memory ever possessed by a human being, and on this he drew, without stint and without end." People in those days listened to him, his authority was established, his audience docile, nobody interrupted, controversy was out of the question. "Now," continued the witness, "no dinner table would stand it; he would be stopped, contradicted, his long stories vetoed; no monopoly or monopolist is tolerated. If you wanted to know about Queen Anne you could go home and read a cyclopædia."—London Cor. New York Tribune.

Do We Really Save Time?

The faster we go the faster we want to go. We go as fast in four hours today as our forefathers went in forty-eight, and yet railroad traveling is so slow and such a waste of time. It is only a question of time, however, when railroad trains will carry passengers so fast that sensible folks will take to stage riding just to see something of the world they live in. Time is really not so much of an object as people believe. We don't save much time by all our modern appliances after all, for we get there so early we have to waste it in some other way. The only people who really gain by cable cars and things are youngsters who are courting. Husbands don't want to get home, and even the young fellow in love stops to have another drink because the cars go every two minutes. We get everywhere so easily now that there is no fun in going anywhere.—San Francisco Chronicle "Undertones."

Japanese Love of Flowers.

The love for flowers is innate in every Japanese, and the poor coolie, who draws one for miles in a jinrickisha, is as enthusiastic and as deeply stirred over a flower show as one of the upper classes.

Instead of stopping to rest after a long run to one of these suburban flower shows, the coolie spends all of his time admiring, exclaiming over and talking about the flowers, and my particular coolie the other day made me go here and there to see this and that marvel, and walk back and forth to compare and review the superb flowers. There was no doubt but that he understood, appreciated and felt the beauty and sentiment of the exquisite peonies far more than we did, and it seemed cruel that such a really refined, æsthetic soul should have to run like a pony in the shafts of a jinrickisha.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Relics of the Seashore.

The relics of a sea washed beach are a strange study. Here you pick up a bottle—there a can—here a basket—there a box—here an old hat or cap—there a boot or shoe—here a great spike—there a bit of rope—here a piece of cabin gilding—there a bit of stout planking. The sea never rests. It brings in and it carries out. The beach one day is shelving. The next run of the tide cuts it full of runs and ravines. One tide brings in a splintered spar—the next carries it far out to sea. Where there is a great bed of oyster and clam shells to prevent you bathing today, there may be only smooth hard packed sand to-morrow.—Atlantic City Letter.

Partners of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We seek no the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will be not to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Life on the Ocean Wave

Indurates the stomach against sea sickness, but a single or occasional transit across the "illimitable wetness" is productive of grievous qualms, especially when it is stormy. Ocean travelers, ship surgeons, yachtmen, commercial buyers sent abroad, voyages by steamboat, and all who are occasionally or frequently called upon to be where "billows are buffeted," should take along Hostetter's stomach Bitters, the finest known antidote for seasickness, malaria, billiousness, and disorders of the stomach and bowels. Many travelers by railroad, with delicate stomachs and nerves, likewise suffer severely en route. These will find the Bitters surely helpful and consolatory. Traveling, even in swift, steady and commodious steamships and sumptuous palace cars, is not always a source of unmixed joy and delight, and the Bitters does much to counteract the discomforts attending it, aggravated by delicate health. Rheumatism, brought on by damp weather, kidney troubles and debility, are effectually relieved by the Bitters.

Laws to Limit Wedding Expenses in India—A Novel Reform.

A novel sort of reform in the matter of marriage has been instituted by the government in the states of Rajputana, in India, the object being as stated by Col. C. M. K. Walter, agent to the governor general, in a recent report to the English authorities, the "suppression of infanticide among Rajputs." The most immediate inference is that parents hesitate to raise children on account of the trouble of getting them married off, but it may be that Col. Walker intends to intimate that the existing marriage customs lead to an infrequency of matrimony and to other events conducive to the violent putting away of infants. At any rate, the fact seems to have been that marriage among Rajputs of any social standing has heretofore been a very serious financial question, both for the would be bridegroom and for the parents of the prospective bride, and the reforms are in the direction of fixing an arbitrary limit beyond which the expenditure at a wedding shall not go.

The first of these new rules, under which hereafter two Rajput hearts will be made to beat as one, fixes the maximum amount to be expended at marriages at one-quarter of the annual income of a Thakur, or nobleman, whose income is 20,000 rupees or over; one-third of incomes between 20,000 and 10,000 rupees; one-half of incomes between 10,000 and 1,000 rupees, and two-thirds of all incomes below 1,000 rupees. Rajputs with no regular income at all are not to be allowed to spend over 100 rupees at a wedding. It is explained that the percentage of expenditure is allowed to increase as the total income decreases because smaller sums could not secure the proper performance of the marriage ceremonies.

The second rule does away with all expenditure on occasions of betrothal, and provides that at such times the parties or their representatives shall simply drink a decoction of opium water together and present betel leaves, and the written record of the engagement of marriage shall then be signed. This tomfoolery does away with the previously necessary presentation to the father of the coming bridegroom by the father of the bride expectant of an elephant, horses, camels, jewelry, and other little trifles to a value rarely less, among well-to-do Thakurs, than 10,000 rupees.

The third rule is for the benefit of the family of the bride also, and limits the amount to be expended as "Tyag," largesse to the Charuns, Bhats, Dholis, and others, at 9 per cent. of the whole income where that exceeds 1,000 rupees, 4 1-2 per cent. where the income is between 1,000 and 500 rupees, and nothing at all for Thakurs with less than 500 rupees income. It is also provided that this expenditure for "Tyag" must be included in the amount fixed under the first rule as the limit of expenditure upon the wedding. This does away with what has heretofore been frequently the most expensive thing about a Rajput marriage. Numerous cases are cited where the "Tyag" alone on the occasion of the marriage of a daughter or a sister has been very much more than the whole income of the Thakur for the year. Another important change made by the new rules provides that only Charuns, Bhats and similar personages from the state in which the marriage is celebrated shall be allowed to be present at the ceremony, and of these the number shall be regulated by the standing committee in each state, whose duty it is oversee the enforcement of the new regulations.

At the end comes a rule, which probably affects or begins to affect a more important reform than all the rest put together. It prohibits the marriage of a man under 16 or a girl under 14, and is the first attempt made in the Rajputana to stop the custom of early marriages, by which a young maid is often doomed to be a widow all her life ere yet she has ever been a wife. The rule is said to have been proposed by the chief of Bundi, who has been a great upholder of the ancient customs, and is regarded as an important evidence of the growth of modern ideas in India.

Another innovation, incorporated as an after thought into the new rules, limits the expenditure at funeral feasts, and, it is said, will be an immense relief to the Rajputs.—New York Sun.

Dancing in British Honduras.

The etiquette of Santo Toribiro ballrooms is peculiar. The ladies sit around the room, their multiplicity of stiff skirts making them look like so many Dutch cheeses, while the men remain outside in groups until the dancing is about to begin. When the first strains of the marimba—mournful and despairing as the wail of a lost soul—announce the opening of the ball one of the sandaled and hatted gentlemen advances to the middle of the floor, on the way thereto carelessly nodding to the charmer of his choice, and she leaves her seat and goes to face him, standing a few paces distant. Then they perform a rapid zapateo, scarcely moving the body, though their feet are flying like mad, for all the world like a pair of jumping jacks, executing all manner of pigeon wings, jigs and double shuffles. When she gets enough of dancing she returns to her seat without so much as an adios to the gallant; while he, without stopping for a moment in the everlasting jig, nods to another lady to come and play Joan to his Darby. He is expected to keep on, without an instant's pause, until the music ceases, and often it is continued a long time, as a test to the young man's endurance.—Cor. Philadelphia Record.

CAPTURING A SWORDFISH.

A Vicious Monster, Being Wounded Pierces a Block Island Boat.

A man stands on a little platform in front of the bow armed with a harpoon having a sharply and deeply barbed point, so that in piercing the fish, if it goes in far enough, it cannot be easily got out, let the fish be as ugly as he may. The iron is so arranged, in connection with a pole and cord, that the cord can be detached from the harpoon, the pole pulled back, and the harpoon left firmly fixed in the now maddened fish—the line, a very strong rope, 800 feet long, being fast to the iron and the other end secure on the vessel. This end is immediately fastened securely to an empty barrel, which is then thrown overboard, and it marks the course and position of the enraged fish.

It also enables the vessel to send out a life boat to haul in, tire out and, if possible, capture the ugly fellow. And ugly he is, if he is a young fish. If he is old and heavy, he is much quieter—even with a harpoon in him. It is the younger, livelier fellows that are so full of ugly courage—that attack and kill whales, and attack, indeed, pretty much everything in the ocean, unless it may be the sea serpent and the devil fish.

That they will attack a man, even a bather, who is in water not over his head, and kill him, too, unless he can make wonderful time in getting into shallower water, was proved a few years ago in the case of a young Catholic priest who was attacked while bathing on the California shore, in water just above his hips; he was fearfully gashed and nearly killed before he could get ashore. Sometimes, in its fury at being harpooned, it rushes at the small boat and thrusts its ugly sword up through the boat's bottom. Woe to the man it hits!

Our harpooner fastened to a fish that was secured, as it happened, with little trouble, though the harpoon only penetrated a little way into his big carcass. He proved to be 10 feet 5 inches long, and weighed undoubtedly 450 pounds. Much larger ones have been caught, but rarely. We also secured two others, not so large. And it was with the second one that there was an exciting time. He proved to be "a young man" among his fellows, and an ugly young fellow, too.

Having him well harpooned, and the barrel going dancing at a great rate against the wind—for it is a curious and hitherto unrelated fact that a swordfish, when harpooned, always rushes off to windward—the life boat put out to secure him after duly "playing" him. In it went a Block Islander belonging to the vessel, and two courageous passengers. By the time they reached the barrel, they were a mile from the vessel, and could be seen, with a glass, pulling in on the line.

They worked the fish a good while. When a swordfish, finding himself harpooned and hopelessly held, really gives up the fight, he suddenly turns and goes to leeward. The men at the line understand what that movement means. They were still "playing" this fellow, and exhausting him, when, having several times had him hauled in close to the boat, so that his blue figure was distinctly visible, and as often permitted him to go 100 feet off or more, something happened which caused the captain of the steam yacht a mile off, looking through his glass, to exclaim: "They're in trouble! he has struck the boat!"—and to order an instant start for them.

He was none too soon. The enraged fish, withdrawing some sixty feet, had made one of those arrowlike rushes upon the boat, which can be equaled in its velocity by no other fish in the sea. The sword pierced the bottom of the boat a little one side of the keel, near the center—coming up nearly two feet. Fortunately men have learned ere now not to sit down in a boat engaged in hauling in a swordfish. By standing (as well as they can) their feet present a smaller surface, and hence a diminished chance of being hit. Last year one man's boot heel was partly hit, knocking him headlong.

In the present instance one of the men had a narrow escape of hardly ten inches. But the men were saved. Indeed, the boat, being a shell lifeboat, would hardly have sunk, although it was already half full of water and the men hard at work baling when the steam yacht reached them. The vicious fish was repeatedly lanced through the head and neck till he got comparatively quiet, when, in hauling him up the side, with the harpoon purchase at the shoulder and the long grappling hook at the tail, a slipknot was successfully got over his wide forked tail—and then—we had him. But for this last grip he would have turned the boat over. But the way he lashed the sea with that tail was a caution.—Hartford Times.

Another Cure for Insomnia.

"So many cures for have been advocated for sleeplessness that I am tempted," writes a correspondent, "to propound my own recipe, which, if it may appear somewhat impracticable and far fetched, has at least the advantage of simplicity. It is merely this: When you have tumbled and tossed about one bed until your pillow seems to be on fire and your sheets red hot, turn into another—I mean another bed. You will find the sheets and the pillow refreshingly cool, and it is probable at all events that you will go to sleep. The recipe is not infallible, and it is of course necessary to have another bed to turn into, which is not always possible. But when practicable it is worth trying; and if it fails one can always fall back on the undoubted fact that there is no universal cure for sleeplessness. What is one man's meat is another man's poison."—Pall Mall Budget.

Biting the Finger Nails.

The wife of a well known iron operator in Pennsylvania is beautiful, witty and accomplished, but she bites her finger nails. She says she cannot help it. She acquired the habit in childhood, and has tried every means to break it up, but without success. At times she has succeeded in resisting the inclination until all her finger nails are triumphantly long, but invariably they disappear as if by magic the first time she is disturbed, annoyed or rendered nervous. She does not know when she bites them. She suddenly finds them all gone. Her doctors tell her the habit is incurable except for very strong willed phlegmatic persons.

TRADE S.S.S. MARK

PEEP'S MILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism, and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without profit, and began to despair of curing her at all. I was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the diseases all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child has just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. N. C. WAGGONER.

RICH HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl was but three weeks old before she cut with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and healthy head of hair—a robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, H. T. SHOAN.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1886 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Crab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit. HARDY M. BURT, 24 West Ninth St.

HOMER, LA., May 25, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again. All that the physicians done for me brought no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course, my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it; for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. F. SADDUS, J. P.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-phoros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and in one week

With Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Blood Humors, Kidney Diseases, Constipation, Female Troubles, Fever and Ague, Sleeplessness, Partial Paralysis, or Nervous Prostration, use Paine's Celery Compound and be cured. In each of these the cause is mental or physical overwork, anxiety, exposure or malaria, the effect of which is to weaken the nervous system, resulting in one of these diseases. Remove the CAUSE with that great Nerve Tonic, and the RESULT will disappear.

Paine's Celery Compound

JAS. L. BOWEN, Springfield, Mass., writes:—"Paine's Celery Compound cannot be excelled as a Nerve Tonic. In my case a single bottle wrought a great change. My nervousness entirely disappeared, and with it the resulting affection of the stomach, heart and liver, and the whole tone of the system was wonderfully invigorated. Three Sufficient Reasons.

Hon. William E. Chandler, United States senator from New Hampshire, contributes to Zion's Herald of last week a trenchant article, headed, "Some reasons why I shall act and vote with the republican party." He sums up the claims of the party for support at this time as follows:

1st, Upon its supreme devotion to the protection of home industries and American labor by adequate customs duties;

2d, Upon its persistent demand for free and honest suffrage for both white and black citizens;

3d, Upon its consistent adherence to the temperance cause, proved by its enactment and maintenance of all the temperance legislation which exists in the United States.

His Accounts all Right.

A Washington despatch of Sept. 29th says: Lieut. Robert Craig, U. S. A., formerly the disbursing officer of the signal service, whose accounts to the amount of $600,000 were suspended by the accounting officers of the treasury department, has received a certificate that all his accounts have been finally allowed and settled.

There never was the slightest shadow of a suspicion of grounds for the suspension of his accounts. The trouble is, that Cleveland has got in the treasury as accounting officers some of the very smallest men who ever rattled 'round in big places—men who, while their financial breadth of mind might be equal to the successful management of a peanut stand, are entirely out of place in the United States treasury department. As treasury officials they are even worse failures than was Vilas as postmaster general, and his whole end and aim in conducting the postal affairs of the nation was to save a dollar here and there wherever he could, entirely regardless of the fact that a large part of the "cheap" service he secured (the total was bigger than ever) would have been dear even if rendered gratuitously.

Cleveland got rid of Vilas by making him a judge of the supreme court; now if he could only get rid of Durham!

Says the Boston Globe: "It is the democracy now that stands for liberty and progress, just as the republican party stood in Lincoln's time." Twenty years hence the Globe will probably be telling its readers that it is the democratic party that now stands for protection to home industries, just as the republican party stood in 1888.

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought foward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

WINTER HURRYING UP.

Snow fell quite generally throughout the northern part of New Hampshire on Saturday night, to the depth of an inch or more. Moosilauke mountain in Warren was white with snow on Monday. Potatoes were frozen in the ground and fruit on the trees at Contoocook, Sunday night.

The tobacco crop of Virginia was greatly damaged by frost, Friday and Saturday nights, much of it being ruined.

The cranberry crop on Cape Cod was greatly damaged by frosts on Saturday and Sunday nights.

Snow fell throughout England on Monday.

The New York Sun, which is the special champion of Gov. Hill's re-election, calls attention to the fact that a printed form pledging support to Cleveland but opposition to Hill, is being circulated among democratic voters. The Sun says that this should stop, and remarks rather ominously that it is especially for Mr. Cleveland's interest to see that it does stop. Meanwhile the sound of the grinding of the democratic knives is not yet low in New York.

The southern democrats in the house, who were so strongly opposed to the conferring of a pension upon Mrs. Sheridan, last Friday allowed to pass without objection a bill appropriating $25,000 to the widow of a southern man, notwithstanding that the files of the southern claims commission, which had been called to their attention, furnished conclusive evidence of her husband's disloyalty during the war.

According to one report, Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun has said that Cleveland will receive a larger majority in the electorial college than any president has received since Grant; and according to another report, he has said that the political contest is practically settled, and that Harrison will be elected. The first story, Mr. Dana in a last week's issue of the Sun denounced as a lie. But how about the other story?

Gen. Benet acknowledges that the circular relative to the political affiliations of workingmen, women and children to be employed in the United States arsenals, said to have been issued by him to commandants of arsenals, was so issued, with the approval of Mr. Endicott, the reform secretary of war.

In the house last week the senate resolution appropriating $100,000 for the relief of yellow fever sufferers, with amendments, was passed.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

Prof. Geo. H. Kalteyer, the well known chemist of Texas, investigated the baking powder question, and wrote: "I submitted Prof. Horsford's preparation to a chemical examination, and found it composed of pure and non-poisonous materials. The idea of Prof. Hosford was, indeed a good one, in supplanting the indigestible tartrates, which are the final result of all cream tartar baking powders, by the soluble phosphates, the very nutritive property of bread, and the bone-producing element of nature. It is certainly the best and most healthful bread-raising preparation ever offered to the public."

George H. Adams, better known as "Jack" Adams, for many years a saloon keeper in Concord, died suddenly in that city Oct. 1st, aged about fifty years.

One hundred veterans of the Twelfth New Hampshire regiment arrived at Gettysburg, Pa., on the evening of Sept. 28th, and dedicated their monument on the battlefield next day.

Dexter P. Webster of Belmont, better known as the "squash king of Belknap county," estimates the yield of that vegetable in his garden patch this year to be fifteen tons. The yield for the past ten years has averaged ten tons per year, which with the present product, aggregates 115 tons in eleven years.

Last night when one of the young democratic drum corps was marching up Third street some of the hoodlums of that section rushed upon them and captured one of the drums into which they kicked a hole, and demoralized the players. When they found out that they had assaulted their own party they apologized, and offered to pay for the drum head.—Dover Democrat.

Over 40,000 people crowded the polo grounds in New York city last Saturday evening, to greet Hon. James G. Blaine, who on that evening made his first speech in the Harrison and Morton campaign outside of Maine.

Two more women were murdered in Whitechapel, London, on the night of Sept. 29th. They were both dissolute characters, and as in the cases of the former mysterious murders of women in that locality their throats were cut, and they were disembowelled. The wildest terror exists in Whitechapel over the repeated crimes, while the police seem to be paralyzed.

There was a lively row in Dover on Sunday evening, between a number of the Italian laborers engaged on the new water works, and a party of Irishmen, in which several persons received ugly cuts and bruises. The evidence offered in the Dover police court Monday tended to show that the fight was due to an unprovoked attack upon a few of the Italians by some Irishmen.

JACKSONVILLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The subscription fund for the Jacksonville sufferers will be closed on Wednesday night, the 3d inst., and the amount will be forwarded to the mayor of Jacksonville on Thursday morning.

GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.

RANCH NO. 10.

Mr. J. Clinton Hall and a competent company appeared at the Grand Opera house last evening in "Ranch 10," a stirring drama, designed to illustrate the salient features of border life. Mr. Hall, in the dual role of Al and Tom McClelland, the twin brothers, renewed the success that attended his last appearance here, and was heartily applauded for his pains-taking efforts. He is a most conscientious actor, and identifies himself with his part so closely as to make his acting realistic in the extreme. The support throughout was excellent. "Ranch 10" is a play full of thrilling situations, and with its wealth of beautiful scenery, its strong cast of characters, its comic situations, its music and melody, it will always prove an excellent attraction.

CHEAP EXCURSION.

A cheap excursion from Boston to New York and return is advertised, at $5 for the round trip, the ticket-holder being given the choice of the three direct all-rail lines (the New York & New England, the Old Colony "Shore line" and the Boston & Albany) from Boston to New York, and of the three Sound lines (the Norwich, the Providence and the Fall River) from New York to Boston, tickets good going on Thursday, Oct. 4th, and returning on the 5th or 6th. Ticket holders desiring to remain in New York a few days can do so, on payment of an additional dollar at the wharf office of the Sound line by which they select to return.

Advertisement with particulars in another column.

SNOWED IN.

Mr. Dan M. Camp, the energetic and popular manager of the restaurant at the Boston & Maine railroad station in this city, is on a vacation trip among the mountains, using his own team as a means of conveyance. A despatch was on Monday received in this city from Mr. Camp by a friend, stating that he was snowed in at Fabyan's, and didn't know as he should be able to get home till May. A despatch was sent back offering to forward him a sleigh and snow shoes by rail, but no response to this offer has been received.

Y. M. C. A.

The union meeting in the North church on Sunday evening was well attended, and was addressed by Mr. Lawrence of Portland, Me., who is in this city to promote and organize a Young Men's Christian Association. His subject was the origin and growth of the society throughout the world, and it showed without a chance for doubt, that the society has had a wonderful success. We published in our paper about two months ago the complete history of this society from its origin up to the present time, and which embraced the topic's that were, to a considerable extent included in Mr. Lawrence's address. We hope our citizens will aid him in his good work, as every person must realize by this time the need of the Y. M. C. A.

PERSONAL.

Mr. A. J. Hoyt, of the Exeter Protest, was in this city on Monday.

Miss Florence A. Webb, who has been visiting friends in this city for the past week, returned to her home in Cape Elizabeth, Me., on Monday.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Daniel P. Marston has been drawn to serve as petit juror from ward three at the October term of the supreme court.

The "Whatsoever" Band of King's Daughters will hold a sale of home-made cake and preserves at St. John's chapel on Thursday, Oct. 4th, from four to nine o'clock, in aid of the Jacksonville sufferers. Ice cream and cake served throughout the evening.

Mr. John M. Tibbetts and wife are in New York this week, selecting a full line of pattern hats and bonnets for their autumn trade.

The society of the Court street Christian church will have before long, without a doubt, a new edifice in which to worship, as the funds are coming in quite rapidly; but still more is needed, and we hope our citizens will respond liberally in helping them to raise the required amount. The new church will be built on the site of the present one.

A private letter received in this city recently from a former Portsmouth man, now in southern Indiana, says: "The old rebel element has been rampant here, but the republicans have them on the run—they are used to it—and will make them hunt their holes; Indiana is good for Harrison and Morton by 15,000 votes, in November."

Master Arthur I. Harriman, of No. 22 Deer street, has a very fine collection of fancy pigeons, of the best breeds, to which he is constantly adding. Most noticeable among (though not the handsomest) are a pair of genuine Cinnamon Tumblers. He also has some of the following breeds, which came from principal dealers in these birds: Fantails, Clayring Turbits, Whitewing Turbits, Jacobins, Magpies, Tumblers and a number of other varieties. Master Harrtman is always willing to exhibit his birds, and his coops have been visited by many persons, who have expressed much pleasure in watching these handsome pigeons, most of them being quite tame.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Court street Christian church are making arrangements for an entertainment to be given in Grand Army hall on Thursday evening, Oct. 11th. This will open the series of entertainments to be given by this society during the fall and winter months, and which were so popular last season.

Mr. M. H. Sullivan, who acted as manager of the Rockingham house during the summer while Mr. Hill was at the Wentworth, served his connection with the hotel on Saturday last, and will leave about the first of November for Bermuda, to take charge of the Hamilton house there during the winter.

Mr. Newton Johnston of this city has been appointed station agent of the Concord railroad at Suncook, in place of Mr. Dennison, resigned.

The Concord & Portsmouth railroad has stationed a flagman at the Creek crossing in this city—the Bartlett avenue crossing, we believe it is called—and Mr. James A. Waterhouse commenced peforming the flagman's duties there on Monday morning.

The first annual entertainment of Court Rockingham, No. 7539, Ancient Order of Foresters, of this city, will be held in Franklin hall on Thursday evening of this week. Mortimer L. Raynes, John Griffin, John Cassidy, William J. Conlon, Richard T. Call and Robert J. Donnelly are the committee of arrangements.

The schooner Carrie G. Crosby sailed from Rockland, Me., last Friday evening at six o'clock, and arrived here on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, with 800 bbls. of lime to J. Albert Walker.

Mr. Wm. F. Fernald is getting out, in York, timber for the only ship that is likely to be built, the present season, on the Piscataqua. She will be a coastwise vessel of the famous "Gondola" type, and will be apt to do active service under command of Capt. Cheney, unless prevented by President Cleveland's complications with the British government.

The conference committee on the bill for the relief of the sufferers by the wreck of the U. S. S. Tallapoosa, sunk in Vineyard Sound by collision while on the trip from this port to New York, reached an agreement on Sept. 27th, and the bill went to the president for signature. The bill as finally agreed to allows each of the officers of the vessel $750, which is $50 more than granted by the house and $250 less than the amount originally allowed by the senate. Each of the crew receive $100, and the heirs of those who were lost a sum equal to twelve months' sea pay of each person lost. The following officers and petty officers are beneficiaries to the extent of $750 each: John F. Merry, lieutenant-commander; William H. Everett, lieutenant; Frank E. Beatty, lieutenant, junior grade; Nathan P. Towne, passed assistant engineer; W. B. Whittlesey, ensign; O. C. Tiffany, passed assistant engineer; Hugh Kuhl, mate; James W. Baxter, mate; L. B. Gallagher, mate; Leonard Hanscom, carpenter; James Bishop, Jr., pay clerk; Thomas B. Kramer, apothecary. Lieut. W. H. Jaques is allowed $115 for loss of a portion of his naval uniform.

The Ladies' Clifford quartette will give a concert in the Congregational church at Eliot on Friday evening, Oct. 12th, commencing at 7:30 o'clock.

Ephraim C. Spinney, Esq., of Kittery, was in this city on Saturday, and to an old-time democrat remarked; "Parties change, but principles never change. I declare that I have the same principles as ever. But when a candidate does not suit your opinions, the best way is to put him out. The officers are the servants of the officers, according to the old democratic doctrine. I have been a democrat all my life, but I am not so enthusiastic as I used to be."

Rev. William G. Mann of Monson, Me., has accepted a pastoral call from the Second Congregational church of Biddeford, and will begin his labors with that church on October 7th.

Operations in the plush department of the Sanford (York county) mills have suspended for a time, owing to the depression in the market caused by the agitation of free trade measures. The company has fully $100,000 worth of plushes, unfinished, in its warehouses.

Arthur L. Hanscom of Eliot has been appointed a justice of the peace and quorum by Gov. Marble of Maine.

The York County Bar association on Thursday, Sept. 27th, in the afternoon, presented to the court at Alfred resolutions of respect to the memory of the late Hon. Increase S. Kimball of Sanford.

Miss Emerson of York Harbor is building a cottage at the harbor, to be rented for a summer residence; and several other houses are to be erected there for the same purpose, during the coming winter and spring.

Mr. William Furbish of Beech Ridge, York, has built a road through the Emerson field near Sewall's bridge, to cross the dam at the millpond, and come out near Mrs. Eastman's on the old road to York Harbor, shortening the distance from Sewall's bridge a quarter of a mile, and opening up some of the finest building lots on the York river. The property was recently purchased by Mr. Huldekoper. The ice house which was on the place has been taken down.

There was launched last week from the yard of B. W. & H. F. Morse, at Bath, Me., the tug H. F. Morse, the largest and most powerful towboat in the world, being ten feet longer than the B. W. Morse, previously the largest and most powerful towboat afloat. Her dimensions are: Length 157 feet, breadth thirty feet, depth seventeen feet; gross tonnage, about 450; the net tonnage, after the engines and boilers are in, will be about 250. She is expected to easily make sixteen knots per hour, when running light, and will be capable of towing four large coal barges at once. She is owned by the several members of the Morse family, and will be used by the Morse Transportation company of Boston and New York, in towing the fleet of twenty coal barges owned by the firm.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

The Dover Democrat of Saturday evening, Sept. 29th, published the following, sent on that date by its regular correspondent in this city:

The democrats of senatorial district No. 24 were very unfortunate in their failure to exercise a little political shrewdness in the choice of a candidate for that much coveted seat in the senate. The choice of Urch, an eager aspirant for the candidacy, was bitterly opposed in every ward. In ward one at the senatorial delegate caucus he failed to secure a single delegate, out of a total of six; in ward two he not only met with a similar defeat, where the same number of delegates were chosen, but certain bitter resolutions were read, and unanimously adopted with a wild yell. The resolutions instructed the delegates that under no consideration should they cast a vote for David Urch. In ward four, the "Major's" own stronghold, he secured for himself the two delegates to which that ward is entitled, by a majority of two. So out of the total number of delegates (fourteen) the "Major" secured two. As a result of this bitter opposition the field was left open to the only other active competitor, the "butter and eggs" statesman, who finished the race twelve laps ahead, and came in victorious. Whether or not in this case the word victory has an empty significance, remains to be seen. As soon as it became known that William Conn, formerly a prominent politician of great prominence in the Know Nothing party, had been selected as the demodratic candidate for seat No. 24 in the New Hampshire senate, a formidable opposition was at once raised among the Catholic element, which it will be hard to put down. The error of their choice was not made evident until the deed was done. Had they nominated Dr. Langdon there wouldn't have been the slightest opposition in the party, and he would have been a dangerous opponent of the republican candidate. As the situation is at the present time Col. Dimick will have a complete walk over, and the only consolation the democrats will have will lay in the words, "It might have been."

LITTLEFIELD'S

Constitutional

COUGH SYRUP

— FOR —

CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.

MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD.

Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup.

Concord railroad wharf since Jan. 1st, 1888, than in any entire year previous to this. The largest amount of coal ever discharged in one year was 160,000 tons. Up to Sept. 27th, this year, 172,000 tons of coal had been discharged, an increase of 12,000 tons over any previous year, with three months yet remaining. It is estimated that over 200,000 tons will be received at the Concord wharf this year. Besides the unloading of this coal, over 100,000 railroad ties have been received and shipped. Of the 100,000 ties, 60,000 were for the Northern railroad, and 40,000 for the Concord road.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold only in half-pound tins, by Grocers, labelled thus:

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a clear skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Many a babe is hurried out of the world by powerful opiates. Mothers, use Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup the safest and best baby medicine in the world.

Many diseases arise from vitated or impure blood, therefore keep the system healthy and proof against the inroads of disease by using Laxador.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

If you would have a desirable head of hair, use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the most wonderful discovery of modern times for the hair and scalp.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

Sufferers from the effects of quinine, used as a remedy for chills and fever, should try Ayer's Ague Cure. This preparation is a powerful tonic, wholly vegetable, and without a particle of any noxious drug. Warranted a sure cure.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C Calhoun.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. CONSUMPTION CURED.

As old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. 6eowtjan29

Remarked to a friend the other day that she knew Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs was a superior remedy, as it stopped her cough instantly when other cough remedies had no effect whatever. So to prove this and convince you of its merit, any druggist will give you a sample bottle free. Large size 50c. and $1.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

among sailors that the Finns are skilled in magic. If the following story, which is told by a seaman, is true, then these people are more than a match for the Pied Piper of Hamelin in dealing with rats. He was once shipmate with a Russian Finn who had all the horn buttons eaten off his oilskin clothing by the rats. So, on the next dog watch after he found it out, the Finlander went to the forehatch, and, sticking his sheath knife upright in the deck, called upon all the rats in the ship to appear before him. Up came all the rats, one after the other, and crawled before him in solemn procession, rat after rat, every rat in the ship, until hundreds of rats had passed closed by his feet. Then there was a delay, and the Russian Finn called in a louder tone the same words he had called at first. Instantly a poor, little, perspiring, bedraggled rat, with all its hair turned the wrong way, limped out of the hatchway, and went up to the upright sheath knife, and sawed its own head off!—The Argonaut.

Method of Extinguishing Fires.

An English fireman writes: "From experiments I have lately been making in a small way I believe that fires may be put out by an admixture of plaster of paris and alum. Say, for instance, that a fire breaks out in a building or warehouse, and that a bag containing 500 or 600 pounds of the above mixture be thrown on the fire, I believe that it would completely subdue it.

"It may be considered at first sight that it would be difficult to introduce a heavy sack into a burning building. This could be obviated if, after experiments, say by the fire brigade, the ingredients were found to act. I would make it compulsory to have an incombustible pulley block projecting from every house or building so that the sack of composite could be hauled up in a few minutes.

"If a few sacks were always in readiness at the nearest fire station, lashed to a truck or barrow ready for use, many valuable lives and much property would be saved."—London Fireman.

Simple Indian Remedies.

The Indians on the plains have a number of simple remedies for ordinary ills that are very effective. For instance, on a burn, a cut or a sting of a wasp they at once put soft mud, usually mixed with saliva. When a man hiccoughs they get him to sneeze, and the sneeze usually ends the attack. On a boil they blow for minutes at a time, keeping the sore place damp at the same time, and thus evaporating the moisture. For a bleeding nose they stuff the nostril with dust in an aggravated case. For a light cold they wrap a wet cold rag about the throat at night and sleep with it on. They are great believers in the curative powers of mud, and they use it for a great many kinds of sickness, especially any one in which there are violent shooting pains, in which cases the moistened clay is applied as hot as the sufferer can bear it. I have tried almost all of their remedies and found them effective.—Chicago News.

The Scales Evenly Balanced.

Nowhere else in nature do the scales of retributive justice seem to be so evenly balanced as among the little people of the water. Looking at this fact as it affects the frog, it will be seen that while snakes devour frogs in great numbers, frogs eat young snakes. The same thing applies to the crawfishes, which in maturity prey upon tadpoles, while the mature frog esteems anything better than a crusty little crawfish. Time and again when turtles are given credit for dragging down and drowning young ducks, the bull frog is the real culprit; and a constant slaughter goes on in ponds where both abound with the catfish as the aggressor and adolescent frogs the victims on the one hand, and mature frogs butchering the little cats on the other. Water spiders and beetles are popularly supposed to be at the mercy of frogs; but in reality the young frog has no more deadly enemies than aquatic insects.—Henry Newport in Detroit Free Press.

A Clergyman's Criticism.

A clergyman who has married hundreds of couples among the fashionable circles of our seaboard cities, said lately: "The criticism may seem uncharitable, but it is a matter of sober fact that in half of the marriages which come under my observation, there was reason to suppose that the motive of either bride or bridegroom was to better her or his worldly condition."

The reason of this is, not that the young American is less capable of deep, unselfish feeling than the young men of other nations, but that he has learned to attach more importance than they do to the luxuries and display of life. He has not the money to provide as comfortable or splendid a home for his wife as his father has given him, hence he looks out for a "girl with money," who will and can provide it for herself.—Youth's Companion.

Relics at High Prices.

A tooth of Sir Isaac Newton was sold in 1816 for the sum of $3,650. It was purchased by a nobleman who had it set in a ring which he wore constantly on his finger. The hat worn by Napoleon Bonaparte at the battle of Eylau was sold in Paris in 1835 for $400. It was put up for sale at $100, and there were thirty-two bidders. The coat worn by Charles XII at the battle of Pultawa, and preserved by one of his officers and attendants, was sold in 1825 for $116,875. The two pens employed in signing the treaty of Amiens were sold in 1826 for $2,500. A wig that had belonged to Sterne was sold at a public auction in London for $1,050. The prayer book used by Charles I when on the scaffold was sold in London in 1825 for $525. A waistcoat belonging to J. J. Rousseau was sold for $190, and his metal watch for $100.—American Notes and Queries.

A French Political Joke.

The French police have received instructions to discover the authors of an ingenious political trick, which consists of defacing the coins of Napoleon III and substituting the name of Boulanger I, empereur, with the date 1888. So far the substitution has been confined to 10-centime pieces, and has been treated as a political joke.—New York Sun.

Books, Magazines, Etc.

Lee & Shepard, Boston, have published in attractive bindings in their "Good Company series" of books, Douglas Jerrold's "Fireside Saints," containing Mrs. Caudle's Breakfast-Talk, the Hedgehog Letters, and other papers; the Breakfast-Talk is a characteristic sequel to Mrs. Caudle's Curtain Lectures, and will please those who have looked upon Mrs. Caudle as a witty libel upon the sex.

The "Wishing Cap Papers", by Leigh Hunt; "Good Company" series. There is much to amuse and instruct in this volume, while contains articles of an agreable variety, abounding in rich description of nature, good-natured speculations on human life, etc.

"Religious Duty" and "Broken Lights," by Frances Power Cobbe; "Good Company" series. These works show an earnest and reverent enquiry into the present condition and future prospects of religious faith.

All the books of this series are uniform in size and binding. For sale in Portsmouth by M. Goodrich; price fifty cents per volume.

"Mrs. Partington's Edition of Mother Goose's Melodies; illustrated with over 100 engravings; part of the songs being set to music." "Songs of Our Darlings," uniform with Mrs. Partington's Mother Goose, both being edited by Uncle Willis. Lee & Shepard, Boston, publishers; for sale in this city by M. Goodrich; price, each book, thirty cents in paper covers, fifty cents in boards.

"Up the North Branch: or, A Summer's Outing," is the fourth number of the Lake and Forest series by Capt. Charles A. J. Farrar, published by Lee & Shepard, and is a record of sports and adventures on a camping-out trip up the north branch of the Penobscot river, Maine, down the St. John river, and through the wilds of Maine and New Hampshire, by members of the Lake & Forest club. Like the other books of this series, it contains much information of practical use to amateur woodsmen, making it not only interesting but instructive. For sale by Mercer Goodrich, at $1.25.

A Life on the Ocean Wave

Indurates the stomach against sea sickness, but a single or occasional transit across the "illimitable wetness" is productive of grievous qualms, especially when it is stormy. Ocean travelers, ship surgeons, yachtmen, commercial buyers sent abroad, voyages by steamboat, and all who are occasionally or frequently called upon to be where "billows are buffeted," should take along Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest known antidote for seasickness, malaria, billiousness, and disorders of the stomach and bowels. Many travelers by railroad, with delicate stomachs and nerves, likewise suffer severely en route. These will find the Bitters surely hepful and consolatory. Traveling, even in swift, steady and commodious steamships and sumptuous palace cars, is not always a source of unmixed joy and delight, and the Bitters does much to counteract the discomforts attending it, aggravated by delicate health. Rheumatism, brought on by damp weather, kidney troubles and debility, are effectually relieved by the Bitters.

TREES' SANITARY INFLUENCE.

Their Relation to Dwelling Houses and to Individual Health.

For the last few years public attention has been quite frequently called to the influence of trees upon climate. The special issue of the United States agricultural department on forestry, and many other contributions, have shown how rainfall is affected, how the balance of the atmosphere is disturbed and how climate changes from the extended and rapid removal of forests. There is another study of trees allied to this which has reference to their relation to houses and to individual health.

Both the atmosphere and the soil are cooled and moistened by the presence of trees. This results from the drawing up of the water from the subsoil and from the exclusion of the sun's rays. Besides this, a considerable portion of the rainfall collects on the leaves and branches. M. Fantiat has shown "that the leafage of leaf-bearing trees intercepts one-third and that of pine trees one-half of the rainfall, which is afterward returned to the atmosphere by evaporation. On the other hand, these same leaves and branches restrain the evaporation of the water which reaches the ground. This evaporation is nearly four times less under a mass of foliage in a forest, and 2 1-3 times under a mass of pines, than in the open." Then we have stagnation of air from that interruption of wind currents caused by the foliage.

It is, therefore, not without reason that the sanitarian studies the trees of the yard or lawn in their bearing upon individual health. Persons of susceptible lungs, or having any tendency to rheumatism, need to be carefully guarded against such influences. Where the foliage is dense about houses, or where the limbs overshadow the piazzas or roof, they become the storage places for damp, unwholesome air. The falling leaves gathering from year to year give a corresponding dampness to the soil, while at time of foliage the sunshine is measurably excluded. It is pretty evident that mankind was not intended to be reared in the woods. The influence of trees in causing malaria, or in so intercepting it as to have it tarry among them, has long been known. "A dry garden on gravel of three acres in extent in Surrey, surrounded by trees, is generally three or six degrees colder than the open common beyond the trees, and a large pond in a pine wood twenty miles from London afforded skating for ninety consecutive days in the winter of 1885-6, while during the greater part of the time the lakes in the London parks were free from ice."

We know with what interest the lover of trees watches the growth of those planted by his own hand, and how many are apt to be scattered about the new home mansion. As years go on, and their growth and foliage increase, the owner is loth to remove them or severely to shorten their branches. If so, there is great danger that the dry soil and once comfortable home will come to be the dampest and least desirable spot in the neighborhood. A recent careful writer has given the following sensible direction as to tree planting as it bears upon the conditions of health: "A tree should not stand so near a house that if it were to fall it would fall upon the house, or, in other words, the trunk should be as far from the house as the height of the tree. Belts of trees may be planted on the north and east aspects of houses, but on the east side the trees should not be so near nor so high as to keep the morning sun from the bedroom windows in the shorter days of the year. On the south and west aspects of houses, isolated trees only should be permitted, so that there may be free access of the sunshine and of the west winds to the house and grounds. High wall and palings on these aspects are also objectionable, and should be replaced by fences, or, better still, by open palings, especially if the houses are occupied during the fall of the leaf and in the winter.

"Trees for planting should be chosen in the following order: Conifers, birch, acacia, beech, oak, elm, lime and poplar. For our American homes we must add the maple, the ash and the tulip tree, or American poplar, although the dense foliage of the maple is sometimes objectionable. Pine trees collect the greatest amount of rainfall and permit the freest evaporation from the ground, while their branchless stems offer the least degree of resistance to the lateral circulation of the air. Acacias, oaks and birches are late to burst into leaf, and therefore allow the ground to be warmed by the sun's rays in the early spring. The elm, lime and chestnut are the least desirable kind of trees to plant near houses. They come into leaf early and cast their leaves early, so that they exclude the spring sun and do not afford much shade in the hot autumn months, when it is often required. Trees are of value in indicating choice of residence. Rich foliage, ferns and mosses tell of dampness and alluvial deposits. Flowers and fruit trees point to a dry and sunny site. Children will be healthiest where most flowers grow, and old people will live longest where our common fruits ripen best. Pines and their companions, the birches, indicate a sandy or gravel soil, elms a rich and somewhat damp soil, oaks and ashes a heavy clay, poplars and willows a low, damp or marshy soil. Let then our æsthetics be tempered by our desires for health, and choice and abundance of trees be adapted to our sanitary needs."—Medical Classics.

The Sensible Are Sociable.

I have often wondered what it was that made men affable, and why there should exist so many degrees of sociability. After pondering over this question, I have concluded that while intellect cuts a large figure in making a man affable, often the main reason may be found in self interest. A boor always shows that he is deficient in common sense, and gains absolutely nothing by his rudeness but the dislike of his fellows. A sensible man will always be civil.—Nashville Democrat.

PROGRESS.

I have learned
This doctrine from the vanishing of youth,
The pictured primer, true, is thrown aside;
But its first lesson liveth in my heart,
I shall go on through all eternity.

An atom that shall fill immensity.

GOLD LEAF SIGNS.

How the Secret of Making Gold Leaf Stick to the Glass Was Discovered.

"The reason that so many gold leaf signs on glass rub off," said a painter as he paused in putting some gold leaf on a sign, "is that people don't pay enough for the work. If you look at the gold leaf above the door of the Merchants' National bank you will find it as good as when it was put on in 1873. The best signs are those in the railroad windows in Broadway. They were done by George H. McCarthy, the most expert man in the business. Those signs done right along, without waiting for each portion to thoroughly dry and harden, are always poorly done."

"How is the work done on glass?"

"The glass is first moistened with a size made of isinglass dissolved in hot water. The gold leaf sticks to that. Letters are then perfectly formed on the back of the gold in varnish. When the varnish is dry we wipe off the gold with a piece of wet cotton. Then it is shaded, and then varnished again to preserve it. Good work, which people get when they pay for it, allows full time for each of these processes."

"Is there any secret about the size of isinglass?"

"There isn't now. It used to be a very close secret. It was brought here in 1850 by an Englishman named Hale. He used to do up the signs in a style that American painters couldn't touch. They tried their best to discover the secret of the size he used, but couldn't catch him. Other Englishmen came over, and they had all the good gold leaf business to themselves. I was working as an apprentice of 13 in 1856 for John McCarthy, who had the secret. Every time he wanted to mix the size he would send me out to buy an egg and to get a piece of charcoal. Then he would send me up stairs. One day I got the egg and charcoal and went up stairs as usual. I had a hole in the floor over the stove, and I went one eye on him. He put the charcoal in the stove and burned it. Then he cracked and sucked the egg. Next he took out of his pocket a little paper and poured out of it something white into the water. After I had come down stairs and he had gone out I looked around on the floor and found some white threads of something, I didn't know what. I concluded to go to the druggist's where he bought it. There I asked for twenty-five cents' worth of it, and told the clerk I didn't know the name.

"'Isinglass you mean,' he said.

"'So he put it up, and I mixed some size. One day I was working away making some gold letters on glass myself, and in comes McCarthy. He looked at me pretty sharp and said:

"'Where did you get that size?'

"'Oh, I got an egg and run the white through a piece of charcoal to clarify it,' I replied.

"He didn't say another word. I gave away the secret and practically ran the Englishmen out, for the Americans can work faster than they."—New York Evening Sun.

A Brutal Ruler.

Rosas, for many years dictator of the Argentine states, was a capricious tyrant, who turned the republic into a slaughter shed. He once invited a number of Indian chiefs to meet him in council at Buenos Ayres. After parading them with mock honors through the streets of the city, he had them brought under the portico of the cathedral, where a number of gibbets stood ready. In a moment the chiefs were seized, bound and run up, and their bodies were left dangling in the air.

He once played an ape like trick on the British minister, Mr. Mandeville, whom the tyrant feared and hated. One of the favorite dishes of the people is mazamorra, which is made from maize crushed in a mortar. Rosas was expecting the minister to visit him one evening at his country house. As the hour arrived Manuelita, his beautiful daughter, acting on her father's orders, stood on the veranda, pounding maize.

The Englishman, finding her thus engaged in menial labor and showing signs of fatigue, courteously offered to relieve her. After faintly declining, she allowed him to pound the maize, when suddenly Rosas, who had been watching, appeared on the veranda accompanied by a train of courtiers. His object had been to show to them the envoy of England engaged in servile labor under the roof of the dictator.—Youth's Companion.

A Woman's Description of Herself.

In the memoirs of Prince Adam Czartoyski, just published, his wife, Princess Elizabeth, thus describes herself: "I was never handsome, but I have often been pretty, and I have beautiful eyes, and as all my feelings are reflected in them the expression on my face is always interesting. My complexion is white enough to be almost brilliant when I blush; a smooth forehead does not make my face ugly, and my nose completes the symmetry of my features. My mouth is large, my teeth white, my smile amiable, and the shape of my face a graceful oval. I have enough hair to make an easy and becoming headdress. My figure is elegant, my bust perhaps too thin, my hands ugly, but my feet are charming, and there is much grace in my movements. I have an extreme desire to please, and am skillful in showing both my physical and mental qualities to the best advantage. Though vain and ill tempered, I am endowed with such tact that I never do anything which does not give pleasure," etc.—Literary World.

Two Valuable Church Bells.

There are two church bells at Messilla, Mexico, that are valuable. They were cast in 1775, and it is said that just before the casting was made at least $1,000 worth of gold and silver jewelry was dropped into the molten mass of metal by the devout, who thought thus to propitiate their patron saints. The bells are to be melted and the precious metals recovered.—New York Sun.

Startling Facts.

One important issue of this campaign, that has been almost lost sight of in the extended discussion of the tariff question, is the monumental extravagance of this administration, so apparent as to become startling in its scope and effect. Congressman Cannon, in a recent speech, let daylight into the profuse and reckless manner in which the democracy in power are increasing the public expenditures and reducing the alleged surplus. One of the harps upon which the democracy had incessantly played for twenty-five years was the corrupt and shameful waste of money by the republicans, and in 1884 their appeal to the people in behalf of "retrenchment and reform" was enough to draw tears from a crocodile. "Give us the government," cried they beseechingly, "and see how quickly we will reduce expenses and bring the finances down to an honest hardpan basis." Well, they have had the reins for four years, and what do we see? The regular annual appropriations for the last four years under Cleveland exceed those under Arthur by $96,385.79, or more than twenty-four millions each year!

Again: In the campaign of 1884 the stumpers for Cleveland talked and raved about the unnecessary and over-paid army of officials fastened like barnacles upon the public treasury, and pledged with loud-mouthed assurance that they should be promptly removed, if Cleveland was given power. Have they been removed? Yes; and in hundred of cases less competent men put in their places. Are their numbers decreased? Not much. From an official statement of the clerk of the house of representative it is shown that there has been an increase of seven hundred and ninety-nine new offices under this administration, at an aggregate annual pay of $762,316.50!

Again: Much talk was made in 1884 about exorbitant salaries; "hundreds of officials," they said, "were drawing maximum salaries for minimum services. Salaries must and shall be reduced—when Cleveland gets in." Does the record show a big slice of revenue from reduced salaries? "After a careful examination," says Mr. Cannon, "I find that the number of salaries reduced under this administration is 0, and the annual saving by the reduction of salaries is 0!" On the contrary, the record shows that the salaries of 350 officials have been increased at an annual cost of $52,431.90!

Are democratic officials more competent than republicans that they should be paid more? Not so competent, in many cases. But their pockets are bigger and their campaign assessments are higher.

S.S.S. STILLINGS FOR THE BLOOD TRADE MARK

PERD'S HILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without proof, and began to despair of curing her at all. Was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the diseases all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child has just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. N. C. WAGGONER.

RICH HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl when but three weeks old broke out with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and heavy head of hair—a robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, R. T. SNODE.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1881 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Chase Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit. HARDY M. BURR, 15 West Ninth St.

HOMER, LA., May 26, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again. All that the physicians did or could do gave me no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course, my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it; for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. F. BADGER, J. P.

HOMER, LA.—I know Mr. W. F. Bridges, and will say that his statement is correct. JOSEPH BERLTON, Druggist.

It Was Merely a Campaign Lie, Of Course.

On the 23d ultimo William Condon, an Irish resident of Bloomington, Ill., had published an affidavit in which he swore that in a speech made by Gen. Benjamin Harrison on November 2, 1876, in that city, Harrison made use of the following language:

"You all know what they (the Irish) are. If it were not for them we would not need half our penitentiaries, which are almost full of them. They are only good to shovel dirt and grade railroads, for which they receive more than they are worth, as they are no acquisition to American people."

On the 1st inst, the Bloomington Pantagraph published the affidavits of thirty-four men who were in Gen. Harrison's audience on that occasion, all of whom flatly contradict Condon's statement, and declare that his charge against Harrison is wholly without foundation in fact, and totally untrue; that General Harrison did not use the words attributed to him, or any other words of similar tenor or effect. Among those who thus testify are Ex-Governor John M. Hamilton, Congressman Rowell, Hon. R. M. Benjamin, Messrs. D. M. and F. F. Funk, Hon. T. C. Kerrick, Col. John Reid and Edmund O'Connell, a prominent Irishman of Bloomington.

The campaign lie is a recognized weapon in democratic political warfare; witness the Morey letter, or the forgery sent out in this state two years ago, on the letter heads of the democratic state committee, in the hope of defeating Mr. Sawyer for governor. There are likely to be plenty more before Nov. 6th.

As Gen. Harrison since his nomination has made extempore addresses by the score, to people of all classes and conditions who have called upon him in bodies, and while he has not repeated himself once nor made a single flat or puerile speech, he has not uttered a sentence with which even the eager carpers of the democratic party can find fault, it is safe to assert that he is not an absolute idiot; and yet he must be assumed to be such, before credit could be given to the democratic stories about his making utterly idiotic statements, at times and under circumstances when there was no remote occasion for making any such remarks. Of course no intelligent person of either party ever believed that Gen. Harrison ever said that a dollar a day, and two meals, was enough for a workingman; but the yarn was not intended for intelligent people; it was intended for the ignorant and unthinking, and its occasional repetition by democratic papers, long after it has been proved to be merely a democratic eccentricity in dealing with the truth, is by no means complimentary to their readers.

"Confidential" Reform.

The circular sent by the war department to the commanding officers of arsenals, directing them to substitute democrats for republicans in the cases of men, women and children employed by the government, was marked "Confidential." Reformer Endicott will be asked some questions by the senate, as to the reason why an order issued on public business should be so marked.

Democratic Courtesy.

Hon. Henry W. Blair, United States senator from New Hampshire, on Monday by special invitation addressed the republicans of Charlottesville, Albert county, Virginia, on the political issues of the campaign. As he commenced speaking, a democrat in the audience threw four rotten eggs at him, one after the other. The fellow was quickly arrested, and Gen. Blair, who years ago heard rebel bullets whistle around his head too often to be now scared by a few democratic rotten eggs, after a brief and continued his discussion of the tariff.

The Yellow Fever.

The disease in Jacksonville, which on Sunday, Sept. 30th, seemed to be on the decrease, increased on the 1st inst., the new cases being ninety-nine and the deaths ten; total cases to date, 2725; deaths, 264. Weather cool, but frost not even hoped for until the last of the month.

All shot-gun quarantines in Mississippi having been given up, trains in that state and Louisiana commenced running regularly on the 1st inst. At Jackson, Miss., there were no new cases, and the people were cheerful.

The Norwegian brig Hardi, from Cuba for Boston, was spoken Sept. 27th off the capes of Delaware, with three of her crew sick with yellow fever, two having previously died.

New Hampshire Items.

A team stolen from a livery stable in Lowell, Mass., Sept. 28th, was found at Derry, this state, next day. The thief, Bernard Fowler alias Harry Hill, was arrested in Manchester on the 30th. He is wanted for stealing teams from Lawrence and other places.

Walter Elliott, aged sixteen years, was drowned in the river at Exeter on Sunday by the upsetting of a boat.

H. L. Kelton, a farmer of Winchester, aged fifty-five years, shot himself dead on Sunday.

Rev. G. W. Gallinger has resigned the pastorate of the Unitarian church in Keene.

The Amoskeag Veterans of Manchester, and invited guests, 108 persons all told, accompanied by Gov. Sawyer and staff, went to Portland on Monday for a two days trip.

Henry Fitch of Orford, democratic candidate for state senator from the 3d (Lebanon) district, was thrown from his wagon Saturday night and had his neck broken.

The democratic national committee, having been furnished by the department of the interior with a list of the names of all office holders and employes of the government in Washington, are sending to each one a begging circular calling for contributions to the democratic campaign fund.

John A. Gynan, aged fifty-six years, hung himself in his barn at Salem, Mass., Oct. 1st. He was under bonds to appear on a charge of receiving stolen property.

The Union savings bank of Fall River, Mass., losses $108,000 by the "irregularities" of its cashier, Chapin.

Delia A. Ruggles, a dressmaker of Lynn, Mass., is under arrest for setting fire to the house in which she lived. She confesses the crime, and says she was about to get married, and set the fire in order to get the insurance on her apparel.

A retired ship master of this city says that Florida at present is afflicted with yellow fever, mosquitoes, alligators and oranges.

It is reported that the committee on the building of one or more schoolhouses have purchased of Mr. Charles E. Walker the Hill place at the junction of State and Summer streets, for $7500, and Mr. Wm. H. Foster's residence on Summer street, for $2500, for a site for one of the proposed new buildings.

To Save Life

Frequently requires prompt action. An hour's delay waiting for the doctor may be attended with serious consequences, especially in cases of Croup, Pneumonia, and other throat and lung troubles. Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Prof. Geo. H. Kalteyer, the well known chemist of Texas, investigated the baking powder question, and wrote: "I submitted Prof. Horsford's preparation to a chemical examination, and found it composed of pure and non-poisonous materials. The idea of Prof. Horsford was, indeed a good one, in supplanting the indigestible tartrates, which are the final result of all cream tartar baking powders, by the soluble phosphates, the very nutritive property of bread, and the bone-producing element of nature. It is certainly the best and most healthful bread-raising preparation ever offered to the public."

To any one purchasing a bottle of Constitutional Cough Syrup of me and it does not give satisfaction I will refund the money. David Kimball & Co., No. 36 Market street.

Charles E. Peirce, hailing from South Berwick, Me., is held in $300 for the grand jury in Boston on a charge of stealing a check for $52.65 from B. W. Burtt of that city.

The York county cattle show and fair opened at the new Saco driving park on Tuesday, the 2d inst. The weather of Monday night and Tuesday was very unfavorable, but the show of cattle was large, and the hall exhibition unusually fine. Many fine trotting horses are entered for the racing events.

A valuable goat, the property of Mr. Horace Blake, was found dead in the woods back of his house on the morning of Sept. 26th. It was badly torn, and partly eaten by dogs—evidently the murderers. Mr. Blake thinks with his York Corner friends that dogs in his vicinity are "too much of a good thing."

We are wont to say, sometimes more hopefully than confidently, that "virtue has its own reward." But it is more gratifying to see it in every day life, and we are glad to be informed that Mr. Enoch Hutchins, of Kittery Point, has been nominated to a responsible and remunerative position on the navy yard. Mr. Hutchins has been a loyal defender of his party for many years, and is a substantial mechanic who has wrought his own fortune. His well known habits of industry and economy, to which we might add his benevolence to the needy, have set a very worthy example to his neighbors, and we doubt not that he will use well the larger opportunities now afforded him.

THE WEATHER.

For New England to-day:—

Fair, colder weather, high northwesterly winds. A "cold wave" may be expected.

JACKSONVILLE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

The subscription fund for the Jacksonville sufferers will be closed on Wednesday night, the 3d inst., and the amount will be forwarded to the mayor of Jacksonville on Thursday morning.

GEORGE E. HODGDON, Mayor.

"THEY DON'T BUY A POUND OF WESTERN PRODUCE."

Hon. Don M. Dickinson, the gentleman who was appointed postmaster general of the United States by President Cleveland in the hope that his acknowledged ability as a democratic wire-puller, backed up by the pernicious activity he would be expected to display in handling the administration patronage in Michigan, might carry that state for Cleveland and true reform, recently had himself interviewed by a reporter of that staunch Cleveland free trade paper, the Chicago Herald, and in that interview he said:

The west pays tribute and tax to New England and gets nothing in return for it. They don't buy a pound of western produce. They buy neither our flour nor our provisions. Talk about the manufacturing states affording a "home market!" They buy nothing from the west, but only sell their produce to us. The south buys from us, and takes our flour and provisions. The surplus we sell to England at her prices.

It may be said of this wild westerner that, although he is a mighty poor specimen of a postmaster general, he is a good deal better in that office than was Mr. Vilas, whom he succeeded; no person on earth could be worse. But when he talks about New England "not buying a pound of western produce," he demonstrates that a man may be a very superior democratic wire-puller and reform-administration striker, and yet be sadly lacking—either in intelligence, general information, or regard for the truth.

There is hardly a house in Portsmouth in which is not a barrel or bag of Haxall or St. Louis flour, not a grocery or provision store which does not keep in stock the products of the St. Louis and Minneapolis mills; more than nineteen-twentieths of the fresh meats, and the salt ones too, consumed in this city, come from Chicago—the city in which is published the paper wherein Mr. Dickinson's sublimely silly twaddle was printed; and at this very time a big refrigerator building for the storage of fresh meat is being put up in this city by a Chicago firm. And as it is in this city, so it is throughout New England, wherever a city or town is within reach of a railroad; very much the larger part of the meats and flour used is, and for years has been, of western production. Not only this, but New England is the most important customer of the west; and this is proved beyond a chance for dispute by the freight records of the railroads between the west and the east, and the fierce competition between them for the New England carrying trade. No one ever heard of a "freight war" on roads running from the western cities to the south; and the fact is, that the entire south does not buy one-half the amount of western products that is taken by the six little New England states. There is not in Portsmouth a democrat even who will not laugh at Don Dickinson's absurd assertions regarding New England's not purchasing the products of the west.

Having "done up" New England on the produce question, Mr. Dickinson proceeds to show that it was lacking in devotion to the Union during the rebellion of the south. He says:

The republicans of New England went into the war for the Union, not from motives of patriotism, but because they thought they could make money and injure the south. The state of Missouri sent more troops to the Union armies than all of New England, outside of Massachusetts.

Mr. Dickinson is earnest in his hatred of New England, but in his statement of facts he is inexact. The records of the war department show that Missouri, besides the vast number of men she sent into the rebel armies, furnished to the Union for [illegible] men—long after [illegible] being reduced to a three-year basis—while New England, exclusive of Massachusetts, furnished 192,000, considerably more than twice as many; and Massachusetts alone furnished 152,000, nearly double the number of Missouri. Besides this, between 20,000 and 30,000 of the Union troops credited to Missouri were loyal citizens of Illinois, Iowa and Kansas, who joined the army in Missouri because the quotas of their own states were full, and were in consequence credited to Missouri.

Commenting on Mr. Dickinson's remarkable contribution to the history of the war, the Boston Journal says:

But, after all, New England ought to be grateful to Dickinson for so frankly expressing the bitter jealousy and hatred which he and his circle entertain toward the people of this section. It will help to open the eyes of New England voters to the true nature of Cleveland democracy, and to enable them to repudiate it with emphasis and relish on election day.

Just so; and New Hampshire will take her full share in the repudiation business, as she did during the war for the preservation of the Union.

BOARD OF INSTRUCTION.

The monthly meeting of the Board of Instruction was held on Tuesday evening, Hon. Charles E. Batchelder in the chair:

The only business of importance transacted, besides the ordinary routine, was the passage of a vote providing that for a period of sixty days, commencing on Wednesday, the 3d inst., all the public schools of the city shall have sessions all day on Wednesday, and hold no session at all on Saturday. This plan has been tried several weeks at the Cabot street school, and its working has been so satisfactory that it has been decided to give it a general test, to see if a majority of the parents approve it.

RANCH NO. 10.

"Ranch 10," a pleasing western drama, one of the best of its class, and having a good deal of fun in it, as well as strong situations and fine scenes, at Music hall to-night. Tickets at Goodrich's; see advertisement.

CHEAP EXCURSION.

The Boston & Maine railroad advertises a citizens' excursion to Boston and return, tickets good going on Friday, the 5th inst., and returning by any train on the 5th and 6th; fare for the round trip, from this city, $1.70; from York Beach, $2.26; from Eliot, $1.90; from Kittery Navy Yard, $1.80; from Kittery Junction, $1.75; from Greenland, $1.55. Proportionate rates at other stations.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, ME., Oct. 2d.

The steamer Viola, Hoyt master, is making regular trips between here and Portsmouth, landing in Portsmouth at Fernald's wharf; we hope that Capt. Hoyt will be well patronized, for we Kittery P'inters want to go to "Town" now as well as in the boom of the summer season.

The harbor was nearly full of vessels during the storm of last Wednesday, which was the heaviest seen here for years; the rain fell in great quantities, and the wind blew a heavy gale, leaving apple trees, fences, bean poles cornstalks, etc., flat on the grond.

The tow-boats were busy all day Thursday towing vessels to sea from the harbor, and from the wharves in Portsmouth.

There were ten three-masted vessels, one four-master, and five two-masted vessels in the lower harbor last Friday.

The schooner Mary Willey arrived in the harbor Saturday night, and was towed up to Broughton's wharf Sunday morning by the steamer Undine.

The schooner Nancy J. Day, of Bristol, arrived here last Saturday with 200 tons of coal to Solon Frisbee & Co., which was discharged the first of the week; another cargo of 150 tons arrived Saturday night.

There were about thirty sail of vessels in the harbor last Sunday night, and one sloop yacht.

Mr. F. R. Starr's steam yacht Gypsey left here last Monday morning for City Point, South Boston, where it will be housed for the winter.

The schooner Annie F. Conlon arrived here Monday from Baltimore, Md., with Mr. Charles Sawyer as captain. Capt. Seaward came home sick from Washington, D. C., but has now recovered, and will join his vessel here.

A southeast rain storm came on last Monday afternoon, and quite a fleet of vessels came in to the harbor for safety.

Rev. John W. Webster of Center Lovell, Me., preached in the Christian chapel last Sunday evening.

Mr. Harry Handoff is having extensive repairs done to and around his house.

The Union Bethel meeting was at the Christian chapel last Sunday evening; the church was very nearly full, and the services were very interesting; all were well pleased with the same, while some said it was the best Bethel meeting they ever attended. We hope that the next one will be better than this one even, for why should not these Bethel meetings be made interesting?

Mr. George H. Williams came home from Great Falls, N. H., on Monday, and returned again Wednesday.

Rev. J. W. Webster and family of Center Lovell, Me., made a short visit here the first of the week.

Capt. John C. Hurst is slowly recovering from a severe attack of rheumatic fever.

It is expected that Miss Lizzie Haley, the evangelist, now laboring at York, Henry A. [illegible] of the steamer Undine, [illegible] charge of the steamer Jam[illegible] Henry has our best wishes, and we hope that he will be successful.

UNCLE MOSES.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

The "Whatsoever" Band of King's Daughters will hold a sale of home-made cake and preserves at St. John's chapel on Thursday, Oct. 4th, from four to nine o'clock, in aid of the Jacksonville sufferers. Ice cream and cake served throughout the evening.

The annual account of the "Receipts and Expenditures of the City of Portsmouth" shows that the corporation must have resolved itself into a sort of "Mutual Admiration Society." There are a great many items that would bear—or perhaps it would be better to say need—inspection. Among others are those under the head of "Contingent," in the bill said to be under direction of Alderman Urch, for the "Purchase and Planting of Shade Trees," amounting to $53.352. Every one of the trees are either dead or beyond convalescence. The city charter and its amendments prohibit any member of the city councils from receiving any remuneration whatever, but how much the provisions of the charter were carried out remains to be ascertained by a casual reader of the pamphet. VIATOR.

The young democracy on Monday evening organized a marching campaign company, taking the name of Sinclair Cadets, and electing officers as follows: Charles D. Varrell, captain; Benjamin Burke, first lieutenant; Chauncey B. Hoyt, second lieutenant; J. Morris Varrell, sergeant.

Steam was raised in all four of the boilers of the U. S. S. Kearsarge at the navy yard on Monday, and her engine run most of the day, with satisfactory results to those conducting the test.

The U. S. S. Constellation arrived in the lower harbor on Monday evening, the 1st inst., and was towed up to the navy [illegible]esday afte[illegible] [illegible]wer harbor her anchors failed to [illegible] and she fouled the coal-laden schooner Nathaniel Lank, carrying away her jibboom and head gear, and then hit the schooner E. C. Allen, breaking one of her cathends and an anchor stock, and damaging her fore rigging. While the ship was foul of the two schooners she was run into by the schooner Daniel Pierson, which was entering the harbor, and had her starboard quarter damaged, the schooner having her jibboom and foretopmast carried away, and fore rigging parted.

LITTLEFIELD'S

Constitutional COUGH SYRUP

— FOR —

CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.

MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD,

Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for those diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we serve those of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

Are Your Pullets Laying?

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought forward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Many a babe is hurried out of the world by powerful opiates. Mothers, use Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup the safest and best baby medicine in the world.

Many diseases arise from vitated or impure blood, therefore keep the system healthy and proof against the inroads of disease by using Laxador.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

If you would have a desirable head of hair, use Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the most wonderful discovery of modern times for the hair and scalp.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

Sufferers from the effects of quinine, used as a remedy for chills and fever, should try Ayer's Ague Cure. This preparation is a powerful tonic, wholly vegetable, and without a particle of any noxious drug. Warranted a sure cure.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

The Cleveland-Mills tariff reduction bill, which is a part of the national democratic platform adopted at St. Louis last June, maintains a tariff of 100 per cent on rice and of sixty-eight per cent on sugar, both southern products, and at the same time it places lumber, brick, vegetables, (fresh or in brine,) meats, game, poultry, milk, eggs, beans, peas, granite, wool and some other New Hampshire products on the free list, open to Canadian and all other foreign competition, while the duty on potato starch, printing paper, carriages, saws, household furniture, cotton goods and woolen goods is largely reduced, which must stimulate foreign importations to compete with our own productions, and damage our home industries. This is the feast to which southern free-traders invite the people of New Hampshire, labelling it "tariff reform."

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

A Life on the Ocean Wave

Indurates the stomach against sea sickness, but a single or occasional transit across the "illimitable wetness" is productive of grievous qualms, especially when it is stormy. Ocean travelers, ship surgeons, yachtmen, commercial buyers sent abroad, voyages by steamboat, and all who are occasionally or frequently called upon to be where "billows are buffeted," should take along Hostetter's stomach Bitters, the finest known antidote for seasickness, malaria, biliousness, and disorders of the stomach and bowels. Many travelers by railroad, with delicate stomachs and nerves, likewise suffer severely en route. These will find the Bitters surely hepful and consolatory. Traveling, even in swift, steady and commodious steamships and sumptuous palace cars, is not always a source of unmixed joy and delight, and the Bitters does much to counteract the discomforts attending it, aggravated by delicate health. Rheumatism, brought on by damp weather, kidney troubles and debility, are effectually relieved by the Bitters.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he enters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

"I have taken, within the past year, several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and find it admirably adapted to the needs of an impoverished system. I am convinced that this preparation, as a blood purifier, is unequaled."—C. C. Dame, pastor Congregational church, Andover, Me.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Could not Keep

Shop without them. I consider your Sulpher Bitters a remarkable blood purifier. I know of several people, whose cases were considered hopeless, that have been cured by your medicine. The sale of Sulpher Bitters is so large here that I could not keep shop without them. E. S. Yates, Pharmacist, 99 Essex street, Lawrence, Mass.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

The simple application of "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT," without any internal medicine, will cure any case of Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Piles, Itch, Sores, Pimples, Eczema, all Scaly, Itchy Skin Eruptions, no matter how obstinate or long standing. It is potent, effective, and costs but a trifle. eod&w

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. eeowjan6

LIVING ON A DIME A DAY.

It Can be Done, and Perhaps It Would be Better if More People Did It.

"How to Live and Thrive on a Dime per Day" may stand as the text for this talk. It certainly can be done and, though the experiment may be uninviting, it is certain that good health is nearer akin to the simplest diet than to the costliest.

Now as to the laboring man and his proteins. Tell him that three-fourths of his weight is water and that to restore the day's waste he has to take food, three-fourths of which must be water and the remainder flesh forming, heat giving and bone making substances, and he will understand the case better. Give him a table of food, analyzed to show just how much heat giving, flesh forming and mineral matter there is in each food and he will soon take as deep an interest in what he eats because of its worth to him as because of its taste. When he finds out, as he can in half an hour, that only twenty-four parts in every 100 of butcher's meat count as flesh formers, the rest being water, but that from seventy-five to ninety parts out of every 100 in dried peas, beans, oat and wheat meals and cheese are nutritious and only ten to twenty-five parts waste water, he from that moment begins to use his common sense in feeding as he does in earning his living. The popular rule is never pay any heed to the feeding value of our diet; let us cultivate a glorious ignorance of the purpose of foods, and go in might and main for palate ticklers and devil take the dyspepsia. Pity he doesn't.

Just a fact or two as appetizers. The great Peninsular and Oriental Steamship company employ East Indian coolies to do the hardest work on their steamers because they are stronger, healthier and stand the climate better than Englishmen, and because—not being meat eaters—their diet costs only six cents per day. There are miners in the English coal pits, the hardest workers in the land, who have not eaten any kind of meat for years. I am not a vegetarian, yet I experimented for one whole year without tasting flesh or gravy in any form, and all the time my health was perfect and my weight increased. The dock porters of Constantinople carry heavier burdens, 250 pounds and upward, more easily than the laborers of England or America, yet their main diet is bread and figs, and yet they are teetotal and vegetarian. The laborers in Spain live chiefly on bread and onions and are marvelously strong.

I knew an eminent lady who, for forty years, had never tasted meat. She was a marvel of mental and physical strength. Another author friend kept his health and his average weight of 160 pounds on a diet that never included meat, the average cost of his food being only six cents per day. Another, a well known literary man who looked as beefy as a butcher, was, when last I met him, in his eighth year of strict abstinence from flesh. Another friend, a hard literary worker, has been practically a life long vegetarian, but he looks too shriveled up to be a champion specimen.

What would be a good diet for those who do not need to study their purses yet who would like a simple, healthy and enjoyable dietary? To such I would say drop the heavy meat breakfast right away. Not that meat is bad, but it is not the best to start the day on. It distends the stomach, indisposes us for headwork and often leads to that other downright mischievous stupidity, the 11 o'clock beer or cocktail. The second evil is taken to cure the first, as if two black eyes are better than one. Bread (not the spoiled white stuff, but the natural dark colored wheat as ground), tea or cocoa, eggs and the hundred and one non-flesh dishes, with a little fish and as much fruit as you like. That's a model meal, as experience will prove.

Talking of fish, the more the better. Pound for pound it is as nutritious as flesh, though it doesn't seem to fill us so fully, and its chemical value is far above that of meats. When I have extra hard brain work to do, say an average of twelve or fourteen hours for two or three weeks at a stretch, I knock off meats entirely and eat all the fish I can. Result, perfect health and strength and no headaches.

For dinner, fish, soups (I am not excluding meat, though soups can be made without it that taste just the same and are quite as good every way), puddings, dessert. If any one cares to prove for himself how little the flesh dishes on his dinner table are necessary to him, let him just reverse the courses, beginning with the fruit, then cheese and crackers, the puddings, etc. I warrant he will turn up his nose at the meat when he comes to it, and he won't miss it the least.

A horse is almost as strong, swift, healthy and handsome as a two-legged man, and they both have the same internal machinery; the one eats beef and enjoys dyspepsia, the other avoids it and flourishes. Ten cents' worth of wheat, oatmeal, rice, fruit, buttermilk, bread, cheese, onions or portions of several of these will enable a man to do his ordinary day's work at least as well as any other assortment of food he can buy for $1.—Richmond (Va.) Dispatch.

Theory Concerning Gray Hair.

I have a theory regarding preventing gray hair which I think is new. At least I have not heard anybody else advance it. It is this, that when the head is attacked by disease either one of three things must give way: the brain, the hair or the color of the hair. If the hair gives way the man becomes bald; if the color of the hair yields then prematurely gray hair is induced. It is easy to see that either of these results is preferable to the failure of the brain, and of all three it is better that the hair should turn gray than that the brain should weaken or the subject become bald. Young men with gray hair may find considerable consolation in this theory of mine if they cannot find anything else in it.—Dr. C. H. Hughes in

The Confectionery of India.

All kinds of Indian sweetmeats are made of brown sugar, many of them molded into various shapes of birds and beasts. Tubes also are made, filled with honey, and twisted into various forms. Then there are balls of sugar and clarified butter. These confectioneries are soft and melt in the mouth. Those made by the higher caste differ from those made by the lower, so absolute are the laws of caste.—Wide Awake.

Death by the Guillotine.

The Progres Medical publishes a paper by Drs. Regnard and Loye on the examination of the head and body of a convict immediately after his decapitation by the guillotine.

The prisoner was calm to the last and not pale, even when his neck was fixed ready to receive the fatal knife. Two seconds after the decapitation the cheeks were still rosy, the eyes wide open, with moderately dilated pupils, the mouth firmly closed. When a finger was placed close to one eye no change of expression took place, but on touching an eye or the tips of the lashes during the first five seconds, the lids closed just as in life. This reflex could not be excited from the sixth second after decapitation. The jaws were tightly closed and could not be opened by manual force. No similar muscular contraction could be detected in the trunk or extremities. One minute after death the face began to turn pale, the trunk remained flaccid, the carotids continuing to throw out blood remaining in the circulatory area. At the end of four minutes the face was quite pale, the upper lids were half closed, the jaws less firmly clenched than before. The knife passed through the lower part of the fourth cervical vertebra.

These researches show that not a trace of consciousness remains two seconds after beheading; that reflex movement of the cornea can be excited for two seconds; that the heart may beat for an hour, the auricles continuing to pulsate alone for half that period, and that, putting aside the reflex movements of the eyelid, the contraction of the jaws and the jets of blood from the carotids, it seemed in this case as though a corpse had been decapitated, so inert were the remains of the convict. Drs. Regnard and Loye note how calm and free even from physiological death struggle symptoms is death by the guillotine. There is not even asphyxia.—British Medical Journal.

The Baby Beaver's Dam.

"I know of a naturalist down in eastern Maine," said a well known Maine college professor, "who wouldn't be convinced that beavers could build dams till he saw it done with his own eyes. He is an awful incredulous fellow, any way. I bought a baby beaver of a hunter who traps them, one day, and sent him to my skeptical friend. He grew greatly attached to the little fellow and kept him in the house, but he often wrote me that his beaver didn't show any propensity at all for dam building. One Monday, washing day, his wife sat a leaky pail full of water on the kitchen floor. The beaver was in the kitchen, he was only a baby then, too, and he saw the water oozing out of a crack in the pail. He scampered out into the yard, brought in a chip and began building his dam. The naturalist was summoned. He watched the little fellow, thunderstruck. Said he, 'Leave that pail there, wife, till doomsday, if need be, and let's see what the little fellow will do.' The beaver kept at it four weeks, until he had built a solid dam clean around the pail. My naturalist friend is quite a beaver man today. They say, you know, that way down east there is a beaver dam that $200,000 couldn't build the like of. Oh! men don't know everything. The wasp knew how to make paper before we did."—Lewiston Journal.

Bogus Epileptic Fits.

Epileptic fits are often stimulated by beggars to excite sympathy, and by prisoners to avoid work. A few years ago a combination of a peculiar kind was discovered. This consisted of one man who imitated an epileptic attack while his confederates picked the pockets of the spectators, whose attention was directed toward the man in apparent convulsions. Some of these imitations are artistically done; the cry at the outset of the fit, the fall and violent convulsions, together with frothing at the mouth and the unconsciousness which should follow a real attack are well simulated. The absolute insensibility to pain can hardly be imitated. The French police generally detect the simulators by forcing the point of the thumb nail under that of the suspected dissimulator. This is actually painful to one who has his senses, while it can do no harm if the case is one of genuine epilepsy. In the real disease, the pupils of the eyes become widely dilated when the attack begins; the upper half of the face is very pale; and there is a short period (a few seconds) when all the muscles of the body are rigid before they are alternately contracted and relaxed in the fully developed fit. These symptoms cannot be feigned, no matter how well the simulator has studied the disease.—Globe-Democrat.

The First Lightning Rod.

If we are to believe an Austrian paper the first lightning rod was not constructed by Franklin, but by a monk of Seuftenberg, in Bohemia, named Probob Diwisch, who installed an apparatus June 15, 1754, in the garden of the curate of Prenditz (Moravia). The apparatus was composed of a pole surmounted by an iron rod supporting twelve curved up branches, and terminating in as many metallic boxes, filled with iron ore and closed by a boxwood cover, traversed by twenty-seven sharp iron points, which plunged at their base in the ore. All the system was united to the earth by a large chain. The enemies of Diwisch, jealous of his success at the court of Vienna, excited the peasants of the locality against him, and under the pretext that his lightning rod was the cause of the great drought, they made him take down the lightning rod which he had utilized for six years. What is most curious is the form of this first lightning rod, which was of multiple points like the one which M. Melsn afterward invented. —La Lumiere Electrique.

S. S. S. FOR THE BLOOD

PEER'S MILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without proof, and began to despair of ever getting it all. I was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the diseases all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child then just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. M. C. WASSONER.

RICH HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl when but three weeks old broke out with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and heavy head of hair—a robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, H. Z. SNOW.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1886 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Crab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition of perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit. HARDY M. BURT, 24 West Ninth St.

HOMER, LA., May 25, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again. All that the physicians done for me brought no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course, my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it; for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. F. BRIDGES, J. P.

No Need of Voting.

There is no need of a ballot being taken in this state on the 6th of next month, so far as the election of presidential electors, congressman and state officers is concerned; Chairmen Charles F. Stone, of the democratic state central committee, has fixed it all up, and while it may be necessary to choose ward, town and county officers without his aid, to vote for any other officers is a needless absurdity. To a reporter of the Boston Post he confesses the hopelessness of the republican contest as follows:

I don't think there is the slightest doubt but what we shall carry the state. It will be a clean sweep all along the line. I do not feel able to place a maximum figure on the democratic vote, but from information obtained from all parts of the state I am certain we will get at least 40,000. The republican vote will not exceed 37,000, while the prohibitory vote will run from 1500 to 2000. This will give us a clean majority on the gubernatorial issue of at least 1000.

That settles it as far as the governorship is concerned. Bro. Stone goes on to explain to the reporter that Cleveland and Thurman are sure of the state by a good majority on the "tariff reform" (alias British free trade—only he didn't call it by its right name) issue; and that on the same issue the democrats are certain of a good majority in the house and senate. The re-election of McKinney to Congress from the first district is of course a certainty; and as to Morse in the second district, where the democrats have only a majority of 1100 to overcome, why, Bro. Stone "don't believe he stands the ghost of a show."

A democratic majority in the legislature would of course mean the election to the United States senate of Hon. Frank Jones, in place of Hon. Wm. E. Chandler, whose present term ends on March 4th, 1889. This of course would be a great triumph for the prohibitionists, as Mr. Chandler was elected by the votes of the party which they call the "free whiskey" party.

There is but one drawback to our satisfaction in publishing this assured result of the coming election in advance of all our local contemporaries, and that is, that we are not quite sure it is all going to be just so. We remember that the Boston Post and Globe, on the Saturday preceding the Maine election, both editorially and in their special correspondence prophesied a glorious democratic success in that state. This memory makes us a trifle shy.

P. S. A later lucubration from the Concord correspondent of the Post somewhat reassures us. He explains that the republican demoralization in this state is due to two reasons—the recent glorious democratic victory in Maine, and free whiskey. As to the first he says:

Before the Maine election the radical wirepullers felt sure that they could plant both feet upon their opponents by working the "free trade racket." The result transformed the situation.

As to the second point, he argues that the "free whiskey" republican party, which is responsible for all prohibitory liquor legislation, will go badly to leeward before the democrats and their allies, the third-party prohibitionists, the democrats being pledged to repeal all prohibitory laws, and legalize rumselling under a license law. He says "the prohibition vote will be chiefly drawn from the republican party," as of course it will be; and in regard to the democratic proposition to substitute a license law for the present prohibitory law, he remarks:

Already over 4000 voters of the state, more than half of whom have been republicans, have pledged themselves to vote for license. That means supporting the ticket named by the democrats.

Well, in view of the "glorious democratic victory" in Maine, and of the fact that every prohibition vote in this state will count as a vote to legalize the liquor traffic, the Post reporter's roseate view

The Yellow Fever.

There were ninety-eight new cases of yellow fever at Jacksonville, Fla., on the 2d inst., but no deaths for the twenty-four hours ending at six o'clock P. M. Col. J. J. Daniel, president of the auxiliary association, died that night. At the meeting of the executive committee on the 2d, Rev. Bishop Weed of the relief committee reported that the number of ration tickets was being rapidly reduced, and all abuses ferreted out and corrected as fast as consistent with maintaining the good work of the department. The finance committee reported the receipt of $11,895 that day.

On the same date the situation at Fernandina, Fla., was reported to be not alarming; there was no smallpox at Fernandina, nor in Nassau county. At McClenny and Gainesville there was no change. Two new cases were reported at Sanderson.

A despatch of the 2d inst. from Jackson, Miss., said: "This is the eleventh day since a new case of yellow fever, and the ninth since a death from the disease has occurred here. If the present rigid quarantine is continued for a week there will be great suffering among the colored people."

From Decatur, Ala., on the 2d, the report was not encouraging, the new cases numbering four, with two other suspicious ones, and one death; eighteen cases were under treatment, two of them being then death stricken. Over $1600 had been received by the relief association, besides two car-loads of provisions.

Three persons died of yellow fever on the 2d at Gallipolis, a town on the Ohio river 150 miles below Pittsburg, Pa. Several others were reported ill, and the citizens of the place were terror stricken.

The Sugar Trust.

The Boston Post is indignant over the operations of the Sugar Trust, and mentions the closing of the Bay State sugar refinery of Boston as one incident in the nefarious work of the trust. But the Post omits to mention the fact that the head of the Sugar Trust is the eminent democrat, Mr. Havemeyer, who contributes a great sum to the democratic campaign fund, and who was accorded a hearing by the democratic majority of the Mills committee while at the same time no New England manufacturer could get a hearing and even the republican members of the committee were not allowed to attend its sessions, and that the Mills committee remodeled its sugar schedules af er listening deferentially to him.

An order was issued on the 2d inst. by President Havemeyer of the sugar trust, shutting down the two refineries of De Castro & Donner at Williamsburg, Long Island, New York. These refineries are among the largest in the country, and fully a thousand men are thrown out of work. The shut down is for an indefinite period. The employes are greatly excited over the order.

A bill to establish in America what the English call free trade has just been defeated in the house by a narrow majority of four. The measure was of enormous importance for English manufacturers, as it would have enabled them to export goods to the States without the crushing tariff now imposed, and its fate was watched with intense interest by Englishmen. Were it passed it would have been worth £100,000,000 ($500,000,000) per annum to British manufacturers.

This was the comment of the London Telegraph on the defeat of the Morrison tariff bill in 1884. The Mills bill is a measure with precisely the same purpose in view, and yet professedly intelligent democratic newspapers are telling their readers that England does not desire the passage of the bill, or the success of the democratic party in the present campaign.

A campaign club of saloon keepers has just been organized in New York in Mr. Cleveland's interests, and it pledges itself to turn out in the democratic processions with a thousand men. It is to be presumed that their duty will be to carry banners and transparencies declaring that the republican party is the "free whisky" party.

Senator Blair is not much disturbed by that stale eggs affair down in "Ole Virginny." He has been a target for democratic editors for some years.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

Nineteen old soldiers have been driven out of the railway mail service in Michigan, and their places given to democratic politicians. The watchword of the administration in this campaign is: The Union veterans must go.

Mr. James A. Peckham of Bar Harbor, Me., formerly of this city, is with his wife visiting friends here.

Miss Fannie Lawry, aged sixteen years, daughter of Mr. John Lawry of Kittery Point, died very suddenly on the morning of the 3d inst. She accompanied her elder sister, Jessie, to the Kittery Point railroad station, and then walked home, being apparently in good health at the time; shortly after entering the house she threw up her hands and fell to the floor, and in a few moments was dead.

The Marshall house at York Harbor is undergoing improvements at the present time. The bowling alley is to be torn down, and a two-story addition of 100 feet length will be added to the southwestern side of the house.

At Portland, Me., Oct. 2d, Edward W. Chase, who shot Mrs. Ida W. Stevens of Gardiner last Fast day because she refused to live with him as his mistress, was sentenced to state prison for life, for murder in the first degree.

At Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 30th, two white men were shot dead by a negro into whose house they were trying to break. The coroner's jury acquitted him.

This question is often asked in Boston by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought toward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

A despatch from Auckland, New Zealand, says the British consul at Raratonga has been instructed to proclaim a British protectorate over the Cook islands.

Patrick O'Brien, nationalist member of parliament, was released from Killarney jail on the 2d inst. He had been in prison seven months for offences under the Irish crimes act. He was given an enthusiastic reception by the priests and people of Killarney.

The seventh known victim of the Whitechapel (London) butcher of women was found on the Thames embankment on the 2d inst. Who the victim was is not known, but she had evidently been dead several weeks, and her body was dismembered and disfigured to a greater extent than any of the other six.

'TWAS A DEMOCRATIC FIGHT CAUSED IT.

The Manchester Union asserts that the democrats ought to manage state affairs in New Hampshire, because the state expenses under the republicans are excessive! The only plausible excuse for this biennial stereotyped democratic falsehood, is seen in the patent fact that the expenses for 1887 were increased because it took the legislature so long to determine which of two democratic autocrats should control the legislation of the state in relation to railways. To this end the session was, by democratic means, prolonged for three months; and now an editor who was in this fight of his party's leaders, and is, it is said, now on both sides of the contest, undertakes to tell the taxpayers of the state that the republicans spend too much money in the state government! Let the democratic chieftains have a cemetery in which to inter their hatchets, and the sessions of the General Court will be brief, and the people will have no cause to complain of state expenditures under republican administrations.

TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION.

The Rockingham County Temperance association will meet in the Congregational church at Brentwood on Thursday, Oct. 11th, the exercises opening at ten o'clock in the forenoon; addresses by Rev. W. C. Bartlett and others. The usual hour will be allotted to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union; and there will be a discussion of the license theory. Basket collation. Conveyance from Exeter and Epping on the arrival of trains, will be furnished for all who notify Rev. E. B. Pike of Exeter of their intention to attend.

BENEFIT CONCERT.

The following correspondence fully explains itself:

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 3d.

Mr. F. W. Sweet—Dear Sir: I take this opportunity with the aid of your humane citizens to express our sympathy in the present hour, to offer to the fever-stricken community of the south what little assistance we can render them, and to that end I offer the services of my entire company, the Boston Symphony Orchestral Club, for one benefit performance which shall take place in Music hall, Portsmouth, on Thursday evening, October 18th, when the proceeds, deducting the expenses, shall be turned over to the southern fever stricken community fund. The programme of the entertainment shall be exactly the same as that given in the concert at Boston on the 11th inst.

I remain very res'v,

MAX BACHERT, Manager Boston Symphony Orchestral Club.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Oct. 3d.

Mr. Max Bachert—Sir: Your very generous proposal is gladly accepted, and all arrangements for the concert in aid of the sufferers at the south have been made. Very Res'y, F. W. SWEET.

CAN'T GET MUCH FARTHER WEST.

Mr. E. B. Rundlett, formerly of this city, son of Hon. G. H. Rundlett of Court street, has assumed charge of the Occidental hotel at Seattle, Washington territory. With the somewhat vague ideas of Pacific coast matters entertained by persons in the east, the name of a hotel in a territorial city will probably bring before the mind's eye of many a log cabin in the woods, with a pig rooting up the ground in front of the only door, and an Indian standing behind a tree near by, waiting patiently for a chance to draw a bead on the landlord and guests when they come out to take the air after their sumptuous meal of fried pork and corn cake, while in the near distance a select party of frontiersmen are having a good time hanging a horse thief. This vision, however, hardly suits the appearance of the Occidental hotel, which is a structure of three stories and mansard roof, of rather florid architecture and with three towers, and rooms for the accommodation of four hundred guests. From the daily Post-Intelligencer of Seattle of Sept. 18 h, a thirty six column paper issued at the mere pittance of ten dollars a year, we clip the following:

On the 1st of September Mr. E. B. Rundlett, a hotel man of long experience in Boston, took hold of the management of the Occidental hotel, and since then has been devoting himself assiduously to improving the cuisine. It is gratifying alike to the regular boarders and to the travelling public that Mr. Rundlett is succeeding admirably. Here is a specimen bill of fare during the past week:

Chicken Soup, a la Reine. Consomme Colbert.
Bass, Bechamel, Port Wine Sauce.
Celery, Olives Parisienne, Cucumbers.
Boiled Leg of Mutton, with Turnips.
Roast Stuffed Chicken, Giblet Sauce.
Roast Saddle of Green Haze. Champagne Sauce.
Roast Fillet of Beef, Mushroom Sauce.
Game, en Compote.
Small Patties, a la Financiere.
French Pancakes, with Jelly.
Boiled and Mashed Potatoes, Baked Sweet Potatoes, Green Corn, Spinach, Cauliflower, with Cream.
Boiled Rice. Pickles. Beets.
Plum Pudding, Apple Pie, Cocoanut Custard Pie, Jelly Tarts, French Puffs, Fruit Cake.
Lemon Ice Cream.
Pound and Layer Cake.
Peaches, Apples, Grapes, Plums, Bartlett Pears.
Assorted Crackers. Coffee.

Of course, no one can tell from the printed menu how appetizing this meal is going to be, but the opinion of guests after meals is first-class evidence, and it may be said with truth that the table of Seattle's leading hotel now compares favorably with other well known hotels on Puget sound which were formerly held up as models from which to copy. Because the public are apt to judge a city by its principal hotel, Seattle has a right to felicitate herself on the improvement of the Occidental.

MARITIME NOTES.

Capt. Ellery O. Garland, of Newington, master of the schooner Emily C. Dennison of Saco, publishes in the Biddeford Journal a card dated "Biddeford Pool, Sept. 28th," in which he says: "The undersigned wishes to acknowledge his thanks to the captain and crew of the life-saving station at Biddeford Pool for their timely assistance during the storm on Wednesday last. In the midst of the terrible gale when my vessel was dragging on a lee shore, they bravely came to my relief and did everything in their power to save her from stranding. And after we were cast on shore, myself and crew were taken to the station, where we received the best of care; and thanks are due for help rendered in getting my vessel off after the storm, and for the kindly assistance given me by Capt. Coleman and crew of schooner James A. Gray, and by the citizens of the Pool generally."

A letter from Port Townsend, Washington territory, says: "Search is being instituted near Destruction island for the wreck of the barque Emily Farnum, which was lost fifteen years ago. The vessel was laden with railroad iron for the Northern Pacific railway." The Emily Farnum was originally a ship, and was built at this port in 1854, by George Raynes & Son. She was a fine vessel in her day, but what either she or her cargo of iron could be good for after fifteen years of submersion in salt water, we cannot imagine.

The Gloucester fishing schooner Ada S. Babson arrived home on the 2d inst. from her first trip to the Grand Banks, with 400,000 lbs. of codfish, the largest face ever landed at Gloucester by any American vessel.

The British ship Earl Wemyss, from San Francisco for the United Kingdom, was sunk by collision with the ship Ardencapel, and the captain's wife and children, the first mate and nineteen of the crew were drowned. The captain, second mate and several seamen were saved

Fishermen report a two-masted schooner sunk on Crab ledge, off Chatham, Mass., with her topmasts near the surface and her sails set. She is supposed to have gone down in the recent great gale. Her name and the fate of her crew are unknown.

In a great hurricane at Turk's island, West Indies, Sept. 2d, the four-masted schooner Sidney G. Hupper was wrecked, all hands escaping; the three-masted schooner Lewis A. Hodgdon was capsized, one seaman being saved; barque Silas Fish was blown to sea, and foundered, the captain and one seaman drifting ashore on a piece of wreck after being two days in the water. All these were American vessels. The three-masted schooner Joseph M. Hayes was abandoned on the voyage from Turk's islands to Providence, R. I., with salt; crew saved, in their own boat. Much salt was lost at the islands during the hurricane.

The schooner Daniel Simmons, Wm. Sweetser master, from Deer Isle, Me, for Boston with a cargo of 125 tons of granite for the new library building in that city, in attempting to make York harbor on Monday night, Oct. 1st, ran on the rocks at the easterly end of Harris' island, bilged, and filled with water. The captain, crew of three men, and two passengers, landed at York harbor in the schooner's boat. The cargo may be saved; the vessel, which registered about sixty-seven tons and was built at Essex, Mass., in 1854, is a total loss. She was owned by S. B. Morey, one of the passengers, was valued at $2000, and was insured in the Boston Marine Co. for $1400.

The schooner Collins Howe, Jr., a craft of about thirty tons register, bound from Southport, Me., for Boston with a load of lumber, dragged her anchors and went ashore at York harbor during the breeze of Monday night, the 1st inst. She came off Tuesday night without damage, and sailed for her destination on Wednesday morning.

We have.

First dance of the season at Franklin hall on Wednesday evening, Oct. 10th.

The Carpe-Diem club, composed of young men belonging to the Athletic club, will give an assembly in Franklin hall on Monday evening, Oct. 15th.

Messrs. Bert J. Rowe and Charles H. Kingsbury, who have been all summer in the employ of the Boston & Hingham Steamboat Co., arrived home in this city on Wednesday, the 3d inst., the season for steamboating in Boston harbor having ended.

Mr. Woodbury H. Wingate, who during the season just ended has been manager of the Nonquit house at Nonquit, Mass., about six miles from New Bedford, arrived home on Tuesday evening of this week, with his family. We understand that the company owning the Nonquit house are to immediately commence the erection of a new and much larger hotel at Nonquit, near the present one, the same to be ready for opening next summer, and conducted by Mr. Wingate. The construction of the hotel is to be under the personal supervision of that gentleman, who will remain in Nonquit during the winter looking after the interests of the company. Mr. Wingate's family will reside in Portsmouth as usual.

The Boston & Maine railroad has issued a bound pamphlet of convenient size for the pocket, giving a schedule of all the through trains on all its divisions and connections. The time tables are condensed, so that the trains between any two prominent points, as for example, Boston and St. John or Halifax, are shown on a single page, and the time of arrival or departure at all important intervening points is also given. The book contains on its first page the names of the chief executive officials of the system, and the detailed mileage of the lines operated by the company, and the whole is properly indexed. Altogether the book is one of the best of its kind ever gotten out by a local road.

"Ranch 10" had a fair audience at Music hall on Wednesday evening, the 3d inst., and gave entire satisfaction to all. The play is a very pleasing one, the acting of the whole company excellent, and the scenery very fine.

Mr. Henry Hector of this city, who has been at Nonquit, Mass., during the past summer, as head waiter at the Nonquit hotel, has arrived home for the winter.

LITTLEFIELD'S
Constitutional COUGH SYRUP
— FOR —
CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.
MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD,
Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup.

A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Cloves, Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences. Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

The Proper Nautch Dance.

The Nautch girls arranged themselves into a half circle, their scarlet costumes forming a bright crescent terminating at either end in a mass of spectators, whose half naked bodies, varying in color from pale olive to mahogany, were arrayed in costumes scarcely less showy than the dancers'. The chaperone tom toms an appropriate Nautch accompaniment on a drum with his fingers and four pretty girls advance from the half circle and, favoring me with a quartet of killing smiles and a quartet of coquettish glances from their bright, dark eyes, they commence to dance. An idea seems to prevail in Occidental minds that the Indian Nautch dance is a very naughty thing, but nothing is further from the truth. Of course it can be made naughty, and, no doubt, often is, but then so can many another form of innocent amusement.

The proper Nautch dance is a decorous and artistic performance when properly danced; the graceful motions and elegant proportions of the human form, as revealed by lithe and graceful dancers, are to be viewed with an eye purely artistic and critical as a Venus or other production of the sculptor's studio. Only the British matron would consider a Nautch dance in any degree indecorous. The four dancers take the hem of their red garment between the thumb and finger of the right hand, spreading its ample folds into the figure of an open fan by bringing the outstretched arm almost on a level to the shoulder. A mantle of transparent muslin, fringed with silver spangles, is worn about the head and shoulders in the same indescribably graceful manner as the mantilla of the Spanish senorita. Raising a portion of this aloft in the left hand and keeping the fan intact with the right, the dancers twirl around and change position with each other, their supple figures meanwhile assuming a variety of graceful motions and postures from time to time. Now they imitate the spiral movements of a serpent climbing around and upward on an imaginary pole; again they assume a charming posture, their dusky countenances half hidden in seeming coquetry behind the muslin mantle, the large red fan waved gently to and fro, the feet unmoving, but the undulating motions of the body and the tremor of the limbs sufficing to jingle the tiny ankle bells.—India Cor. Boston Herald.

On the Summit of Mount Shasta.

The wind and cold were so severe that our stay on the summit was shorter than one could wish; however, one hour is about as good as two for a scene to which weeks could not do justice. Northern California and part of Oregon lay spread out like a great bird's eye map. To the southeast, seventy-five miles away, the snows of Lassen's peak seemed quite near, and far beyond it are visible the white tops of other peaks in the great Sierra; while at an equal distance north the beautiful symmetry of Mount Pitt in Oregon shows white above the Cascades, which stretch ridge after ridge for leagues beyond. Beyond the rugged and broken ranges toward the coast the air is cloudy, and we are unable to see the Pacific. The valleys at our feet are so smoky that the lower part of our view is much limited. The view of Mount Shasta itself is grand beyond description. West of us, more than half a mile lower, and two or three miles distant, is the great crater of the mountain. More than half of the great rim is yet intact—what is left of a huge bowl a mile in diameter, whose side seems to have been burst out by its molten contents. In other directions, from the summit, great serrated ridges of rock stretch down into the forest; while between them ever narrowing areas of snow extend for miles to meet the trees, like guards to keep the green from infringing on its white domain. From our great height the lower part of the snow, steep though it really is, looks nearly level, as do the wooded slopes and valleys beyond; and a passing cloud looks in the sunshine like a white sheet spread on the dark green carpet of pines.—F. C. Freeman in Overland Monthly.

Charles Sumner and His Friends.

Sumner was very careful of the feelings of his personal friends, many of whom disagreed emphatically with him on political subjects. Some of them were not of the same party with himself; some were not of the same wing of the party. After President Grant and his cabinet became estranged from the senator, certain of his friends failed to follow him. Among them was the journalist, Maj. Ben: Perley Poore, who, in his letters and telegrams, took strong ground for the president and against the senator. The contest at the time was exceedingly bitter, and "Perley's" dispatches reflected the degree of acerbity felt by the president's friends.

Sumner's friends were inclined to take issue with the journalist, holding that the tone of his letters was incompatible with his personal relations toward the senator, and brought them to Sumner's attention. He would hear just enough of them to know what was being spoken of, and then, if the paper had been handed him, would throw it into the waste basket, exclaiming: "I like him too well to read his letters." He was once asked, "How can you like him when he speaks of you in such terms?" and his reply was: "I like the person, not the writer; I do my duty as I see it; let him do his as he sees it. Why should we quarrel?"—Arnold Burges Johnson in The Cosmopolitan.

The Beaver's Awkward Gait.

Released upon the ground the beavers make off, with a curious shambling gait, a compound of shuffle and a waddle, with a strong tendency to fall forward upon the nose at every step. On closer examination the cause of this ungraceful style of locomotion was found to be twofold; first, their hind legs were at least one third longer than their fore legs, the extra length being in the femur; and secondly, they were digitigrade in front, and plantigrade behind, or, as our French cook, Francois, expressed it: "Ze front ligue, he go teeptoe, comme de dogue, or le chat; ze behind ligue, he make walk flat foot—pied a terre—like ze bair, or ze man." If one will try to walk on all fours, with the soles of the feet and the tips of the fingers touching the ground, he will have a tolerably fair idea of beaverine locomotion.—H. P. Alford in Outing.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. We serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

A Grand Idea.

Prof. Geo. H. Kalteyer, the well known chemist of Texas, investigated the baking powder question, and wrote: "I submitted Prof. Horsford's preparation to a chemical examination, and found it composed of pure and non-poisonous materials. The idea of Prof. Horsford was, indeed a good one, in implanting the indigestible tartrates, which are the final result of all cream tartar baking powders, by the soluble phosphates, the very nutritive property of bread, and the bone-producing element of nature. It is certainly the best and most healthful bread-raising preparation ever offered to the public."

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

Congress have certainly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. 1oct12

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

DON'T SCOLD

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—ought a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he won't use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to go to work for four and a half hours without suffering. I continued its use, and am now well."

A new number of "The Season" is at hand—brilliant as usual. The Season is a first-class ladies' fashion magazine, each number containing about 170 illustrations of the newest Paris fashions and the most elegant designs in fancy work, embroidery, crochet and needle-work; plain sewing and lace work; lace stitch on muslin, cambric and tulle, etc.; Irish point laces, darning on tulle, filagree on linen, etc.; a variety of designs in rug-work, tatting netting, knotting and frame-work; pillow lace; paper, wool and feather flowers; mosaic patterns and fancy work in all its branches; three large colored plates; two historical or national costume pictures; a pattern sheet with about twenty flat paper patterns; a richly illustrated review of novelties; initial letters, monograms and alphabets, etc. The information given is clear, plain, comprehensive and practical. Price, thirty cents.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

A Life on the Ocean Wave

Indurates the stomach against sea sickness, but a single or occasional transit across the "illimitable wetness" is productive of grievous qualms, especially when it is stormy. Ocean travelers, ship surgeons, yachtmen, commercial buyers sent abroad, voyages by steamboat, and all who are occasionally or frequently called upon to be where "billows are buffeted," should take along Hostetter's stomach Bitters, the finest known antidote for seasickness, malaria, biliousness, and disorders of the stomach and bowels. Many travelers by railroad, with delicate stomachs and nerves, likewise suffer severely en route. These will find the Bitters surely helpful and consolatory. Traveling, even in swift, steady and commodious steamships and sumptuous palace cars, is not always a source of unmixed joy and delight, and the Bitters does much to counteract the discomforts attending it, aggravated by delicate health. Rheumatism, brought on by damp weather, kidney troubles and debility, are effectually relieved by the Bitters.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he caters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

"I have taken, within the past year, several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and find it admirably adapted to the needs of an impoverished system. I am convinced that this preparation, as a blood purifier, is unequaled."—C. C. Dame, pastor Congregational church, Andover, Me.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Could not Keep

Shop without them. I consider your Sulpher Bitters a remarkable blood purifier. I know of several people, whose cases were considered hopeless, that have been cured by your medicine. The sale of Sulpher Bitters is so large here that I could not keep shop without them. E. S. Yates, Pharmacist, 99 Essex street, Lawrence, Mass.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

Eczema, Itchy, Scaly, Skin Tortures.

The simple application of "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT," without any internal medicine, will cure any case of Tetter, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Piles, Itch, Scald Head, Blotches, Pimples, Eczema, all Scaly, Itchy Skin Eruptions, no matter how obstinate or long standing. It is potent, effective, and costs but a trifle. eod&w

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. THE CHALET BY THE RIVER.

By the river's rippling flow,
Where the soft winds fragrant blow,
And the shadows stretch below;
Where the fishes come and go,
And the stately swan birds love
In the green and sunny wave,
My love and I together,
'Mid golden summer weather,
Laughed and sang the hours away,
Where the sunshine dreaming lay,
In the Chalet by the river!

There we watched each little boat,
Gayly laden past us float;
As we heard each mellow note
From the song bird's downy throat,
Trilling all the long day through
'Neath the hazy summer blue,
Where the cloud boats idly fly
O'er the river of the sky,
In our hearts deep rapture sank,
As from love's sweet cup we drank,
In the Chalet by the river!

When the tender gloaming fell
With shadowy mystic spell,
Over river, vale and dell,
In deep solitude to dwell,
My love and I fond plighted
Our vows, in bliss united,
While our hearts sweet rhythm kept
As the moonlight softly crept
Slyly through the latticed rail,
Listening to love's happy tale
In the Chalet by the river!

—Anna, Comtesse de Bremont.

Progress in Central Asia.

As an illustration of progress in central Asia it may be mentioned that while, a few years ago, the traveler was likely to be killed by the natives, he is now in greater danger of being smashed up in a railroad accident. A train on the Trans-Caspian road was upset a few weeks ago near Samarcand and five people killed. They happened to be train hands and Europeans, but had they been Mohammedan pilgrims, who now employ this modern method of expediting their journey to Mecca, there might have been a great outcry against this infidel invention for killing off the faithful. The introduction of collisions on the Central Asian railroad will make tourists thoughtful, for such occurrences, remote from civilized comforts, have their great disadvantages.—New York Sun.

One Way to Catch Monkeys.

A ruse mentioned as successful in the capture of these imitative animals does not, however, bear upon it the stamp of probability. It consists of placing a basin of strong salt water before a party of wild monkeys. The "sportsman" then retires a couple of dozen yards, and, having provided himself with a similar bowl of clear water, proceeds to rub it on his face and eyes. His actions are closely followed by the animals, with the result that the strong brine so effectually blinds them for the time that they may be easily noosed and secured. We heard this from an old sailor who had seen it done.—Once a Week.

To Prevent Railway Collisions.

An Australian is said to have designed a truck to be run before every train, at an adjustable distance, by an electric current transmitted from a dynamo on the engine. If the truck comes in collision with any body in front certain glass tubes, in which the current is conducted, are broken. The current is thus broken, and at the same moment the brakes of the train are automatically applied. This may or may not be a working discovery, still there is sure to be some method, ere long, for making high speed travel almost absolutely secure.—Globe-Democrat.

Looking at a Dried Tear.

The principal element in the composition of a tear, as may readily be supposed, is water. The other elements are salt, soda, phosphate of lime, phosphate of soda and mucus, each in small proportions. A dried tear seen through a microscope of good average power presents a peculiar appearance. The water, after evaporation, leaves behind it the saline ingredients, which amalgamate and form themselves into lengthened cross lines, and look like a number of minute fish bones.—Good Housekeeping.

Ethical Tendency of Tennis.

According to their usual mental habit, the Germans are considering the ethical tendency of lawn tennis. The game is recommended as "a most desirable instrument for the cultivation of sharp sightedness, swift decision, great self mastery, coolness of temper, patience, energy and endurance."—Chicago Herald.

Nature's Own Soap Factory.

A California company has been organized to manufacture soap out of a material that is skimmed from a boiling spring in that state. The substance hardens by exposure to the air, is like soft clay, and is supposed to be a mixture of borax, alkali and lubricating oil. —New York Sun.

Happiest Period in Life.

Probably the happiest period in life most frequently is in middle age, when the eager passions of youth are cooled, and the infirmities of age not yet begun, as we see that the shadows which are at morning and evening so large almost entirely disappear at midday.—Dr. T. Arnold.

The Age of the Camera.

Less than fifty years ago there was not a photographic camera in the world; today there are 15,000 photographic establishments, to say nothing of the thousands of amateur outfits, in the United States.—Chicago Herald.

Oil on Ocean Waves.

The use of oil on troubled waters is well known, and the latest invention, that of scattering it abroad through the medium of rockets, seems likely to prove invaluable.—Home Journal.

Tannin in Weevils.

Tannin has been discovered as an animal substance by M. Villon, a French chemist, who finds that corn weevils contain about 8 per cent. of it.

A dozen trees planted each year may change the appearance of a farm greatly in a generation and lead along to income, very satisfactory, as well.

TIPPLES OF OUR FATHERS.

Toddy, Grog and Other Libations of Early New Englanders—No Side Doors.

Those who enjoy the rum punch, gin fizz, or "sec" of today may be interested to know the manner in which our New England grandfathers indulged in the "cup that cheers" seventy or eighty years ago. In those days the Prohibitory party and other temperance organizations were unknown, even the famous Washingtonian movement being hardly dreamed of at that time. Nearly all persons—at least of the male sex—were in the habit of using spirituous liquors whenever their taste or inclination so suggested.

The favorite alcoholic drink of this part of the country was New England rum, which has been a favorite tipple from a very early period in our history. Perhaps the earliest record is when Governor Endicott, of Massachusetts, was charged five shillings for a quantity at an old tavern in Lynn in 1650. This rum was also the basis of several other popular beverages. Its sale reached a comparatively great magnitude, principally in the forty or fifty years that followed the American revolution. It was nearly all distilled in this section of the country and in towns in close proximity to Boston, hence the name of New England was affixed to the intoxicant.

A hundred years ago there were sixty distilleries in full working order in New England, the bulk of the product being from Salem, Medford and Newport, R. I. The "old Medford" of today originally gained its distinction from the town where it was made, and was not considered as good as that of Salem, which was especially noted for its good quality, and that town turned out a vast quantity also, being at the head of the list in regard to number and capacity of distilleries. Boston, too, had a small share in the fame of producing this liquid, but the Hub dealers, like those of today, were not distillers, but usually jobbers, who dealt in the suburban goods.

In those days it was not necessary for a man to enter any "little side door," nor was he ashamed to tell his wife that he was intoxicated and she must take care of him. Neither did he have to give a wink to the seller, nor did he ever call for Schiedam Schnapps, brandy cocktail, plum juice or even our every day lager, for those drinks were unheard of then. The sight of tin pails and jugs filled with liquor was not at all uncommon on our streets. Cordials made from snakeroot and anise seed were sold largely, often peddled about the streets the same as lemonade venders ply their trade nowadays on the Boston streets.

The doctors of the old school were more liberal in prescribing liquor for persons in delicate health than at the present time, owing to the fact that there was virtually no objection to its use. The cordials of anise seed, etc., were mostly gotten up at Medford, Salem and Lynn.

There was another decoction known as "black strap," which was made of New England rum and molasses, mixed in proportion to suit the taste of the buyer. This was, of course, considerably cheaper than the straight article, and consequently was the favorite drink of those who could not afford anything better. Another drink was composed of rum and sugar, then known as "a horn," and rum dashed with hot water and called "toddy," often drunk by the well to do gentlemen on cold winter evenings along with the eating of apples, which was a favorite custom hereabouts.

A drink composed of rum and something else was called "grog." It originally meant rum diluted with water, but was more often with a cordial or something of that nature. The name of "grog" was derived in a singular way. It is said that once Admiral Vernon, in the British navy, and who was noted for his generous nature, was wont to deal out an allowance of this drink to his sailors. He wore what was called a "grogan" cloak in severe weather, and after a while the men jestingly designated him as "old grog," hence the name of the mixture.

Every event of more than passing notice called forth a goodly supply of liquor. One important occasion was on a day that somebody's pig was to be killed. Such an occasion required the services of three or four men, who took an afternoon to do the work, while the town took a half holiday. Such an important occasion as this would be an utter fizzle were not a large supply of rum on hand ready to use, and it sometimes cost the owner more than the pig was worth to furnish the drinks. Another occasion of note was election day, when every man drank for the good luck of his favorite candidate, and after the event was over, again drank on account of success or hoping for better luck next year.—Boston Globe.

Ornaments from Old Corks.

A cork, if cut into a cube or small brick, bears a close resemblance in miniature to many kinds of stone. When a number of these are combined they look like old specked and indented masonry. They abound in brown or brownish gray spots and little cavities. Therefore, if you take a number of such cork bricks and construct from them the model of a small house with care it will present a very pretty appearance. They are easily fastened together by passing wire or small rods through them or by gluing them together.

It often will be desirable to give the cork some other shape, or to round the corners. This can generally be effected with a sharp penknife and sand paper, but artists who make elaborate imitations of buildings in cork use a new keen file.—Charles G. Leland in St. Nicholas.

A Short and Tough Lot.

The lot of our criminal classes seems demonstrably to be a short one and a tough one. It has actually no ameliorations. "Out of 60,000 prisoners; more than one-half are between the ages of 17 and 30." It takes but three generations to use up a stock that runs to vice. The average life of vicious people is less than one-half that of people of virtue. A recent writer complains that science creates a code of morals that consists in health. Is that not precisely why we are so deeply indebted to science that it is enlarging and lengthening the span of life, and at the same time teaching us what valuable thing life can achieve?—Globe-Democrat.

TRADE S.S.S. MARK FOR THE BLOOD

PERRY'S MILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without profit, and began to despair of curing her at all. I was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the diseases all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child has just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. H. C. WEDDERS.

RICE HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl when but three weeks old broke out with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and heavy head of hair—a robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, H. T. SHOWS.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 19, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1886 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Grab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatments was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing remained to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. I cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit. SLADY M. BURT, 44 West Ninth St.

HOMER, LA., May 25, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again, and that the physicians done for me brought no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it; for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. F. BATSON, J. P.

The Spider to the Fly.

The officers of the army and navy residing in Washington have been served with instructions to subscribe to the democratic fund. Secretary Endicott is not a mugwump, at least in as far as believing in civil service reform is concerned. This act on the part of the democratic managers shows how desperate they regard Mr. Cleveland's chances of re-election to be.

Free Granite---Protected Marble.

Under the republican tariff laws, granite is protected to the extent of a duty of one dollar per ton. This enables American granite workers to compete with Scotch granite, much of which is brought to this country as ballast in vessels, and if admitted free will come in direct competition with the American product. The Mills bill, which has passed the democratic house of representatives at Washington, removes the entire duty, and places granite on the free list. When the Mills bill was originally reported it placed both marble and granite on the free list, but the marble men of Georgia and Tennessee appeared in Washington and insisted that the duty must be restored on that commodity. Yielding to the demands of their southern friends the duty was restored on marble, and granite was continued on the free list. The southern interest must be protected, but the northern industry is to be destroyed for the benefit of foreign granite producers. This simple fact carries its own argument, and if the granite workers of New Hampshire do not rebuke at the polls this democratic attempt to utterly destroy their business they are less patriotic than they are generally supposed to be.

American Missionary Association Convention.

The American Missionary Association will hold its forty-second annual meeting in Providence, R. I., Oct. 23-25. The sessions will be held in the Union Congregational church, and will commence at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 23d.

This missionary body is a national organization, and draws its support from Christian people in every state and territory in the Union. Its missions are in the United States; in the south among the negroes, and among the white people, especially of the mountain regions; in the west among the Indians; and in the Pacific states among the Chinese.

Its object is to give true Christian schools, colleges and churches to these races at our own door. In our country three-fourths of the nation's illiteracy is in the south. Forty per cent of the whole population of the south cannot read! Of the 2,000,000 illiterate voters in our country, 1,500,000 are in the south. In eight representative southern states, 800,000 negro pupils are being trained by 15,000 teachers of the same race. Among more than 2,000,000 mountain whites in the south, in the heart of our country, one-half cannot read! This home mission work is vast and increasingly urgent.

The annual gatherings of this great society are usually meetings of marked interest and power. It brings representative men from all parts of the country, and we are informed that the Providence meeting promises to be one of the most interesting ever held. As the work of this Association takes hold of the foundation principles of our American civilization, it commends itself to the sympathy and endorsement of all who hold their country's welfare dear.

A Proper Tariff Bill.

The senate (or republican) tariff-reduction bill was introduced in the senate on the 3d inst., having been held back several days in order to allow the democratic members of the finance committee to complete their report—in marked contrast to the manner in which the republican members of the house committee were treated in the production of the dark-lantern conglomeration of absurdities known as the Mills bill. That the senate bill is a good one is proved by the admission of the democratic Washington correspondent of a Boston democratic paper, who says:

The bill has three merits: It is convenient in arrangement and precise in terms; it makes reductions in the revenue which can for the most part be exactly calculated; and it has valuable administrative features. In its classifications and definitions it approaches what its framers design it to be—a model high tariff bill. The bill has another merit in republican eyes. Most of its tariff features, except on sugar, conform to the demand of the Chicago platform for "such revision of the tariff laws as will tend to check imports of such articles as are produced by our people."

Its essential provisions are the reductions on sugar, tobacco, and alcohol used in the arts. Senator Sherman stated the figures in his speech as $27,000,000 on sugar, $24,370,000 on tobacco, $6,428,000 on alcohol used in the arts, and $8,100,000 on other articles. These figures differ slightly from those made by other members of the committee, who figure the total reduction made by the bill at $75,000,000.

Concerning the bill the Washington correspondent of the Boston Post says:

A brilliant programme has been outlined for the republican senators now that their tariff bill has been reported. It is to shut their mouths, close their eyes and pass the bill. A republican senator said that his party would be ready to vote when the bill was called up on Monday, the 8th. If this plan can be carried out, all democratic amendments will be voted down, the bill will pass the senate by a party vote, and the house will be brought face to face, three weeks before election, with the problem of how to meet the republican measure. There will be a hasty gathering of democratic representatives from the four quarters of the Union to make a quorum, and the members of the ways and means committee will have to suddenly cancel campaign engagements to attend to their duties here. The plan may fail through the desire of the senate democrats to debate the bill, but then they will be charged with having prevented its passage. The fact that Senator Sherman made his speech to-day because of his intended absence next week, indicates that the republican senators are in earnest in this programme.

Some of the liquor dealers in New York state object to the heavy assessments levied to aid the election of Gov. Hill. They contend that it is better for the trade to have high license than to have the traffic diluted with indiscriminate competition.

Gov. Hill would like to see Mr. Cleveland defeated, and the way open for D. B. Hill to run for president four years hence. Grover Cleveland hopes to see Gov. Hill defeated, that he may be reckoned out of the race in 1892. There is no love lost between these two patriots.

To any one purchasing a bottle of Constitutional Cough Syrup of me and it does not give satisfaction I will refund the money. David Kimball & Co., No. 36 Market street.

The Dominion government has learned that the force of Royal Engineers now serving at Halifax has been increased by a strong draft from the sub-marine section of the Royal Engineers and the depot companies from Chatham, Eng. The incident is not regarded as having any special significance.

Never defer until to-morrow what should be attended to to-day. A slight cough should'nt be neglected when Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup will cure it.

The readers of our publication are requested to use Salvation Oil for any and all pains. It is a sure cure and costs only 25 cents.

Samuel B. Page, Esq., addressed the democracy of Exeter on Wednesday evening of this week. J. G. Crawford and Edward F. Jones talked to the republicans of Kensington the same evening.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

HIS MANNER OF GAIT.

Men's Thoughts and Character Revealed by His Walk—The Troubled.

Would you read a man's thoughts? Observe his gait; study his walk. A famous philosopher approached by a person whom he had never met before, shouted out: "Speak, that I may see you." It was through the voice only that the beauty of a person could be seen by him. If he had desired to form an accurate estimate of the mind he would no doubt have cried: "Walk, that I may judge of you." A man may conceal his true character by his tongue—he may be able to make it wag in a way which will deceive, but his legs will betray him. A thief can no more walk like an honest man than a camel can go through the eye of a needle; a melancholy man cannot possibly put on the gait of the soldier, and Caliban never walked like Ariel. There is fine walking which indicates self possession; uprightness walks with ease and freedom; the student has the slow and musing pace; the tradesman the quick, nervous movement, while the laborer has the hard and heavy tread. A keen observer once remarked that duplicity always skulks; so it does. In like manner, the thief invariably sneaks; shame has a sidelong carriage, but honesty puts its feet into Excelsior's boots and marches to an "onward" measure.

You will have no difficulty in picking out the student. Who has not, while strolling in the public garden or walking along some of the few thoroughfares not yet blocked by commerce, noticed the man with arms behind and eyes fastened fixedly before him, neither looking to the right nor to the left, but with slow and steady step passing silently onward? Perhaps you ask yourself, "What can that man be out for; he neither sees nor hears anything that is happening around him; what good does a walk do him?"

The student's air, his gait, his every action will indicate that he is thinking—that there is something he is endeavoring to grasp; he walks like a man seeking a pearl which he feels he will certainly sooner or later find. He has a confident gait. Note the air of him who is troubled. Restless nature—quick, nervous step; not attempting to seek anything; not striving to note the beauties of the universe of God, or the handiwork of man, but on the contrary endeavoring to shake off some dreaded monster which appears to follow him; a hidden power which seems to speak to him as to that other wanderer, bidding him "move on," and he walks hurriedly, seeing nothing, hearing nothing. He is oppressed by a horrible nightmare whose name is sorrow. Sorrow and stillness in such a case are synonymous terms, and exercise is the only antidote.

It is the easiest thing in the world to note that a man is in trouble by his gait; indeed, he betrays it to that extent that dogs have been known to bark at such persons, as if divining that they were at war with mankind. If a man is vexed he walks to get over his madness, and if you observe him sharply you will notice that, not having the object of his anger to kick, he viciously kicks up the gravel or tries to chip off pieces of the pavement with his boots.

How can you tell a wicked man? The wicked flee when no man pursueth. If a man has done anything for which his conscience accuses him, his impulse is to fly, to get away from the scene of his crime and to put space between himself and that still, small voice. He will be in a hurry, and there will be neither poetry nor harmony in his step. After men quit this earth they are sometimes forced to walk, in order to explate some of their offenses.—D. J. McGrath in Boston Globe.

Are Your Pullets Laying!

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought foward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

HE IS NOT ALONE.

The Manchester Union undertakes to discipline Mr. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, treasurer of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., for discussing in his annual report as treasurer the effect of tariff legislation upon the future of this company, at the annual meeting of the shareholders held at Manchester on the 30th ult.

As we understand it, Mr Coolidge is one of the Barclays of Boston who was too pure to vote for Mr. Blaine in 1884. He was seduced into contributing handsomely as a mugwump, seeking to restore the republican party to a condition of pristine purity. He came, he saw and he was conquered. He has been sadly sold by Mr. Cleveland's policy. To this policy, as well as to the subscription papers of the democratic liquor dealers' association of the Modern Athens, Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge declines to subscribe. In fact, the indications are that he may vote for Harrison instead of Cleveland. Hinc illæ lachrymæ of the Union.

There are many similar instances in the present campaign.

MARITIME NOTES.

The Army and Navy Register of Sept. 29th said: "One of the matters which Secretary Whitney will dispose of in the course of a few days will be to decide to what station the Kearsarge will be dispatched. She will go into commission next week, and will be ready to proceed very soon to some post of duty. She is needed on the Asiatic station as well as in several other quarters, and it is uncertain where the secretary will determine to send her." The Kearsarge is not in commission yet, and although we are opposed to betting, on principle, we are ready to bet the secretary a new hat that she will not leave this navy yard until after Cleveland is defeated in his struggle for re-election to the presidency.

A brig and a three-masted schooner, coal laden, were anchored Thursday evening between Whale's-back light and Newcastle.

The government tug Rocket arrived at the navy yard on Thursday morning, the 4th inst., to take to Boston a number of the men and boys of the Portsmouth and Saratoga, who are to be transferred to the receiving-ship Wabash.

PERSONAL.

Mr. E. C. Stedman is passing a few days at his cottage in Newcastle.

The families of Albert Stickney at Gerrish's island and Jacob Wendell at Frost fields, Newcastle, will return to New York next week.

Judge Locke, of the United States district court of Florida, who has with his family been passing the summer at his father's residence in Manchester, arrived at Kittery on Thursday. The judge leaves to-day for Key West.

Dr. D. W. Jones left this city on Thursday for Las Vegas, New Mexico, he having accepted the position of division surgeon on the Atchison, Topeka Sante Fe railroad, with headquarters at Hot Springs, Las Vegas. We are sorry to lose Dr. Jones from our midst.

Mr. Frank Cook was in this city on Wednesday, the 4th inst., arranging for the appearance in Music hall on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Oct. 8th and 9th, of Seeman's Electra Co., under the management of J. M. Hill, who has sent so many excellent companies over the New England circuit, among them the Margaret Mather troupe.

OBITUARY.

The announcement in to-day's Times of the death of Mrs. Phebe J. Goodrich, wife of Col. Edwin R. Goodrich, of Flatbush, N. Y., formerly of this city, will bring to the friends of the deceased a most happy troop of memories of one whose life was a perpetual benediction, whose character was brim full of the most lovable characteristics, and whose talent though remarkably versatile was from inherent modesty kept hidden from the world. The void made by the departure of Mrs. Goodrich is one not easily filled; the world has too few such women, and the recollections of their lives are like jewels on "the stretched forefinger of all Time, which sparkle forever." In the separation from such a companion Col. Goodrich has, indeed, met with a loss beyond all human estimation.—Portsmouth Times, Oct. 4th.

POLICE COURT

THURSDAY, Oct. 4th.

William D. Mooney, for vagrancy, was ordered to the county farm for ninety days, costs being taxed at $7.67.

Thomas Kelly, for drunkenness, was assessed $9.90, fine and costs, with a term in jail in default of payment.

Hichborn's New Life-Buoy.

The Army and Navy Journal of recent date has a detailed description, illustrated by two engravings, of a new metallic life-buoy for use on naval vessels, which would seem to be a decided improvement upon anything of the kind previously produced. It says:

The Franklin life buoy, designed by Naval Constructor Philip Hichborn, assistant to the chief constructor of the navy, certainly fills a want long felt in the service. Constructor Hichborn has spent much time in the preparation of this idea, and numerous experiments have been made looking to the final result as embodied in the life-saving arrangement. A model of the buoy is now in the office of the chief constructor in the navy department, and has received much favorable notice from naval officers and others who have seen it and had its workings explained.

The buoy is of annular shape, and the air-chamber, made of sheet copper, contains 4,310 cubic inches of air space; it is fitted with life line, chain and handles, and has automatic lighting and position torch for night signal. Two metal bands are attached to opposite parts of the air chamber, at the outer ends of which are fitted the arrangements for carrying the lighted torch when let go at night, or elevated signal for day use. It is so arranged that the torch or signal will always be elevated above the water about twenty inches when the buoy is afloat. A life chain is arranged through the centre open space of the buoy, upon which a person may be supported. The arrangement for holding the buoy in place, and letting it go when needed, is the best yet contrived; and the torches are kindled by contact with the water. Of the buoys now in use in the navy only two are attached to each ship, and these require the constant attendance of a man on the poop deck. Constructor Hichborn proposes to have his buoys stationed at different portions of the ship, and they will be so arranged as to be of immediate use at any time.

Corporation Election.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Concord & Portsmouth railroad was held at Manchester on the 4th inst.; Hon. Samuel H. Bell, president of the corporation, presided, and directors were elected as follows:

Samuel N. Bell, Moody Currier, Walter M. Parker, Manchester; John J. Pickering, William A. Peirce, Portsmouth; Joseph B. Walker, Concord; John J. Bell, Exeter.

The subject of increase of stock was referred to the directors.

The newly-elected directors held a meeting and re-elected Hon. Samuel N. Bell president, and Col. William H. Hackett of this city, clerk.

CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.

MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD.

Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup.

Sunday School Convention.

The New England Congregational Sunday School Association, which has already held successful meetings at Boston and Hartford, meets this year at Lewiston, Maine. This is the first time the association has been into northern New England, and a great occasion is expected by the Sunday school workers of Maine, New Hampshire, and eastern Massachusetts. The officers and speakers, however, come from every state in New England, and the preceding gathering have been large, though composed chiefly of people from the state in which the convention has been held.

The programmes have been issued, and embrace a variety of interesting topics. Among other distinguished speakers are Dr. Burroughs of Amherst college, Rev. Dr. Blake and Hon. D. N. Cramp of Connecticut, Rev. Dr. Dumming, Mr. Hayword and Mr. Winships of Boston. Congressman Dingley will also speak, if his public duties permit his absence from Washington. The convention convenes on the 16th of October, and will adjourn on the 18th.

MRS. KENISTON.

The selectmen of Great Falls on the 3d inst. offered a reward of $300 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Charles H. Eastman. This is the largest reward the statutes authorize. The citizens of Berwick, Me., where Eastman belonged, at a special town meeting on the 3d offered $1000 reward for the same end.

Holton E. Wells, the last man known to have been in company with Charles H. Eastman, who was recently murdered on the bridge between Great Falls and Berwick, was arrested on the 3d inst. as the principal in the murder, and Fred K. Towle as an accessory. It has come out that Wells shook and choked Eastman, who was a man of small size, in the barroom of the Great Falls hotel just before Eastman started for his home, accompanied by Wells.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

MRS. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

School for Training Auctioneers.

It is rumored that an association is to be formed by several of the auctioneers, the purpose of which is to encourage the flow of oratory and descriptive power among these slaughterers of goods, wares and merchandise, public and private. It is felt that something must be done so that business may be more equally distributed among this brotherhood. No name has yet been decided upon for the association, though it is rumored it has been suggested that it should be called the Auctioneer's School of Oratory. A meeting, it is also rumored, was held recently, at which various plans of organization were considered, the matter being finally left in the hands of a committee to prepare and submit a constitution and by-laws at a future meeting. Some of the ideas promulgated were interesting, and showed that many of the auctioneers are anxious to rid the craft of the monotonous system of selling now commonly in vogue.

It was shown that in conducting a sale even ordinary articles of household furniture might have their value enhanced considerably by being mellifluously described, and thus invested with an interest that would divest those present of their capital. One very silvery tongued dweller on the rostrum said that in selling a fancy rocking chair it should be described as a sermon in leather; a cheval glass as the joocse production of a Scandinavian artisan; a couch as a dream in plush, on which to seek and find repose; a parlor set as having caught the rays of a vanishing rainbow; another, as entrancing as the gleam of the stars or the splendor which dies with the moon; a parlor set possessing a placid yet tepid aspect; a dining room in antique oak, a perfect gush of voluminous euphony; an easy chair, a caprice in raw silk; a davenport, beauteous but mingled with a sweet half sadness, and an ordinary refrigerator as a symphony of Siberian frigidity.—New York Graphic.

How Lord Clive Won His Wife.

About the middle of the last century a young cadet named Maskeleyne went to India, where he became acquainted with Lord Clive. The acquaintance ripened into intimate friendship and led to constant association. There hung up in Maskeleyne's room several portraits, among others a miniature which attracted Clive's frequent attention. One day after the English mail had arrived Clive asked Maskeleyne if he had received any English letters, adding: "We have been very much misunderstood at home and much censured in English circles." Maskeleyne replied that he had, and read to his friend a letter he then held in his hand.

A day or two afterward Clive came back to ask to have the letter read to him again. "Who is the writer?" inquired Clive. "My sister," was the reply; "my sister, whose miniature hange there." "Is it a faithful representation?" further asked Clive. "It is," replied Maskeleyne, "of her face and form, but it is unequal to represent the excellence of her mind and character." "Well, Maskeleyne," said Clive, taking him by the hand, "you know me well, and can speak of me as I really am. Do you think that girl would be induced to come to India and marry me? In the present state of affairs I dare not hope to be able to go to England." Maskeleyne wrote home, and so recommended Clive's suit that the lady acquiesced, went to India, and in 1753 was married at Madras to Clive, then rising to the highest distinction.—Chicago Times.

The Swells of the World.

I suppose everybody has noticed that it is more difficult to pose as a swell in a big town than a small one. The same may be said in the cities of the world. It is somewhat on the following plan: In Chicago—A man may be a swell if he has a pot of money. It is permissible to be engaged in business.

New York—Money first, foremost and forever, but no business that approaches the retail.

Berlin—Military prestige.

Paris—Money, manners, recklessness, originality in sin and a popular fad. Business not to be thought of.

London—Blood, title, but not necessarily money, if endowed with natural aptitude for imitating the leaders of fashion. No connection with any business venture, absolute correctness in every detail of attire and outward circumstance, and an endless amount of admiration for recognized social leaders.

It struck me that men of distinctive tendencies toward swelldom in Chicago missed the details small and attractive of both life and attire, while, to be frank, there are, in New York, very few men who approach anything like the standard reached by their models across the water.—Blakely Hall's Letter.

Teaching Dogs Stage Tricks.

The pointer is the most easily trained of short hair dogs. The bulldog is much more intelligent than is generally supposed, and, while less ferocious than is commonly believed, none is capable of greater affection. Mr. Stevens insists that kindness is the principal factor in training dogs. Other fanciers, however, have long contended that brute force only can be relied upon.

Most stage tricks are done by cues or signals, without attracting the attention of the audience. "Romeo" selects any number given by one of the audience. Blocks upon which the ten numerals are painted are arrayed in a row on the stage. The dog has been taught to commence at the extreme right, and a slight clearing in the throat by the master, unheard beyond the footlights, is a cue for the dog to pass the first, second, third, etc., until he reaches the correct block. Silence then gives consent, and the trick is successfully performed. It required two years of patient training to teach Romeo to pick out those numbers, his trainer said, although the dog is a remarkably bright animal.—Newark Advertiser.

Implantation of Teeth.

Dr. Younger's plan of implanting natural teeth in place of those lost has proven less successful than was hoped, as the roots gradually undergo absorption, causing the teeth to loosen and fall out after a year or two.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They favor the free ports of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgment. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Personal regard to the rules of living, and the judicious use of that superior alterative, will insure that inestimable blessing—health.

A Grand Idea.

Prof. Geo. H. Kalteyer, the well known chemist of Texas, investigated the baking powder question, and wrote: "I submitted Prof. Horsford's preparation to a chemical examination, and found it composed of pure and non-poisonous materials. The idea of Prof. Horsford was, indeed a good one, in supplanting the indigestible tartrates, which are the final result of all cream tartar baking powders, by the soluble phosphates, the very nutritive property of bread, and the bone-producing element of nature. It is certainly the best and most healthful bread-raising preparation ever offered to the public."

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

Congress have constantly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

Mrs. Wm. Alden, Duxbury, Mass., Feb. 21, 1887.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

A Life on the Ocean Wave

Indurates the stomach against sea sickness, but a single or occasional transit across the "illimitable wetness" is productive of grievous qualms, especially when it is stormy. Ocean travelers, ship surgeons, yachtmen, commercial buyers sent abroad, voyages by steamboat, and all who are occasionally or frequently called upon to be where "billows are buffeted," should take along Hostetter's stomach Bitters, the finest known antidote for seasickness, malaria, biliousness, and disorders of the stomach and bowels. Many travelers by railroad, with delicate stomachs and nerves, likewise suffer severely en route. These will find the Bitters surely helpful and consolatory. Traveling, even in swift, steady and commodious steamships and sumptuous palace cars, is not always a source of unmixed joy and delight, and the Bitters does much to counteract the discomforts attending it, aggravated by delicate health. Rheumatism, brought on by damp weather, kidney troubles and debility, are effectually relieved by the Bitters.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he caters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

"I have taken, within the past year, several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and find it admirably adapted to the needs of an impoverished system. I am convinced that this preparation, as a blood purifier, is unequaled."—C. C. Dame, pastor Congregational church, Andover, Me.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Could not Keep

Shop without them. I consider your Sulpher Bitters a remarkable blood purifier. I know of several people, whose cases were considered hopeless, that have been cured by your medicine. The sale of Sulpher Bitters is so large here that I could not keep shop without them. E. S. Yates, Pharmacist, 99 Essex street, Lawrence, Mass.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

Eczema, Itchy, Scaly, Skin Tortures.

NIGHT COMETH.

Night cometh, from over the mountains
Its shadowy feet
To the forests, the fields and the fountains
Come faintly, but fleet.
Night cometh and one hath his labors half done
As he waits by the roadside at setting of sun

Night cometh, and on over the meadow
It quietly flows,
And hides in the wave of its shadow
The clover—the rose.
Night cometh, and one with his spade in his hand,
Sits weeping in darkness he can't understand.

Night cometh; the waves of the ocean
That shine in the sun
Are heavy and somber in motion;
Their glory is gone.
Night cometh, and one there is wringing his hands,
And sighing "Too late!" as he sits on the sands.

Night cometh, and with it the riot
Of daylight goes down;
The stars in their shining bring quiet
To village and town.
Night cometh! how many in field and in street
Lie down with the work of their life complete?

The Temples of Burmah.

Most Burmese temples, apart from any external differences of situation or surroundings, are a good deal alike. There are usually four gates, guarded by grotesquely painted giants or monsters twenty or thirty feet high, with staring eyes and open jaws. From each of these gates a steep stair of flat native bricks, roofed over with a bright red arcade of teak planking supported on gilded pillars, leads up to one of the four sides of the temple itself. The latter generally consists of a vast square platform smoothly paved with stone, along the sides of which are ranged numbers of small shrines and images of Buddha, while in the center towers a huge bell shaped pagoda, blazing with gold leaf from summit to base, and surmounted by a pointed open work cupola of gold and jewels.—David Ker in New York Times.

New Telegraph for Mariners.

A novel spectro-telegraphic apparatus has been constructed by Dr. Paul la Cour, a Danish physicist. It projects a steady vertical spectrum, on which, with a special telescope, red and blue dots and lines are seen to appear and disappear. These are Morse signals, produced by the breaking of the spectrum by the opening and shutting of little slits, displaying the colored dots and lines. This is effected by an electrical arrangement having lettered and numbered keys.—Arkansaw Traveler.

A Letter from Columbus.

The Astor library contains among its historic relics a copy of a letter of Columbus, of which only six are known to be in existence. One of these copies sold for $700 at an auction sale in London in 1872. This letter was written by Columbus at Lisbon, and is addressed to Raphael Sanchis, treasurer to the king of Spain. A Latin version of the letter was printed in Rome. The letter is descriptive of his travels and discoveries. It was presented to the library by Mr. W. W. Astor.—New York Sun.

Completing Emperor Nero's Canal.

The Isthmus of Corinth canal is going ahead satisfactorily in the route mapped out about 1,900 years ago by the Emperor Nero. It will be about four miles long and nearly twenty-seven feet deep. It is expected that ships will be able to pass through it at the rate of six miles per hour. The soil is so shifty that it will be necessary to protect the banks with masonry for a distance of nearly two miles.—St. Louis Republic.

Rude Methods of Shaving.

The Andaman Islanders shave almost the entire surface of the scalp as thoroughly as the imperfect implements at their command will allow them. Formerly they used chips of broken flint for this purpose, but since the arrival of Europeans upon their islands they can indulge in the luxury of a shave with a piece of broken bottle glass. It is said that a wife takes a peculiar pleasure in shaving the head of her husband.—Chicago Herald.

The Traveling Salesman.

It may safely be stated that not one drummer in ten likes his situation. After the novelty of the life wears off, an intense loathing of the "road" grows upon him. There is something utterly repugnant to the average man in being obliged, willy nilly, to hurry from place to place as if driven by an antique fury. To a married man it is especially so, and therefore most drummers are young and single.—C. L. Betts in The Epoch.

Talent and Genius.

Genius is a dazzling thing, but it won't plod. Talent is forced to plod or get left, and so with the instinct of self preservation it generally plods. Genius starts out a petted darling, and ends by dodging the bailiffs and dying in the poorhouse, while talent raises a monument in its honor and pays the bill out of its well filled pocket.—Atlanta Constitution.

Not Silent at Home.

The "silent Von Moltke" isn't at all silent at home. He is, on the contrary, a charming, lively and amiable companion. He is very fond of the wife of his nephew, who presides over his household, and of her children. He loves whist and roses, and of these flowers cultivates a great variety.—New York Tribune.

Try the Experiment.

Ask in an average crowd when any prominent event took place over five years ago, and you will probably get as many answers as there are people present. Try the experiment, for instance, among your acquaintances.—Statistician in Globe-Democrat.

The Bermudas' Name

The Bermudas take their name from their discoverer, Juan Bermudas, who visited them in 1522. The first settler was Sir George Summers, who was cast away on them in 1609.—Boston Budget.

HUNTING IN THE ALPS.

The Dangers of Chamois Stalking—Shooting the Auerhahn.

In reality Alpine sport is considerably tamer than the passing tourist usually supposes. Chamois stalking, though the few who practice it declare it to be the most exciting of all pastimes, is for the most part, at least in Austria, left entirely to the poachers. The physical exertion it requires, the dangers it involves and the rarity, or rather the entire want of, stanch and well trained hounds, account for this. Both the chamois and the roe are driven, but in a way suited to the character of the country and impossible on an English estate.

Long before dawn the guests who are invited to take part in a chamois hunt assemble at an appointed place. Then the steep climb into the valley which is to be the scene of operations begins. When the proper positions are reached, the head forester assigns to each of the guests a place near one of the passes the chamois are likely to take. All these ambushes are hidden from the heights above by rocks or bushes, and they are always from three to four hundred, usually more than a thousand, feet apart. When once a sportsman has been placed he is expected to remain where he is as silently as he can. He must not leave his post on any account, as this might not only disturb the drive, but endanger his own life. At about the same time as the hunting party leave their rendezvous a party of drivers accompanied by dogs start from the other side of the mountain range. The noise they make frightens the chamois over the crest and, if the parties have been properly organized, into the valley, where a warm welcome has been prepared for them. Except in very rare cases, those who are posted above are expected to let the herd pass before shooting, in order not to spoil the sport of their friends below. The huntsmen must, of course, always be placed so that the wind blows toward and not from them. Roe are for the most part shot in a similar way, though roe stalking is by no means unusual.

Auerhahn stalking is a far more exciting and peculiarly Alpine form of sport, and it is the favorite recreation of the emperor of Austria. It is only in the mating season, roughly speaking in April and May, that it is permitted. The cock is generally the most timid and cautious of birds; but at this season he becomes a victim of passion, and loses his head—at least at intervals. At dawn he flies to a spot which he knows to be frequented by the hens, perches upon an exposed bough, so that all the charms of his plumage may be seen, and begins his nuptial song. It consists of three distinct parts, with a short pause between each; and, while piping it, the cock extends his feathers and beats upon the bough with his wings. At such times he seems utterly unconscious of everything that goes on around him. This is the sportsman's opportunity; he has taken his place before dawn near a spot which he knows to be frequented and concealed himself in the best cover he can find. As soon as the bird begins its call, which is technically known as its balz, he springs forward to some nearer cover in which he can lie silently in wait during the first pause; while the second strain is in progress he must reach a point near enough to take good aim. An Alpine sportsman would no more think of shooting an Auerhahn in any other way than an English squire would think of shooting a fox. In the greater part of the country the hens are legally protected during the whole of the year; they have a peculiar cry, which some foresters successfully imitate for the purpose of luring their mates.—Saturday Review.

Discipline of English Schools.

In any large and highly organized community there must always be a considerable number of people whose duties or circumstances are such as to destroy the character of home as a suitable place for educational training. In Great Britain, for instance, military and naval officers, with Indian, diplomatic and colonial officials, cannot look forward to having their children educated under their own eyes. Men in political life, distracted by the excitements of their work, and usually migrating from country to town with the legislative seasons, are scarcely better off. The preference of the landed proprietors of England for living on their own estates involves educational isolation, and makes it necessary that boys should be sent away for training.

Here we have already a very large body of people for whom the public school, with its provision for home care, as well as mental training, is practically a necessity. A larger question of expediency still remains. The sons of the wealthy very seldom get a fair chance for training in their own homes. Luxury, social distractions, the excessive environment of dependents, all militate against mental industry and moral tone. It is this consideration which leads the average Englishman of wealth to send his boy away from home to the simpler life and steadier discipline of the public school.—George R. Parkin in The Century.

A Quaint Old Custom.

"Taking the cushion" is a quaint old Spanish court custom still practiced in Madrid. The ceremony creates noble ladies "grandees of Spain," with the right to sit in the royal presence by permission of the king or queen, and recently Queen Christina solemnly followed the prescribed form, in order to admit several young ladies about the court to the higher rank. All the lady grandees of the court assembled in one of the state apartments, each holding a large cushion. In the center of the room were a large armchair and a low stool.

Queen Christina entered with her suite, took the arm chair and requested the ladies to sit down on their cushions. Then the candidates for grandeeship were introduced one by one. Each was accompanied by a sponsor, and made low reverences to the queen and to every grandee in turn. The queen next invited the candidate to sit on the stool at her feet—arranged as more convenient than a cushion—spoke a few words and allowed the lady to kiss her hand, before rising to give her place to the next new comer. The new grandee then retired and sat down upon a cushion within the charmed circle of the ladies.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

LITTLEFIELD'S

Constitutional COUGH SYRUP — FOR — CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.

MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD.

Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup. WILLIAM COTTON.

Third Annual Report of the Board of Directors and Treasurer.

The Directors of the Hospital present their third annual report to the public, with hearts unfeignedly thankful for the fostering care of Heaven, and with renewed gratitude to their friends for their continued sympathy and support.

The year just ended testifies to the increasing value of the institution even more abundantly than the preceding year. The number of hospital days reported last year was 607; the number this year is 1562. Last year the directors called attention to the need of repairs in the hospital building; this year they would call attention to the need of its extension. The house is not large enough, and it is earnestly hoped that benevolent hands will open the way for meeting a necessity which the ensuing year is likely to prove imperative. The Directors are doing all in their power to build up the reputation of the hospital, and it is most desirable that its accommodations and equipments should suffice not for the needs of this community alone but for those of the outlying towns and villages, the eyes of which are already turned towards it, and from which applications for admission, and pecuniary aid, may very soon be confidently expected. The work has already outgrown the house, so that at times only by the closest planning the patients can be provided for and leave any space for emergency cases.

The first of May Miss Miller, the widely known and beloved Matron of the Hospital, was compelled, on account of ill health, to resign her position; and the place was temporarily filled by Miss Ransford until such time as a permanent arrangement could be made. June 18th the present matron and head-nurse, Miss Wood, arrived to take charge. Miss Wood is a graduate of the Training school of the Massachusetts General Hospital. The testimonial of the Superintendent as to her superior qualifications has been fully realized. An unusually large number of patients have been admitted since she came and her abilities thoroughly tested by the demands upon her. The Directors have entire confidence in her skill, and in her general oversight of the affairs of the house. Miss Cook, the assistant nurse for so long a time, continues to act in that capacity; and the Directors desire thus publicly to express their warm appreciation of her especially arduous labors last spring. At intervals, and for long periods, it has been necessary to hire night-nurses also.

In response to the often-expressed wish of some of our prominent citizens that the Hospital might have a permanent fund of at least $10,000, the Directors last January laid aside $500 as a nucleus for such a fund. Several large sums have since been added, by unknown donors, so that it now amounts to $1421.99. To these generous hidden friends most hearty thanks are returned; as also to all who have in any way advanced the work; especially the two connected with St. John's parish who have each for two years supported beds, to another belonging to the same parish who has just contributed $200 for a like purpose, and to a former member of the parish for his yearly gift of $100. The directors are also warmly indebted to different organizations in the city for their "benefit" contributions, resulting from entertainments, as well as for municipal recognition and aid. As was stated in a previous report $200 does not cover the expenses of a bed, although those expenses are reduced to the lowest figure compatible with a proper care of the sick. The expense, however, is not to be weighed against the possibilities of saving lives precious to others if not to ourselves; possibilities which are multiplied ten-fold where the invaluable accessories of hospital treatment, tender, tireless and intelligent nursing, all necessary surrounding conditions, and (if need be) the combined skill of our physicians may be had by those who could not possibly command these advantages elsewhere even by a very large outlay of money. Who can calculate the blessing such an institution is to those who are not "rich in this world!"

The Directors still look hopefully forward to the time when one or more beds may be permanently endowed. How better could one keep his name alive in a community when he shall himself have passed away; or what more fitting memorial of a beloved one in Paradise could be desired than such an endowment in such an asylum! Beautiful as may be the monumental marbles that mark the final resting places of our friends, or the tablets within the sacred precincts of the church that keep alive the precious memory of Christian character and kindle higher aims in those who read the gleaming records on the ancient wall the deed of mercy which the endowment of a hospital bed perpetuates must surely be a memorial no less beautiful in the eyes of men and angels.

May this annual appeal, as well as report, of the directors be received in the same earnest spirit in which it is put forth; and meet with a hearty response, for the sake of Him whose Name is the Divine warrant for their plea.

HARRIET MCEWEN KIMBALL,
Secretary of the board of directors.

HARRIET MCEWEN KIMBALL,
Treasurer.

PORTSMOUTH, October 1st, 1888.

St John's Guild.

On Wednesday, September 19th, St. John's Guild held its annual meeting at the Chapel. The reports were unusually interesting.

The Missionary Chapter has sent out three missionary barrels, valued respectively at $112.27, $44.44 and $35.00; contributed $26.00 to the Bishop Elliot scholarship; and donated a large bundle of valuable wearing apparel to the Cottage Hospital.

The Church and Chancel Chapter has pursued its round of sacred duties in caring continually for the appointments of the altar; furnishing flowers for the Sunday and Saint day decorations; contributing toward the building of the new sacristy; repairing the old Bible; and having a general oversight of the sacred edifice.

The Chapel Chapter reported less than usual this year, for the good reason that so much was accomplished by the members last year in refitting the chapel, for which the Chapter has provided a lot of new hymnals. A handsome walnut case has recently been put in place on one side of the chapel, which was purchased by the children of the Sunday school, and in which is kept the beautiful banner painted for the school by Miss Helen Tilton.

The Choir Chapter which has sustained a great loss in the removal to Washington of its gifted and beloved head, and also from the removal of four or five of its most constant and and valuable members, is still useful, and will soon rally from these losses and doubtless increase in members and activity, and be, as it has ever been, of great assistance to the Rector.

The Children's Home Chapter continues its unwearied labors for that blessed enterprise. Every Thursday members of the Chapter meet at the Home, with busy fingers helping the Matron to make or mend the almost countless garments pertaining to the big family of little ones; and exercising their ingenuity and their faith alike, to build up the interest of the institution. Seven children have left the Home this year, with one exception for other homes, but sixteen still remain. The Chapter has earned $254 for the Home the past year.

The Earnest Workers Chapter has carried on a sewing school with marked success, but was interrupted by sickness and other trials. A little sale of articles made by little hands, however, netted this Chapter $15.77.

The King's Daughters Chapter made a very interesting report of visits to the sick and to the Old Ladies Home, where some of the members read to the inmates on the afternoons of Sunday and Thursday each week. They carry flowers, fruits and delicacies frequently on their visits; and the prisoners at the jail have not been overlooked in the distribution of bouquets. This Chapter, but recently formed, has been very helpful to the Rector during the summer in showing to visitors, who in large numbers lingered after the services to see them, the interesting relics and quaint treasures of the old parish church.

The Hospital and Relief Club Chapter reported $201.77 raised for the support of St. John's bed at the Hospital; also $37.00 from a member of the parish to pay for a carpet in the hospital reception room; $100 towards the permanent fund from Mrs. Robert C. Peirce; and $100 for the same fund, also from Robert Harris, Esq., of New York. Besides these amounts, the Hospital has received the following from other individuals connected with St. John's: from the late Hugh W. Greene, Esq., $100; from friends who thus beautifully commemorate their Golden Wedding, $50; from Alfred O. Larkin, Esq., $200; and from Mrs. Daniel Marcy, toward the fund, $100. It is pleasant to see the old parish of St. John's reaching out in so many directions, year after year; in those peculiarly identified with the church, and in those which especially touch the life of our own community. The Children's Home, established by the former Rector and the Hospital, established by the present Rector, witness forcibly to the desire of Rector and people alike to "do good unto all men."

When a child, by any unusual symptoms, shows that it is suffering great pain, use Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. It will soothe the little sufferer.

The simplest men are generally the safest and surest. Hence the great demand for Laxador, for liver disease, dyspepsia, headache, etc. Price 25 cents.

Trafton and Philippine, the New Brunswick poachers who shot Mrs. Howes on the river at Andover, N. B., have been convicted of manslaughter.

To any one purchasing a bottle of Constitutional Cough Syrup of me and it does not give satisfaction I will refund the money. David Kimball & Co., No. 36 Market street.

The People Not to be Frightened.

There is no doubt that a good many well-meaning people were frightened into the support of the republican ticket, four years ago, by the charge of the republican organs and republican orators that democratic success would bring dire disaster to the country. It is well recollected what these republican prophets foretold would be the result of democratic supremacy. * * Those who threatened to shut down their mills, if Cleveland was elected, have been running on full time, crowded with orders; nobody has been seen making hay in our streets; wages have been good, and the country has enjoyed a remarkable degree of business prosperity.—Times.

True; and this "remarkable degree of business prosperity" has been enjoyed under the republican high protective system, which a republican senate has prevented a democratic president and house from breaking down.

Notwithstanding the "incubus" of protection, the country has enjoyed and is enjoying a degree of prosperity in marked contrast with the condition of things which existed under the low tariff of 1837 and during the fifties. In fact, so attractive does this tariff-crushed land seem when viewed from a distance, that since the first of January, 1888, 150,000 workingmen have left that happy land of tariff for revenue only, England, to come to America and help bear the overwhelming burden. The number of American workingmen who have fled from the wrongs of a protective tariff to bask in the bright sunlight of free trade at its headquarters in England, is not stated.

Knocked Out by the Law.

On Sunday, Sept. 16th, there was a prize fight on Navy island, near Albany, N. Y., between two women, Alice Leary and Mrs. Hattie Leslie. The affair was just as brutal and disgraceful as similar contests between male brutes of the human species. On the 4th inst., in the criminal court at Albany, five men were tried for being concerned in the fight; they were George LaBlanche of Boston, better known as "the marine," who was Hattie Leslie's second; "Billy" Baker, Alice Leary's second; John Leslie, Hattie's husband; John G. Floss, a theatrical manager; and "Curley" Hughes, a "sport." Mrs. Leslie turned state's evidence and told all about the brutal affair. She and the reporters identified the accused. The defence said that it was a "sham" prize fight for theatrical purposes. The jury rendered a verdict convicting all except Hughes. The penalty is one year in prison or $500 fine. Hattie Leslie's case has not been tried, and Alice Leary has not been arrested.

For Harrison and Morton.

Dr. Leonard of Indiana was the greenback candidate for governor of that state four years ago, and had 8338 votes, the democratic plurality being 6427. Dr. Leonard was renominated by the greenbackers this year, but on the 4th inst. withdrew from the candidacy, and announced himself as for Harrison and Morton.

The union labor ticket in West Virginia was withdrawn on the 4th inst., in favor of the republican candidates.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

To Save Life

Frequently requires prompt action. An hour's delay waiting for the doctor may be attended with serious consequences, especially in cases of Croup, Pneumonia, and other throat and lung troubles. Hence, no family should be without a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which has proved itself, in thousands of cases, the best Emergency Medicine ever discovered. It gives prompt relief and prepares the way for a thorough cure, which is certain to be effected by its continued use.

S. H. Latimer, M. D., Mt. Vernon, Ga., says: "I have found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a perfect cure for Croup in all cases. I have known the worst cases relieved in a very short time by its use; and I advise all families to use it in sudden emergencies, for coughs, croup, &c."

A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middletown, Tenn., says: "I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."

"I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," writes E. Bragdon, of Palestine, Texas, "believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died."

THE ROCKET'S FLIGHT.

The steam tug Rocket, which came to this port on Thursday morning from the Boston navy yard, to take to the receiving-ship Wabash at that port the seamen lately attached to the training ships Saratoga and Portsmouth, left this navy yard about one o'clock Friday afternoon with 109 men besides her own complement, and arrived back again about two o'clock, having blown a socket bolt out of her boiler when near Whale's-back. The seamen on the previous day, when they saw the steamer (a craft of 127 tons) which was to convey them to Boston, demurred considerably, and twice "went to the mast" on board the Constitution, where they have been quartered, to remonstrate against being sent around in her, expressing their willingness to pay their own expenses to Boston by rail rather than put to sea in such a diving-bell at this season; but the order for them to go around in the Rocket was from a high quarter, so they had to make the start as above related—and came back again directly.

MARITIME NOTES.

The brickers Satellite, D. K. Ham, Lillie, Estella and Triton, arrived at this port from Boston on Thursday, the 4th inst.

There were seven schooners at the draw pier of the Portsmouth bridge on Friday morning, waiting to pass through.

There were about 6000 tons of coal on board vessels in this harbor on Friday, awaiting a chance to be discharged at the Concord railroad wharf.

Capt. Gear of the schooner Tivona, which went ashore on Wood Island bar near the mouth of the Saco river in the September gale, sold her as she lay for $100. The cargo was insured for $1,500. Captain Gear wishes to express his thanks to Captain Hussey and crew of the life-saving station at Biddeford Pool for help extended, and for the generous treatment received at their hands.

Over 150 persons took advantage of the excursion rates from this city to Boston and return, over the Boston & Maine railroad, Friday morning.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

J. C. Carr is offering great bargains in the boot and shoe line at his store on Market street—the old stand where the business has been conducted for half a century. He proposes to take a decided lead in low prices for foot-wear this fall, and can do it.

Mr. Harry L. Beacham arrived home on Friday from a shooting trip down in Maine, bringing with him a splendid buck deer weighing about 300 lbs., shot by himself; the head was sent away to be mounted as a trophy. Mr. Beacham reports deer as being very plentiful in the Maine woods, so much so that it would be very easy for any one who could shoot at all to kill more of them than the law allows.

At the York country fair at the new Saco driving park, last Thursday afternoon, eight horses started in the 2:35 class, the horse "Harry D.," owned by C. W. Davis of Dover, taking first money, $100, in three straight heats; "Frank," owned by Edgar D. Stoddard of this city, took second money, $50.

Secretary Whitney has issued a notice certifying that the needs of the public service require an increase of the force of employes at the Brooklyn navy yard. The elections are only a few weeks ahead, and if Secretary Whitney's motive is misjudged it is his own fault. The country needs a new navy, but in the interest of pure elections would be willing to wait a little.

The sale at St. John's chapel on Thursday last netted about $50 for the Jacksonville sufferers.

The bridge across the river at Ogunquit, Wells, which has for several years been strongly advocated by one part of the townspeople and as strongly opposed by the other part, is to be constructed at last, the court of last resort having so decided. At a special town meeting in Ogunquit on Monday Oct. 1st, the following committee was chosen to draw specifications and contracts for the building of the bridge: Sullivan Hatch, A. K. Tripp, Barak Maxwell. The bridge is to be finished by July 1st, 1889.

Three government surveyors are making a survey of York county. They are now at work in York.

MUSIC HALL.

Professor Seeman, the Swedish prestidigitateur, gave an exhibition of magic that has not been surpassed by any magician in the city. The part of Electra was the most astonishing and bewildering of all. In this diversion Professor Seeman suspended, in mid-air, Mlle. Seeman, and placed her in several statuesque positions without any visible means of support. The audience was inclined to be skeptical at first, and whispered about hidden wires, etc., but when the magician passed a hoop over the person of the lady while poised in mid-air without encountering any obstacles, the audience was convinced, and applauded vigorously. The performance closed with one of the finest series of stereopticon or dissolving views ever witnessed upon any stage.—Brooklyn Argus.

Professor Seeman is astonishing all who witness his exploits. He claims the lofty title, "The Emperor of Magicians." No one has thus far disputed it.—New York Telegram.

Universalist State Convention.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's Winter Trips to California.

It goes without saying that California is the most attractive and popular resort in America. Its remarkably salubrious and equable climate gives it an advantage over every other section of the world, in fact. That the coming winter will witness an increased tide of travel to the Pacific coast is already strongly indicated. The only remaining question, then, is as to the best way of reaching the land of perpetual spring and summer. This query is easily answered. Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb's series of nine winter tours provide comforts and luxuries otherwise unattainable. Their parties move across the country in magnificent vestibuled trains, with dining-cars and every other first-class appointment. The journey becomes a pleasure even to those who dislike ordinary travelling. The train is literally a "hotel on wheels." Independent tickets are sold permitting the holder to exercise his own preferences as to place and time of sojourn and date of his return. He can travel eastward by any of five different routes, and in any of seventeen different parties, or independently in any train, the return tickets being good until next July. The first and second parties leave Boston November 8th and December 6th. Send to W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School street, Boston, for a descriptive circular.

A republican exchange remarks that the New York democrats are much disturbed over the appearance of blank petitions, to be signed by democrats and addressed to the president, in which allusion is made to the efforts made to defeat Gov. Hill "by a faction which falsely arrogates to itself the claim of your special friendship," and Mr. Cleveland is urged "not to delay to make public your emphatic denunciation of the assertions and actions of this undemocratic faction of the party, and properly rebuking it, so heartily to indorse Gov. Hill's candidacy as to render abortive the effort to divide the democracy of the state of New York by falsely trading on your name." This is a pleasing illustration of the harmony prevailing among the New York democrats.

A Citizens' Candidate for New York.

A mass meeting, remarkable for its high representative character, at the Cooper Union in New York on the evening of the 4th inst., renominated Hon. A S. Hewitt for mayor. Hundreds of leading citizens were present. A republican, Jacob D. Vermilye, president of the Merchant's bank, presided, and in his address declared that party lines should disappear in the presence of a great opportunity to confer a boon upon the people by continuing Mr. Hewitt in the mayoralty. His sentiments were echoed by democrats and republicans alike. James C. Carter, president of the Bar association, made a strong speech, urging the absolute need of divorcing local government from party politics.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

TRUST COMPANY,

Manchester, N. H.

CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences. Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER. Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.

How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.

Cured her Cough.

Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."

Saved his Life.

CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."

We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

STANLEY'S HARDEST BATTLE.

The Graphic Story a Native Tells of an Attack on the Explorer.

The bloodiest and most furious battle Stanley had with the Congo natives during his first descent of that river was with the Ba-Ngala. Everybody has read his graphic account of that combat, in which sixty-four canoes loaded with the fiercest of Congo fighters were precipitated into the little band of travelers, and had not spears been pitted against fire arms Stanley's party would never have reached the sea. A while ago Muele, one of the officers of the chief of the Ba-Ngala, gave to Capt. Coquilhat the native version of that memorable day. The white men on the Congo bring home few stories that surpass in interest those the natives tell of the time when the unknown whites first came among them, and of the commotion these strangers, with their wonderful trade goods and their still more astonishing weapons, everywhere produced.

"We had never seen a white man," said Muele, whose tribe, thickly populating the river bank for many miles, numbers over 100,000 people. "We had not the slightest idea that such beings existed. One day, some dozen moons ago [it was on Feb. 14, 1877], at the moment when the sun stood right above our heads, a flotilla of canoes of a form we had never seen before, preceded by a canoe of extraordinary size, suddenly came into view. In the swiftest part of the current they were quietly passing in front of our villages. We were astonished to see that the men, even to their heads, were covered with white cloths, and we thought it very singular, for the richest chiefs we knew wore only a little rag made of banana fiber; and a fact that was absolutely new to us, and that upset all our notions of humanity, was the sight of two white beings, yes, as white as our pottery clay, who appeared to command the expedition. They seemed to have about the same form as other men, but their hair, their eyes and their color were very strange to us.

"We asked one another, Were not these men envoys from Ibanza, the mysterious spirit, and why did they so suddenly appear upon our river? Their purpose could only be bad, for suddenly they landed on an island opposite us, instead of coming to our shore, as all people did whose intentions were not hostile. At first, before we were able to see them distinctly, we thought they were an expedition from our enemies of Mobeka. Our alarm drums sounded, and we crowded to our canoes, all ready for a fight. But the clothing of the warrors, the strange form of their weapons, and the unheard of aspect of the white men soon undeceived us. Still, we launched our canoes and rapidly approached those of the unknown strangers.

"The older of the two white men had straight gray hair, and his eyes were the color of the water. He stood upon his canoe and held toward us a red cloth and some brass wire. We still approached him, discussing excitedly the meaning of his strange attitude. The other white man [Frank Pocock, who was drowned a few weeks later in the cararacts of the lower Congo] aimed his weapon at us, and the older man talked to him rapidly in a language we could not understand. Those of our friends who were nearest the strangers thought the actions of the white men boded us no good, and so they judged it best at once to attack these mysterious whites, who had come from no one knew where.

"Then the battle began, and it was the most terrible we ever fought. Our spears fell fast among the enemy and we killed some of them, and their bodies lay half over the sides of their canoes. But, oh, what fetich gave their weapons such wonderful power? Their bullets, made of a heavy gray metal we had never seen before, reached us at enormous distances. Women and old men who were following the combat from the shore were hit. The walls of our huts were perforated. Some goats which were wandering far off in the fields dropped dead of their wounds. As for us who were on the water, our stout shields were pierced as though they had been bananas. Many of us were killed and wounded and others were drowned, for the bullets knocked holes in some of our wooden canoes, which filled and sank. Still we kept fighting desperately, and we followed the white beings some distance below our villages. Their band finally escaped us and raised loud cries of triumph as we ended the pursuit. We could not understand what they said."

Muele added that Mata Bulke, the chief of the Ba-Ngala, exerted every effort to dissuade his ardent people from approaching the whites, who, he declared, could not be human beings. It was this same chief who, three years ago this month, wept as he bade farewell to Capt. Coquilhat, the founder of the Ba-Ngala station, who was about to go back to Europe. "Return soon," he said, "for I am old, and I wish to see you again before I die." A few days over a year later Coquilhat was again among the Ba-Ngala, who, with their powerful and aged chief, are now among the most faithful and useful friends of the whites.—New York Sun.

The Schools of Greece.

There is a visible Greece and an invisible Greece, and the visible Greece is a hot bed of propagandism. Education is the weapon she is using with immense power in every country which she hopes to call her own. There are large schools carried on vigorously at Smyrna, Constantinople, Salonica, Mt. Athos, Jannina, Kozana (Macedonia); in Crete, and in many islands of the Ægean. The Greeks are well aware that in the end intelligence wins the day. When the crisis comes educated men will control matters.

These schools have been established and are supported by private funds, given mostly by Greeks who have grown wealthy outside their own country. They are so many frontier fortresses which are all the more powerful because they employ weapons of peace. The Turk has no counter weapon except that kind of oppression that gives more character every day to the invisible Greece. It is needless to say that this propagandism has an immense reactionary effect on the visible Greece, and all over the land may be heard the ring of new forged weapons in her intellectual armory.—"H. W. H." in New York Post.

Are Your Pullets Laying!

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought foward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

A Grand Idea.

Prof. Geo. H. Kalteyer, the well known chemist of Texas, investigated the baking powder question, and wrote: "I submitted Prof. Horsford's preparation to a chemical examination, and found it composed of pure and non-poisonous materials. The idea of Prof. Horsford was, indeed a good one, in supplanting the indigestible tartrates, which are the final result of all cream tartar baking powders, by the soluble phosphates, the very nutritive property of bread, and the bone-producing element of nature. It is certainly the best and most healthful bread-raising preparation ever offered to the public."

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Justice of the Peace says.

Hon. John Nealey, justice of the peace and ex-member of the House of Representatives from Meredith, N. H., was for twelve years a terrible sufferer with rheumatism. He says: I cannot obtain any medicine which does me so much good as your Sulpher Bitters, and I think it is the best medicine made.

Congress have seriously, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

She Tried and Knows.

A leading chemist of New York says: "No plasters of such merit as the Ath-lo-pho-ros Plasters have ever before been produced." They are a novelty because they are not made simply to sell cheap, they are the best that science, skill and money can produce, and will do what is claimed for them. For sprains, aches, weakness, lameness, etc., they are unequaled.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

Liberated from their Fetters

By the helpful, genial action of that most beneficent of aperients, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels soon throw off the burden that paralyzed and weakened them, and resume their normal freedom of action. The action of the Bitters, unlike that of average purgatives, involves no griping or drenching. If it did it would, like them, be valueless for ordinary use. There is nothing ungentile or unnatural attending its operation. Upon the liver, no less than the bowels, its action is most benign, promoting a healthful billious secretion, and directing out of the wrong and into the right channel. Conjointly with costiveness, other billious symptoms disappear when it is systematically used, and the stomach is strengthened as well as regulated by it. Malarial complaints, rheumatism, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles are completely relieved by it. Sleep and appetite are invariably promoted by it.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he enters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

We are willing to bear personal testimony to the efficacy and value of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper, having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents dandrug and stimulates the hair to renewed growth.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

At Uncle Sam's Sub-Treasury.

There are other advantages derived from the sub-treasury. Bills become worn and unfit for service, and these, in amounts of $500, will be taken at the depositories and fresh, new bills be given in exchange. Then, too, coin is being called in at certain times to give place to later coinage. The silver dollars in circulation before the Bland bill of 1878, commonly known as "the dollars of our daddies," and appearing on the assistant treasurer's report as "dads," have been called in. Twenty-cent coins and fractional currency have been called in by the department. These coins or currency when received at any of the sub-treasuries are held until an amount of sufficient worth is received, when it is shipped to Washington, the silver being recoined and the currency destroyed.

The reporter asked Assistant Treasurer Shultz regarding counterfeit money and as to whether it was ever received in his office. He replied that it was seldom any counterfeits were received, as the principal part of their business was transacted through banks, and it is rarely the case that a bad bill or a spurious coin passes the vigilant eyes of the tellers. When bills or coins are received the money passes through the hands of his chief teller or his assistant, and they are each experts in detecting counterfeits. A bill passing through their hands and having the slightest appearance of being spurious is closely examined and then it becomes apparent at once that some outside party is trading upon the good name and credit of Uncle Sam. None of the counterfeits are perfect. In bills there is a deficiency in the size or a poor job of engraving on the vignette, a difference in the thickness of the paper, a something which is at once apparent to the experts and it is at once thrown aside. An iron stamp, bearing the word "counterfeit," in raised letters, is then heated in a gas jet, and the word fumed into the bill so that it can never be defaced. This is then given back the owner—as though that were any consolation. A silver piece found to be spurious is cut in two and the pieces returned. An average of probably three or four bills comes into the sub-treasury in the course of a month and are thus treated.—St. Louis Republic.

Granada during the hot weather was very delightful indeed. Everybody knows the delights of the Alhambra, and, as the best part of the town stands high, it was comparatively cool. We had rooms in one of its towers, bringing a couple of our own servants with us, and when we did not feel inclined to have cooking done at home, could go to the hotels close by, which were always crowded at that season and very amusing by reason of the mixture of nationalities to be met there. In this enchanted city, dirty though it be, you might persuade yourself easily enough that you had left behind the bustle and toil and confusion of the present; time moves so gently that a hundred years more or less does not seem to matter much—there is a quiet retrospective air about things which is eminently soothing, and on the breezy heights of the Alhambra the noise and jar of cities appear as far off as if they belong to another world. Everything is full of an ineffable sense of repose, of peace, of long unbroken silences, save when the irrepressible tourist breaks in upon you unobserved and disturbs your sense of the fitness of things.

As you stand at your window at nightfall you may hear the nightingales singing in the elms beneath, and as you wake next morning and see Granada dimly shining in the golden mist of dawn far below, the white, snowy crest of the Sierra Nevada in the distance and the nearer hills, all blue and purple as a background to the fairy palace at whose gates you dwell, you may well feel that you have rarely looked on a fairer scene, or at all events one more full of deep and abiding interest.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

English Simplicity of Manner.

If there is anything which Englishwomen dislike more than another it is making a fuss. They do not gush over a new acquaintance or over an old one; it is the avoidance of fuss and gush and sloppy compliments which has gained them a reputation for coldness of manner. The coldness of manner is simplicity of manner; that and nothing else, and it is simplicity of nature which dictates the simple manner. Lunch may mean a party of twenty people, but whether twenty or two, there is no ceremony. The ladies walk into the dining room by themselves, the men straggle after, and find their way to such seats as suit them. The talk is as easy as if you were sitting about a fire, or more so. If the lunch is a small one, the talk ripples about the table; if large, you have to take your chance with the two fellow creatures next you—men or women, as chance, you or superior strategy may have determined. Society does not object to serious topics, or even to the serious treatment of them; what it objects to is pedantry, pretention, dullness—to that which is heavy as distinguished from that which is serious. It has preferences and strong preferences, but it will endure much. What it will not endure is the professor who brings into its presence the solemnities of the lecture room, or the man who arrives with a mission.—G. W. Smalley in New York Tribune.

A Gang of Greeks.

It was pleasant to look at the gang of Greek immigrants that had been brought to Castle Garden by a steamship from one of the Mediterranean ports. They had come from the vicinity of ancient Athens to try their fortunes in New York. It was evident to any one who looked at their garb as they set foot upon our shores and meandered through Battery park that they were very poor people, whose lives had been very hard, but you could not find on this globe finer specimens of any race of mankind. They would have made models for a sculptor. Their figures had been cast in an antique mold, worthy of the time of Pericles; their limbs were lithe, their features classical, and they bore themselves proudly as they glanced around at the novel scenes of the locality. The immigrants from Greece who landed at Castle Garden last year numbered over 600 men and women.—New York Evening Sun.

How a Panorama Is Painted.

The popular idea of how the war cycloramas, like the Battle of Gettysburg, Battle of Shiloh, Battle of Chickamauga, etc., are painted appears very laughable to a person who knows how the work is accomplished. The Battle of Gettysburg and the Siege of Paris have been shown for several years on opposite sides of Hubbard court, in Chicago, and the stock paid large dividends. Each was advertised as the work of celebrated French artists, father and son, and the popular idea is that these gentlemen painted them. The fact is that, beyond a general outlining of the work, which was probably faithfully made after maps procured from authentic sources and a general direction of the plan of the work, the artist in chief had very little to do with it. No man engaged in a battle sees it, and an accurate painting of two armies in combat is impossible. The general features only are known. For instance, in the Gettysburg painting there are accurately defined the roads, Crown Hill, Little Crown Hill, the wheat field in which a memorable charge was made, one or two buildings which were headquarters of the leading generals, and with reasonable accuracy, the topography of the country is depicted with excellent perspective. But the details of the battle, the actual clash of arms between this and that division or brigade, is left a good deal to the imagination.

The artist-in-chief hires some men to put in the sky, other men to put in the trees and foliage, other men to put in the men in action. Attention is paid to developing this or that memorable incident, as in the Gettysburg painting, the death of the cannoneer, the amputation of the soldier's limb beside the haystack. Take it all together, it makes up a picture that is thrilling enough to arouse the most intense interest on the part of the old soldier. I remember standing by the side of a veteran at the Chicago picture of Gettysburg. He was explaining to a companion the details of the fight, in which he had borne an honorable part. "Say Bill," said he, "at that stone wall there I lost my hat, and, by gosh, if there ain't the old hat lying there yet!" In painting pictures of battles shrewd artists never fail to bestrew the field with lost hats, muskets and canteens.—Artist in Globe-Democrat.

Science for the Million.

Nowadays when a man travels there is no reason, if he visits some country that has not been exhausted, why he should not bring back many solid and accurate facts of scientific value, even though he may lack extended training in science. Both the English and the Germans have comprehensive hand books compiled by the most notable authorities, giving the traveler manifold hints how to make his wanderings useful to the world. They show him in the simplest possible manner the methods of making route maps, of ascertaining most easily and accurately the width and velocity of rivers, the height of mountains, latitudes, longitudes and so on. They point out the facts he needs to observe to give geologists the clearest idea of the physical structure of a country. They show him how to make and preserve collections in natural history, supply hints on surveying and photography, and tell him just what to do to make his observations valuable.

If, in addition to those hints, he desires preliminary instruction and practical field training, ample provisions to meet his wants have been supplied by the geographical societies in London, Paris and Berlin, where at moderate cost (in London only two shillings and sixpence an hour) he is drilled in surveying and mapping, geology, including field training, geological survey, botany, and photography. This is all the preliminary training that many of our most eminent explorers, including Stanley, have received. Many ingenious devices and expedients have also been invented to facilitate the work of the explorer, of which we need only mention here the French color plates, each tint having its own number, by means of which the traveler is able to give a far more accurate idea of the color of the people he meets than he could convey by any description. The invention of dry plates in photography also has been a great boon to explorers.—New York Sun.

Slaves and Railroads.

As a whole nation we are not greatly concerned to inquire into the prospects of African commerce. We are not bound to consider closely whether good or bad trade will be the outcome of the recent agreement between France, Germany, and Great Britain on the affairs of Zanzibar, or what will be the trade results of our own recent great acquisition of exclusive influence in the southern parts of the country. It must yet be borne in mind that trade questions are themselves intimately bound up with the rescue of the African from his tyrants; seeing that commerce, as it is at present conducted in many parts of Eastern Central Africa, even that larger kind of commerce with which the white man eventually deals at the sea coast emporia, necessarily involves the employment of slaves as carriers.

In roadless regions inhabited by people who are too primitive to breed cattle, and where belts of country infested by the tsetse fly have to be crossed, none but human beasts of burden can bear the products of industry. An elephant may be killed a thousand miles from the coast, and each tusk is the burden of a negro slave to the nearest seaport, while it will have taken three or four negroes to carry the calico required to pay the elephant hunter in the interior. Slavery and slave carriage is therefore at present a necessary incident of trade in many parts of Africa. It is evident that if civilized modes of carriage are once established in the German and English "spheres of influence," slave borne traffic will give way to cheaper and more speedy conveyance by road, by rail, or by navigable river.—Nineteenth Century.

He Had No Fever.

Dr. Holmes relates the following to illustrate the significance of small things in the sick room: "Will you have an orange or a fig?" said Dr. James Jackson to a fine little boy now grown up to goodly stature. "A fig," answered Master Theodore, with alacrity. "No fever there," said the good doctor, "or he would certainly have said an orange."—Herald of Health.

LITTLEFIELD'S Constitutional COUGH SYRUP — FOR — CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.

MR. C. B. LITTLEFIELD, Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup. WILLIAM COTTON.

PRICE 25 AND 50 CENTS. — SOLD BY — David Kimball & Co., 36 Market Street.

More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

The Yellow Fever.

There were fifty-two new cases and six deaths at Jacksonville on the 5th inst. Weather warm, and situation unchanged except that the cases are of a milder type. Total cases to date, 3022; total deaths, 277. Over two-thirds of the new cases are among the colored people. Provisions, ice and doctors have been sent to Sanderson, Fla., and $1000 to Gainesville. There is one case of the fever at St. Nicholas. At St. Augustine there are 300 cases of dengue fever.

Medical officers and sanitary inspectors of the United States marine hospital service have been notified that oranges, lemons and limes, unless packed in towns known to be infected by yellow fever, will be passed without fumigation, as will also cigars and leaf tobacco.

The relief committee at Decatur, Ala., on the 5th telegraphed urgently for aid; money and provisions were forwarded from Birmingham on the 6th. There were seven new cases and one death at Decatur on the 5th; one doctor was taken down that day, and another was expected to die that night, leaving only three doctors fit for duty. Weather very hot, and worse record feared. Twelve refugees from Decatur have died in other places.

The New York Mayoralty.

The Tammany hall democracy last Friday evening nominated Sheriff Hugh J. Grant for mayor of New York city; endorsed Cleveland for president, and Hill for governor; and denounced know-nothingism, which is interpreted as an attack on Hewitt for his refusal to allow any foreign flags to be hoisted on the city hall, Mr. Hewitt having been renominated previously at an immense convention of prominent men of both parties. The New York Tribune of the 6th said the republicans would probably nominate John H. Starin as their candidate, Hewitt's record on the high license question not being satisfactory. It is expected that Hewitt will be nominated by the County democracy, who hate the Tammanyites.

Our Next Councillor.

Hon. Charles H. Horton of Dover, who is to be the next councillor from this district, having been nominated as the republican candidate, was born in New York city, Dec. 12th, 1816. His father, Benjamin Horton, came from Gilmanton in this state, and his mother was a native of Salem, Mass. His parents removed from New York to Richmond, Va., and from there to Salem, Mass., where his education was begun. They again moved—this time to Boston, and the subject of this sketch finished his education in the Eliot and Hancock schools. He served seven years' apprenticeship in Boston at the bookbinding business, and in 1841 was married to Susan S. Lacoste, of Portsmouth, a descendent of General Warren of Revolutionary fame. In 1852 he moved to Dover with his family, and entered into the bookbinding business in the Free Baptist building, now owned by the Odd Fellows, in which building he is now continuing his business. Mr. Horton and wife have had five children, all of whom are now living.

Mr. Horton has held a number of public offices, and has always served his constituents with signal ability and integrity. He was a member of the common council of Dover in 1858-76, and was year. He served as alderman during the years 1855-63-77; as member of the State Aid committee in 1862-63; as member of the legislature in 1859-60; as mayor of Dover in 1873-74, and as member of the last constitutional convention in this state. Besides being a clear-headed, intelligent man, Mr. Horton is one of the most genial men to be found anywhere, and he can make a first rate speech, too, when occasion requires it.

The second trial of John E. Hutchinson, for the Grant murder at Laconia a year ago, ended in a disagreement of the jury as on the first trial.

The proprietors of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, will pay a large reward if any certificate published by them is not found genuine.

The minority of the senate finance committee take the ground that putting wool upon the free list would raise the price of wool. No doubt it would—of foreign wool, after the foreign wool growers had acquired control of our markets through the ruin of the American sheep-raising industry.

The Biddeford Journal remarks: "The democratic newspapers are still strugling to hold down the republican plurality in Maine. It reminds one of the late lamented John Phenix, who heroically held the other fellow down by promptly inserting his nose between his antagonist's teeth."

A democratic candidate for Congress in Michigan was very eager to know why Mr. Blaine voted against a tax on lumber in 1868, and is now in favor of continuing the tariff on it. Mr. Blaine relieved his questioner's anxiety by pointing out that it was an internal revenue tax which he voted against twenty years ago, while it is a tariff tax which he is advocating to-day; further explaining that an internal tax is one that does not protect any American industry, while a tariff tax gives to the American laborer and to every industrial interest great advantage over the foreign laborers and the industrial interests of other countries.

Sally Ann Bradley, aged seventy-three years, had two sons killed, and her husband and two other sons injured, while serving in the Union army during the war of the rebellion. Congress passed a bill giving this dependent mother a pension of $12 a month. Mr. Cleveland vetoed the bill on the ground that as Sally had lived so long without procuring a pension, she ought to be able to pull through by her own efforts! There is much indignation at this act of the president, which saves $12 a month to this great country on a mere technicality, while he permits millions to be squandered on the river and harbor act, and winks at Garland when he takes forty thousand dollars without warrant of law to pay O. Roman Thurman and other lawyers for fighting the telephone cases for a private syndicate.

Quiet as political matters are on the surface in this city, the republicans are not idle. A closer canvass is being made than for four or five years past, and the result so far is as pleasing as it is surprising to the canvassers, who are among the most conservative yet earnest members of the party.

MARITIME NOTES.

The United States tug Rocket, Lieut. Comdr. Iverson commanding, sailed from this navy yard about eleven o'clock Saturday forenoon for Boston, with seamen from the training ships Saratoga and Portsmouth to be transferred to the receiving ship Wabash at Boston.

The ship Gov. Goodwin, Pray, has been chartered to take general cargo from Hong Kong, China, to New York, for $14,000.

The utter lack of everything pertaining to efficiency in management of the navy department was last week seen in the folly of transporting men from this navy yard to Boston by a steam tug whose repairs, like those of vessels at all the navy yards, had been neglected. The officials at the navy yards, or indeed at the departments, cannot be blamed for this business. Of course the economical mode of transfer would have been to send the men direct from Kittery to Boston by rail at excursion rates, but the Boston democrats needed the money this would have required to put into the election fund, as subscriptions are reported to come in tardily.

SILLY HORSES.

A horse attached to the butcher cart belonging to the Chicago Meat Co., while standing in front of John Mitchell's store on Islington street, Friday, took fright from a passing team, gave a spring, and the cart collided with a telegraph pole, breaking one shaft, the whiffletree and forward axle. The horse freed himself from the wreck and ran across the street, where he was stopped without doing any more damage.

A horse attached to the store wagon of John H. Wells & Co., while standing on Daniel street Saturday morning, took fright from a passing team, and ran through Penhallow state to State, where in trying to avoid a coal team he brought the wagon up against a post in front of the building formerly occupied by Leonard Akerman & Son, where the runaway ended; damage slight.

James J. Wiggin, a prominent citizen of Saco and one of the oldest Masons in York county, died on the night of the 5th inst., aged seventy five years.

The closing horse trots at the York county fair at Saco, Me., were on Saturday postponed to Monday on account of the rain

A quite large party of summer boarders left the various boarding houses at York harbor last Saturday morning, taking the train for Boston.

The Kittery base ball club went to South Berwick on Friday of last week, and defeated the South Berwick club by a score of nine to seven.

Rev. Otis Holmes, pastor of the Congregational church at Kittery Point, passed the 85th anniversary of his birthday on Wednesday, the 3d inst.

Phillippine and Trafton, the cowardly murderers of Mrs. Howes, were sentenced to fifteen years in the New Brunswick penitentiary, the full extent of the law for the crime, manslaughter, of which they were found guilty.

THE CRUCIAL TEST.

The severe analytical tests to which the various baking powders have from time to time been placed have demonstrated clearly to the public the relative merits of the different brands from a scientific point of view. The Government chemists, for instance, have found in their official tests that the Royal Baking Powder gave off the largest amount of leavening gas, and therefore was the most economical for general use. They also found the Royal to be absolutely pure, and the only baking powder that did not contain either lime, alum, or bone or rock phosphate. For these reasons they recommended it for Government uses, and it is now used in the War, Navy and Indian departments.

But the crucial test of the kitchen is, after all, the most satisfactory to the housekeeper. A baking powder that never fails to make light, sweet, wholesome, and palatable bread, biscuit, cake, etc., is the one that will be selected by the practical housekeeper and received into her kitchen for continuous use. This test the Royal Baking Powder has stood for over twenty years without a failure, and hence its reputation as the best baking powder made has spread from house to house, until its use has become as universal as its merits are unrivaled.

CORTICELLI Wash Silk.

The colors are warranted not to stain the most delicate fabric in washing with warm water and Castile soap. Sold in four distinct sizes:—G., extra coarse, called Rope;—EE, coarse, called Embroidery;—No. 500, medium, called Outline,—and a fine size called Floss. This last is sometimes known as Filo Floss, and is sold in the Corticelli brand on spools only NONOTUCK SILK CO., Sole Makers, 18 Summer Street, Boston.

USE IVORY SOAP IN THE STABLE.

THE IVORY SOAP is most excellent for washing galled spots, scratches, etc., etc., on horses, for it will cleanse without irritating, and the vegetable oils of which it is made are cooling and healing in effect.

A WORD OF WARNING.

There are many white soaps, each represented to be "just as good as the 'Ivory'," they ARE NOT, but like all counterfeits, lack the peculiar and remarkable qualities of the genuine. Ask for "Ivory" Soap and insist upon getting it.

A FEW WORDS UPON A NEW SUBJECT.

We are inclined to indite a few lines concerning the weather. Not that we can write anything especially new or startling concerning this oft discussed, and indeed trite topic, but rather as a journalistic duty to chronicle the fact that the fall of 1888, to say the least, has thus far been peculiar.

We have that undisputed authority, the dicta of the oldest inhabitant, from whose verdict there is no appeal, that the late departed September beat all its predecessors in the eccentricity of its climate. We, who had seen summer guests struggle in the attempt to achieve enjoyment amid the humidity of July and August,—we, of the stay-at-homes, after witnessing the departure of the summer birds, the sea-side sojourners, who must reach home by the first Monday in September "because the children then begin school, you know,"—we, us and company, had flattered ourselves that a genial September was to be ours. Ours to revel in the balmy air of the ninth month, ours to visit the then deserted shore of the ocean, to sail on the Piscataqua, to walk in shady paths where of late couples from coy Chicago or smoky St. Louis had perhaps whispered their tales of love. We had anticipated the pictures of the golden-tinted sunsets, rivalling, nay, exceeding, the beauties of the Italian after-dinner skies; but all in vain. September has proved to have been a month the meanest on the calendar, of which the less said the better.

We turned hopefully to October, a more sedate month, rich commonly in its promises of Indian summer, clear days, glorious sunshine and air full of tonic. But thus far what of October, save the wetness of the wet? What is the remedy? How shall we do justice to our feelings, and the rights of our patrons? Who save the manufacturers of rubber goods enjoys this state of the atmosphere? People have become fatigued in discussing probabilities, and have been disgusted at the disappointment of all their predictions. The probabilities sent out by the government at Washington are as fallacious as are the president's promises relative to civil service reform. They promise one thing and give us every kind, except what has been predicted.

To those who depend upon good, bracing, pleasant weather, the season of late has been distressingly uncomfortable. To some, the weather appears simply beastly. To others, who take everything as it occurs, who have good health and well ordered nerves, and are full of vitality, with perhaps a chance as well as inclination to constant work, the especial condition of the weather may not be of much moment. But to the sick and infirm, to women who are housed and only make an occasional venture out of doors, to the men of leisure, the pleasure-seeker, old or young, the livery stable keeper, the farmer and mechanic who have so much out of doors work unfinished, to the many who spend so much of their time in the open air, this protracted humidity, this weary round of rainy days, this season of leaden skies and continued gloom is discouraging and depressing. The hope is, that with so much rain fall, so continued a spell of bad weather, there is in store for us a long season of bright and sunny days, when the present wet period shall be succeeded by weather which will induce us to forget the unpropitious portion of the present fall. Let us take courage and hope for better days,

"The happy days unclouded to their close."

OBITUARY.

Capt. George T. Ball died in Greenland on Saturday, Oct. 6th, at the age of about seventy-nine years. Capt Ball was one of the old-time shipmasters sailing out of this port, or in ships built and owned here; was one of the oldest members of Piscataqua Lodge, I. O. O. F., and a member of the Portsmouth Marine society. The funeral takes place to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock from the Methodist church in Greenland.

Mr. Fred P. Lambert of this city died on the morning of the 6th inst. He was a son of Mr. John Lambert of North Kittery, and leaves a wife and one child. For several years past he has been a teamster for Hon. Frank Jones; he was a young man of the best character, and highly esteemed by all with whom he was brought in contact.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Daniel Collins and wife, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Collins' parents, Mr. B. Whitcomb and wife of Fleet street.

Mr. Smith R. Treadwell and family, of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived in this city last Friday on a visit of two weeks to relatives and friends here.

Miss Fannie Deverson is visiting Miss Lillian Holmes, formerly of this city, at Roslindale, Mass.

Mr. W. S. Goodwin, freight clerk at the Boston & Maine railroad station in this city, accompanied by his wife and family, left town last Saturday morning for a week's vacation.

Mr. Charles S. Dodge, formerly of this city but for some years past at the head of the reportorial staff of the Lowell (Mass.) Courier, has been appointed business manager of the paper. Mr. Dodge is a hard and conscientious worker, and has well earned his promotion, of which we are glad to hear.

Mr. A. J. Parsons and wife, of York, arrived home on Saturday last from an extended trip in Wisconsin. They report the weather out there as of very inferior quality, but still a trifle better than we have had here.

FLAG RAISING IN NEWINGTON.

Last Friday afternoon a large and handsome United States flag, bearing the names of Harrison and Morton, was hoisted at the residence of Mr. Lewis L. deRochemont in Newington. Although no public notice of the raising had been given, a goodly number of enthusiastic republicans had assembled, and as the banner floated proudly from the staff three rousing cheers were given for Harrison, Morton, and protection to American industies. The republicans in Newington are wide awake, and propose to have a grand rally in the town hall in a short time, for which occasion they have engaged the services of one of New Hampshire's best campaign speakers.

MUSIC HALL.

The brilliancy of this eminent necromancer [Seeman] must be seen to be appreciated. He gave an exhibition which has not been seen surpassed by any magician who has ever visited the city. The programme was divided into four parts, all of which were wonderful, but part four, called the suspension act, was the most bewildering of all. It is so marvellously performed that one feels inclined to doubt the existence of the law of gravitation — St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Stetson Opera Co., numbering sixty people, will appear in Music hall on Friday evening, Oct. 19th, and present for the first time in this city the Gilbert & Sullivan comic opera "Ruddigore."

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Rev. Daniel Rollins, formerly a resident of this city, assisted at the services in St. John's church Sunday forenoon.

The Episcopal church of this city has sent $105 to the yellow fever sufferers in Florida. The amount of subscriptions by citizens at the city treasurer's office was $113, which has been forwarded to the mayor of Jacksonville by Mayor Hodgdon.

Mr. Charles E. Simpson, the old established clothier at the corner of Bow and Market streets, has a new advertisement in our paper to-day. Any person in want of clothing of any kind, for light or heavy weather, for shore or sea use, can find what is desired there, at the lowest prices for goods of the quality offered.

Mr. George H. Hutchinson, for some time tenor of the choir of the North church, having concluded his engagement there and in the choir of St. John's church, and sang there on Sunday forenoon for the first time.

The fall arrangement of the Boston & Maine railroad will go into effect on Sunday, Oct. 21st.

We print to-day a new advertisement of Ayers & Locke, the extensive dealers in all lines of dry goods at Nos. 30 and 32 Market street. The ladies of Portsmouth, and all persons contemplating the furnishing or refurnishing of residences, will do well for themselves to read this advertisement and then call upon the advertisers before deciding upon their purchases.

Paymaster George A. Lyon returned to this naval station last week from Washington, whither he went to be examined for promotion to the rank of pay inspector, to which grade he has since been nominated, as everyone who knows him will be glad to learn.

The October term of the Circuit court of the United States begins at Concord to-day. The jurors will come in on Tuesday. Case of the Bartlett Land & Lumber Co. against Geo. H. Morey, involving the title to large tracts of timber lands near the line of the Portland & Ogdensburg railroad, which was in order for trial, has been continued to the May term, 1889.

Mr. Richard Hoyt, one of the old democratic stand-bys of Madbury, was in this city on Saturday. He told a friend of the same political persuasion formerly—and the same political feeling as himself now—that the weather this summer had been as chilling to the farmers of Madbury as the administration of President Cleveland had been to the democratic party of the

WHAT IS SCROFULA
It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED
By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"Every spring my wife and children have been troubled with scrofula, sores breaking out on them in various places. My little boy, three years old, has been a terrible sufferer. Last spring he was one mass of sores from head to feet. I was advised to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and we have all taken it. The result is that all have been cured of the scrofula, my little boy being entirely free from sores, and all four of my children look bright and healthy." W. B. ATHERTON, Passaic City, N. J.

A CURIOSITY.

Prof. Adolph Seeman, "the Emperor of Magicans," who appears at Music Hall this and to-morrow evenings, has in his possession a ring which was made and presented to the wife of Martin Luther, the great Christian reformer, by the Kurfurst of Bandenburg, over 300 years ago. Inscribed on the ring are odd and curious designs pertaining to the crucifixition of Christ. The ring will be on exhibition to-day and to-morrow in the window of J. H. Hutchinson's store on Market square, with history and description of the same.

NEW HAMPSHIRE
TRUST COMPANY,
Manchester, N. H.
CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer flux.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in liquor drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences. Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER. Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

BILIOUSNESS.

THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

SELF EXTINGUISHMENT OF FIRES.

Automatic Sprinklers—A Tinsmith's Experience—Several Curious Instances.

The apparatus which is most promptly used in cases of burning buildings, and also with the least efficacy, is the human voice, notwithstanding the historical fact that blowing has accomplished nothing since the days of Jericho. Yet there are numerous instances where fires have been extinguished through causes connected with their origin, and so completely outside of precedence that they serve as instances of the happening of the unexpected. In this connection we do not refer to the fires extinguished by automatic sprinklers, where the result is clearly what has been expected to happen. Notwithstanding the fact that when a fire occurs on property protected by automatic sprinklers, those present avail themselves of all the means of grace in the shape of the usual fire apparatus at hand, yet there are numerous instances where fires have occurred at night or in rooms vacant at the time, where the fact has been made known only by water percolating through the floors, or the sound of the automatic fire alarms, or from the sprinklers which have already come into active operation, the fire having called down means for self extinguishment.

But the instances which we have in mind are those where the means of extinguishment were not expected, as in the well known cathedral building in Boston, where a fire, caused by spontaneous ignition in a storeroom, melted the lead water pipes, and the water issuing from them extinguished the fire. A similar instance happened in a building in Market street, Philadelphia. Some sheet metal pails were returned by the purchaser to a tinsmith in Chester, Pa., with the complaint that they were not tightly made. The manufacturer resoldered them, and in order to test his work filled them with water and hung them upon hooks at the ceiling. While the men were at dinner during the noon hour, a fire heated the upper part of the room so that the bails connecting the handles to the pails became unsoldered, and the dropping of the pails of water dashed out the fire.

Some waste left upon the top of a steam pump at Watertown, Mass., blazed from spontaneous ignition, and this in turn set fire to the lagging around the steam cylinders and the feed pipe, where it melted the soldered attachments of a continuous automatic oiler. The steam from the feed pipe was discharged through the small tubes formerly leading to the oiler, and extinguished the fire. There have been numerous instances of fires which have ceased for want of air. During the war of the rebellion attempts were made to burn New York city, as the result of a conspiracy, fires being started in several hotels; but in order to prevent premature detection the culprits closed up the rooms so tightly that the fires were smothered. At a hotel in Woonsocket the steam pipes caused a fire in the spaces in the walls of the building, which was extinguished for want of air to support combustion. The time of the fire is unknown, as its occurrence was not discovered until some time afterward, when in the progress of some alteration to the building the facts were made apparent.

It may be interesting to know that in this instance the steam heating service was ordinarily used at a pressure of about four pounds to the square inch during the coldest weather, and that the safety valve was so arranged that the pressure could never exceed ten pounds. A spark of static electricity proceeding from a belt ignited leaking gas, and this in turn set cotton on fire, which operated the automatic sprinklers and extinguished it. An attempt was made to destroy a block of new dwellings at Brookline, Mass., before the buildings were entirely finished. Some people, alarmed by the smoke which was seen in each division of the structure, rushed in to save doors and portable fixtures, when it was noticed that the fires did not appear to gain any headway, and when the smoke had entirely died away, it was found that the incendiary had placed lighted candles in sawdust and other inflammable material in drawers and closets, but with such limited supplies of air that combustion could not be supported and the fires became smothered.—Engineering.

The Denunciation of Noise.

"I can bear the heat very well," said a student forced to spend a summer in the city, "but I cannot endure the noise." Possibly he did not stop to consider that, in making such a declaration, he placed himself in illustrious company. Thomas Carlyle "could not abide" a noise, especially that of the morning crowing of cocks. Wallenstein, accustomed as he was to the din of battle, had an unconquerable dread of the barking of dogs, and even the clatter of the large spurs fashionable in his day. In order to insure quiet, he engaged twelve patrols to make regular circuits about his house night and day.

Neither Julius Cæsar nor the philosopher, Kant, could tolerate the crowing of poor chanticleer, who, indeed, seems to have very few friends among the studious and sensitive. Schopenhauer exceeds almost all lovers of quiet in the extravagance of his denunciation of noise. He declares that the amount which a man can bear with ease is in inverse ratio to his mental power.

"If I hear a dog barking for hours on the threshold of a house," he writes, "I know well enough what kind of brains I may expect from its inhabitants."—Youth's Companion.

The Victims of Fright.

The Oriental legend that represents cholera meeting the traveler flying from the scourge, and telling him that the majority of the dead were the victims of fright, not of the plague, seems to apply to the yellow fever scare in the United States. If the same number of people who die in New York in a single season of pneumonia, consumption, or avoidable accidents, fell victims to yellow fever or any other epidemic, the city would be emptied of inhabitants, and panic and consternation would prevail. The scare created causes much more suffering and disturbance than the disease itself. Hence in some southern countries where it is endemic it attracts no more notice than most of the other evils that afflict the human family. Courage is one of the best of medicines.—Once a Week.

Are Your Pullets Laying?

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought foward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 60 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

Personal regard to the rules of living, and the judicious use of that superior alterative, will insure that inestimable blessing—health.

Cutting teeth is one of the hardest pieces of work the baby does; why not help it out by allowing it occasional doses of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state commendation [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Are You Going

To travel? If so you must be very careful of your health, or your doctor's bills will cost you more than your travelling expenses. A bottle of Sulpher Bitters will protect you from all sickness incident to change of climate.

Congress have evidently, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

Took First Prize.

The State board of pharmacy recently analyzed twelve of the most popular medicines in order to see whether they were what they were recommended to be. After two weeks of careful work, they awarded the first prize, a gold medal, to Messrs. A P. Ordway, & Co., proprietors of Sulpher Bitters, it being in their opinion the best and only strictly pure blood purifying medicine in the ket.—Weekly Chemist.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done wonders in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator.

"For years I suffered from loss of appetite and indigestion, but failed to find relief until I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine entirely cured me. My appetite and indigestion are now perfect."—Fred G. Bower, 496 Seventh street, South Boston, Mass.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds, does it is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles at 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

Liberated from their Fetters

By the helpful, genial action of that most beneficent of aperients, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels soon throw off the burden that paralyzed and weakened them, and resume their normal freedom of action. The action of the Bitters, unlike that of average purgatives, involves no griping or drenching. If it did it would, like them be valueless for ordinary use. There is nothing ungentle or unnatural attending its operation. Upon the liver, no less than the bowels, its action is most benign, promoting a healthful billious secretion, and directing out of the wrong and into the right channel. Conjointly with costiveness, other billious symptoms disappear when it is systematically used, and the stomach is strengthened as well as regulated by it. Malarial complaints, rheumatism, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles are completely relieved by it. Sleep and appetite are invariably promoted by it.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he caters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

We are willing to bear personal testimony to the efficacy and value of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper, having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

Mrs. Wm. Alden, Duxbury, Mass., Feb. 21, 1887.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents dandruff and stimulates the hair to renewed growth.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

Persons prematurely gray can have their hair restored to its youthful beauty, by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best article in the market.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. mon.wed.fri.eod1

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. tocl2

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. SAMPLE BURIAL HORRORS.

Exhumations Prove That Many Persons Are Put in Ground Alive.

One of the gravediggers who excavated a cemetery in Minneapolis the other day told a reporter of that city that in nineteen coffins the remains were found turned on their sides, and in one case lying face downward: the latter was that of a full grown woman, with long jet black, beautiful tresses scattered over the shoulders and tangled about the neck, indicating that, after being consigned to her last resting place, the latent spark of life quickened, and, conscious of the awful hopelessness of her situation, and with the strength of desperation she began the frightful struggle, vainly turning and twisting within the narrow walls of her prison, until exhaustion finally overcame her and brought relief.

When the ancient cemetery east of Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, was dug up and the remains taken away to allow of the extension of Raymond street, the writer saw numerous indications of premature interments. The most hideous and blood curdling of these was that of a body found in the old Presbyterian public receiving vault. It had been placed there about four years previously, and the lid or top had been strained so that some of the screws were torn half out; the end and lower part of the top had been wrenched outward, and the right foot and part of the leg had been forced through, and was so found, protruding. Upon further examination, the entire body was found twisted, the skull turned under and the fingers of one hand were thrust through and wedged in under the lid—evidently in the last straining, hopeless effort for liberty. In scores of graves the coffins were found to contain bodies that were turned and twisted more or less to one side—positive proof of having been buried alive.

It is a well authenticated fact that the mother of the poet Scott, while lying in a trance and declared by the physicians to be dead, was laid away in the family tomb in the great vaults under the parish church. At night the ghoulish sexton stealthily entered the tomb, opened the casket, and proceeded to rob the elegant and wealthy lady of the jewels which were on her person, according to the then prevalent custom. Finding some finger rings too tightly fixed the unconscionable thief took his pocket knife and slashed the flesh from the fingers. The sudden shock and flow of blood caused a reaction of the vital forces and the renerved madame opened her eyes, uttered an exclamation of amazement and attempted to rise up. The guilty and horror stricken rascal's hair rose straight upon his head, and, with the yell of a desperate madman, he rushed forth, thus raising the alarm which brought help and rescue to her. She lived many years subsequently, none the worse for her awful adventure, which occurred five years previous to the birth of Sir Walter.

The mother of Gen. Israel Putnam, of revolutionary renown, was placed in her coffin and the funeral services commenced, when she revived, and six years afterward gave birth to the child Israel.

Long years ago three medical students, who had paid an extra sum of money to a professional "resurrectionist" for the purpose of procuring an extraordinarily desirable subject, entered the college dissecting room one night to view their purchase, which had just been received. Lifting the cloth cover, they were more than pleased to discover the remarkably fresh, fine, desirable young corpse of a young and lovely maiden lady. It was the form of a Juno and the features of a Hebe. Round, plump, splendidly developed, perfectly symmetrical, with a wealth of dark chestnut tresses, and chestnut colored eyes, pink, creamy tinted complexion, brilliant, ivory white teeth, thin, delicate ears, mouth and nose, eyebrows and eyelashes beautifully long and shapely.

One of the two fingered about the body apparently as one held under the spell of a strange, undefined fascination. The girl had been ill and was supposed to have died of some heart disease, and had lain in her family vault about twenty hours. The young student, filled with admiration, gently lifted the magnificently molded arm. It was not chillingly cold, although cool. The muscles were not hard and fixed severely as in rigor mortis. He raised the eyelids and saw none of the glassy and ghastly peculiarities. He was aroused, and laid his ear down over the region of the heart. Then he was puzzled and started, and applied the stethoscope.

Then he repressed his growing excitement and summoned assistance. Evidences of latent life in the body were discovered beyond doubt. Vigorous efforts were then made for resuscitation, and successfully, too. Then the hapless girl, while yet unconscious, was wrapped in blankets and tenderly removed to the residence of one of the professors near by. Her relatives were sent for, and in time she regained perfect health, and subsequently wedded the student, who afterward became president of Philadelphia Medical college. She is now a widow and resides with the youngest of four stalwart sons.—Chicago Herald.

Deceived by Our Memory.

"If my memory serves me" is a favorite formula with many persons, and there are few who have not, at one time or another, been the victims of a treacherous memory. One would think that having been deceived many times we would at last learn to mistrust this faculty somewhat, or, at all events, be cautious in accepting its revelations without question. But right here there comes in another puzzle. No matter how grossly memory deceived us yesterday, or last week, today we are not deceived. Our recollection of the thing that happened is so and so; it cannot be otherwise, for we saw it or heard it. We remember it perfectly, and contradiction is useless. We know it. And yet we were quite as positive before, and turned out to be deceived. Thus memory is the most plausible of sirens, and no matter how much or how often she has lied to us on former occasions she makes us believe her now.—Chicago Herald.

A city in Japan will open a bric-a-brac show under the rule, "No article admitted that is not more than 1,000 years old." No exhibition of that sort could be held in the United States with American bric-a-brac.

From Top to Bottom.

A representative American thinker lately said to me, that, contrasting the operation of Anglo-Saxon institutions in England with those in America, the most important result, in his opinion, with which we may credit ourselves on this continent is the facility of individual movement from the bottom to the top of the social scale. This is a broad, patent fact, which underlies and largely causes that hopeful energy which permeates even the lower strata of society in America, and forms a striking contrast to the social inertia and consequent mental inactivity of the lower classes of England.

I think, however, that we are bound to qualify our satisfaction on this point by the equally manifest fact that the facility of descent from the top to the bottom of the same social scale is infinitely greater in America than in England. Taking our society as a whole, there is comparatively little conservation of force and culture along family lines. The weakening influences of wealth and high social position on the young have no adequate corrective. The ruling names in the society or politics of one generation seldom repeat themselves in the next. Each generation has to hew its best class out of rough material taken from beneath. Now, success in life which fails to transmit as an inheritance force or culture or superiority of some kind has failed in that point which makes success most of all desirable. Society itself is an immense loser where the results of success end with the individual. It is a national calamity when the grand advantages given by wealth for attaining personal excellence are thrown away.—George R. Parkin in The Century.

The Swell of Paris.

The swell in Paris does not need a title, though his blood must not be too recently mixed up with trade. He must, above all other things, possess an agreeable and taking manner, sharpened by wit and cleverness. The French laugh at the solemnity and stupidity of Englishmen of high social pretensions, and fail to understand how any man can succeed in society or in club life whose main object seems to be to render himself as disagreeable as possible to the people whom he meets. The popularity of the Parisian viver depends almost entirely upon his jollity of manner and brilliancy of talk. He invariably has some pursuit. He is a capital swordsman, rides skillfully, writes or dabbles in some of the arts—but whatever he does is well done.

His life is one that would kill an Anglo-Saxon. He breakfasts at 2 in the afternoon, dines at 8 and sups at 2 in the morning. The one pursuit in life which engages all of his energies is the chase for the favor of the woman who happens to have Paris by the ears for the moment, and he invariably runs several establishments, devoting a portion of his time with punctilious politeness to his wife and children. He plays bezique and baccarat with a nerve, that would make a Mississippi gambler blush, and looks 60 years old before he has passed his 35th year.—Blakely Hall's Letter.

In a Human Hair Market.

There is a human hair market at Morlans, in the department of the Lower Pyrenees. It is little known, except perhaps in Paris, where it has a high reputation. The market is held every other Friday. Hundreds of trafficking hair dressers throng to the little place from far and near to buy up the hair of the young peasant girls. The dealers wander up and down the long narrow street of the town, each with a huge pair of bright shears hanging from a black leather strap around his waist, while the young girls who wish to part with their hair stand about in the doorways, usually in couples.

The transaction is carried on in the best room of the house. The hair is let down, the tresses combed out and the dealer names the price. This varies from three to twenty francs. If a bargain is struck, the dealer lays the money in the open palm of the seller, applies his shears, and in a minute the long tresses fall on the floor. The purchaser rolls up the tresses, places them in paper and thrusts them into his pocket. Of course a maiden can rarely see her fallen tresses disappear into the dealer's pocket without crying. But she consoles herself with the thought that it will grow again and by looking at the money in her hand.—Emile Nouveau in Philadelphia Times.

The Tailless Manx Cat.

These tailless cats, by the way, merit a paragraph by themselves. The Listener is not aware whether they raise a special breed of these creatures in Vermont, but would not be surprised if they did. Vermont has a way of improving upon whatever animals she imports from abroad, and getting up superior breeds of everything, from human beings down through Morgan horses, Holstein cattle, merino sheep and shepherd dogs to (no doubt) tailless cats. The tailless cat is supposed to have originated in the Isle of Man, but if The Listener is not mistaken, he has also heard them called Cornish cats. The two individuals just referred to are in color something between a tortoise shell and a maltese. One has a sort of rudimentary stump tail, like a rabbit's, and the other has not so much as the vestige of a tail. Both have a marked resemblance in the hinder parts to the rabbit, and when they run it is with a series of bounds like a rabbit. One would say that the Manx cat and the rabbit were at least distantly related. They are queer birds, take them altogether.—Boston Transcript "Listener."

Time the Bath Takes.

How long does it take to use the morning "tub?" Mr. Chadwick says twenty minutes, which is surely an excessive estimate. But for those who want to save time over the operation, here is the latest hint of sanitary science: "A French colonel ascertained that he could wash his men with tepid water for a centime, or one-tenth of a penny per head, soap included. The man undresses, steps into a tray of tepid water, soaps himself, when a jet from a two handed pump plays upon him tepid water, and he dries and dresses himself in five minutes, against twenty minutes in the bath, and with five gallons of water against some seventy in the usual bath."—Pall Mall Gazette.

LITTLEFIELD'S

Constitutional COUGH SYRUP

— FOR —

CHILDREN.

Bedford, Sept. 20, 1887.

MR C. R. LITTLEFIELD:

Dear Sir:—I wish to say for the benefit of those who are troubled with coughs or colds that they will find a sure cure in the Constitutional Cough Syrup. I have a family of nine children, from three to twenty-one years old, and all have used the Syrup for coughs and colds, and it has never failed to cure them. It is the best cough syrup for children I ever knew, as I have never had to employ a doctor for these diseases, but have cured them with the Constitutional Cough Syrup. WILLIAM COTTON.

The Yellow Fever.

At Jacksonville, Fla., on the 7th, there were thirty-three new cases and nine deaths, among the latter being Edwin Martin, the brave editor of the Times-Union.

A despatch of the 8th from Jackson, Miss., reports no change there, and the surgeon in charge says he will make no more reports unless a change should occur.

A Loud Call For "Boodle."

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Traveller in his despatch of Saturday said:

People in Washington were astounded this morning to read an advertisement three columns wide in the Baltimore American, at the bottom of which appeared the name of "Calvin L. Brice, Chairman of the Campaign Committee," soliciting funds for the democratic campaign. The American is the oldest and the leading republican newspaper of the south. The advertisement appears in heavy display type, and opens as follows:

"The Democratic National Committee wants money to defray the legitimate expenses of the present campaign. They have no 'tariff-protected barons' to whom they can apply for funds. They have appealed to the people in whose interest this great campaign against war taxes has been begun to come up and help them."

The advertisement, of course, is paid for at the usual space rates. This movement to raise a campaign fund by the national democratic committee is not only open, but the astonishment comes from the fact that such a flaming advertisement could appear in a leading republican paper, the proprietor of which is General Phelix Agnus, who is to be the next republican nominee for governor of Maryland. The American's democratic contemporary, the Sun, does not contain the advertisement, and the inference is that Chairman Brice believes there are republicans in Maryland and the south who are willing to give subscriptions to assist in the success of the changes advocated by the Mills tariff bill.

A Slight Difference.

The administration papers and cartoon artists have been making much capital out of the alleged encouragement of the Chinese by the republican senate, through putting "opium for smoking" on the free list in the republican tariff bill. A Washington despatch of the 8th inst. says:

By an error made by the committee in preparing for publication the additions to the free list, contained in the substitute tariff bill reported by the senate committee on finance, it was made to appear that opium for smoking had been freed from duty. As a matter of fact the substitute bill expressly prohibits the importation of such opium, in the following terms: "That the importation of opium prepared for smoking be, and is hereby prohibited, and all such opium shall upon importation be seized and proceeded against for forfeiture and condemnation." The committee also desire to have corrected an impression which prevails, that it had added eggs to the free list; eggs are free from duty by existing laws, and the substitute bill does not change that provision, although the matter is now under consideration, and undoubtedly an amendment will be reported from the committee imposing a tax on eggs.

Says He Didn't Say So.

Hon. Don M. Dickinson, Cleveland's postmaster general, denies that he recently attacked New England in the savage and silly manner alleged in the republican papers. He says he has made no speech, and written no letter, containing the charges alleged against him. It has not been charged that he did. His venomously abusive tirade against New England was first printed in an out-and-out administration paper, the Herald, of Chicago, and was contained in an "interview" with a reporter of that paper. His assertion that the soldiers of New England were actuated by sectional prejudices and not by patriotism, was for western consumption only, and not intended for use east of the Hudson river.

PAY OF NAVAL MATES.

We take from the Army and Navy Journal the following, which very plainly shows the injustice of refusing to that small but most deserving class of officers, the mates in the United States navy, at least a moderate increase of salary, which is all that is provided for in the bill now before the senate:

There are only thirty-three mates in the navy, but their rights should be as sacredly considered as though there were as many thousands. This is the judgment of the naval committee of the Senate, who have presented a strong report in favor of the passage of the bill construing the law regulating the pay and retirement of warrant officers so as to include the mates. The committee say: "It is difficult to understand why longevity pay was not given to the mates in the act of 1870, when the pay was fixed for all naval officers, and longevity pay given to all others. The mates were a small corps, and it was then understood that no more appointments were to be made to that grade, and it is probable that they did not assert their rights in the usual way. Certain it is they were overlooked and neglected, and their pay has remained unchanged and inadequate all these years. There is every reason why the pay of the mates should be equal to that of warrant officers. They take precedence of the warrant officers in the line of duty, their duties are equal, or of a higher order, their uniform the same, their mess bills the same."

All of the mates have been in the service more than twenty years, except nine, who have served more than eighteen years. A majority have served more than twenty-five years. Five of them are on sea duty and receive $85 a month; several are on waiting orders or leave and get $41.60 a month, and most of them are on shore duty and receive $58.25 per month. Out of this pay must come their clothing, mess bills, etc. The navy regulations define their duties to be such as their commanding officers may consider them capable of performing, and from long experience in the service they are most frequently called upon to perform the same duties as those prescribed for lieutenants, and have performed the duties of commanding, executive and deck officers for many years. At the present time Mate James A. Smith is commanding the "Fish Hawk," Mate C. H. Cleveland is the executive officer, and Mate J. M. Creighton is deck officer on the same vessel. Most of these officers are well advanced in years, and have families dependent on them for support. Some few have served forty years as enlisted men and officers. Nearly all served during the late war, and some were in service during the Mexican war. Their case certainly calls for prompt action upon the bill which has received the approval of the senate committee to which it was referred.

Hon. Wm. E. Chandler, United States senator from New Hampshire, writes as follows to Col. Wm. H. Sise of this city, who has been urging the passage of this tardy act of justice: "I am having a good deal of difficulty about the mates' bill. Senator Cockrell opposes it, and I do not think that I shall be able to get it through the senate at this session, but I shall do all in my power." Senator Cockrell, a democrat of Missouri, can be relied on every time to oppose any measure looking to the granting of recognition to men who served on what he regards as the wrong side during the rebellion—that is, the side of the Union.

The Boston Herald supports Cleveland, but in its resume of the situation in the doubtful states concludes that New York, Indiana and Connecticut will vote for Harrison, owing to the general unpopularity of Cleveland and the rapid decay of the third party prohibition movement. Of the democratic regulars it says: "Not one of them would say a good word of Cleveland if the exigencies of the party did not require it. The republican prospects were never so bright as they are to-day for the election of their national ticket."

The New York Sun, democratic, pronounces the senate tariff bill a surer, safer and more practicable remedy for the danger of an increasing surplus than the Mills bill.

About 10,000 persons took part in a republican torchlight parade in Brooklyn, N. Y., last week, and were reviewed by Levi P. Morton, Matthew S. Quay, Gen. J. N. Knapp and other leaders of the party.

The republican national committee have deposited $25,000 in a New York bank, to be paid out in rewards for the conviction of persons illegally registering in New York or Brooklyn.

Since the beginning of the present year 4,123 members of the Grand Army of the Republic have died.

The New York Tablet, a Roman Catholic weekly paper of large circulation and great influence, suggests that a republican mass meeting, to be composed of mechanics whose prospects in life have been ruined by the administration, should be held on the ruined site of John Roach's ship yard. The Tablet makes the following significant remark:

What a lesson those grass-grown walls and empty work-shops convey! What memories they recall! A ruined industry; a great, noble, generous man sent broken-hearted to the grave after a life of unceasing and partly-successful toil to revive American ship building. This is the work of Mr. Cleveland's administration. This is the ruin his free-trade policy would bring upon every mill, factory and workshop in the land.

The United States cruiser Baltimore was launched from the shipyard of Cramp & Sons, on the Delaware, Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Theodore D. Wilson, wife of the chief of the bureau of construction of the navy department, christened the vessel. Secretary Whitney was present. There was, notwithstanding the inclement weather, a very large crowd of onlookers. The launch was in every way a success. The Baltimore is the largest vessel yet constructed for what is called the new navy. She has twin screws, and will be the first vessel so equipped in the navy. She is 335 feet long over all, her beam amidships is 48.5 feet, her mean draught is 19.5 feet, and her displacement is 4400 tons. The indicated horse-power of her engines is to be 7,500 at natural draught and 10,750 at forced draught, and they are expected to drive her along at the tops, and her crew will consist of 300 men. With 10,000 horse-power, which she will have, the Baltimore can make 456 knots a day, using 235 tons of coal. Her bunker capacity of 800 tons of coal will enable her to go three days and a half at full speed, covering in that time 1637 knots. She can make 3068 miles, or about the distance across the Atlantic ocean, in seven days and a half.

The proprietors of Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, will pay a large reward if any certificate published by them is not found genuine.

Tom, Dick and Harry appear again with their Grandmother's receipt for coughs, etc., but the people know Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup too well.

Hon. James G. Blaine and party left Detroit, Mich., for Grand Rapids, on the 8th inst. Mr. Blaine's cold has left him, and his health is entirely restored.

The steamship Umbria arrived at New York from Liverpool on the 6th inst. with one case of varioloid on board. She also brought Gen. Beauregard, C. S. A., and Andrew Carnegie.

The steamship Alaska arrived at New York on the 6th, having among her passengers Mrs. Langtry and niece, and Freddie Gebhardt.

W. H. Ingham & Co. of New York, co-operative stock brokers, failed last week. The concern seems to have been run somewhat on the "Woman's bank" racket, and hundreds of people in this state have lost from $10 to $100 or more each by its collapse. The managers are supposed to have made a good thing out of it.

For Men Chiefly.

When your collars and cuffs are rough and irritate your flesh, when you find the fine linen eaten away in spots, displaying the coarse filling, this is the cause:—They have been washed with ordinary soap, whose cleansing properties are due to caustic soda and elbow grease; either of these will produce the above, and the starch makes them feel as if you had a saw around your neck. Pyle's Pearline does away with the rubbing, hence it saves all wear and tear in the wash. It is as harmless as the finest imported castile soap. Linens washed with it are perfectly white and last many times as long as if washed in the old rubbing, twisting, wrecking way.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." It's false—they are not, and besides are dangerous. PEARLINE is never peddled, but sold by all good grocers.

Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

Cooler, fair weather, northwesterly winds.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Hon. Wm. H. Gale of Brooklyn, N. Y., and others, will speak on the political issues of the campaign in Music hall on Monday evening, Oct. 15th, from the republican standpoint. Music will be furnished by the Portsmouth band, and the public are cordially invited. The doors will be opened at seven o'clock, and speaking will commence promptly at eight.

A REAL "ENTERTAINMENT."

The performance in Music hall on Monday evening by Seeman's Electra Co. was not only beyond comparison the best thing of the kind ever seen here, but was one of the most pleasing and interesting entertainments ever given on Music hall stage, of any kind.

In the first place, the orchestra is a fine one; and Miss Addie Boos, cornet soloist, so pleased the audience that she was three times recalled. Prof. Seeman showed himself to be, as he claims, the "Emperor of Magicians;" his tricks of delusion were performed quickly and successfully, and were new and surprising; and his manner of doing them was the most pleasing we have ever seen.

The "Electra" act, in which Prof. Seeman apparently suspended Miss Marie Seeman in the air, and there posed her in attitudes and costumes to represent various characters.—"Prayer," "Columbia," "Ireland," "Rob Roy," "Statue of Liberty," etc.,—was an apparent violation of the law of gravitation, there being no wires, poles or other means of support to be detected, "Electra" apparently touching nothing whatever more tangible than the atmosphere. This part of the performance was as successful as the rest, and was very interesting.

The dissolving views were not only surprising but really beautiful, the best magic-lantern show bearing about the same relation to them that a boy's charcoal sketch on the school-yard fence has to the prize picture in the Paris Salon. The "Thunder storm," House on fire," "Steamboat race" and other pieces, with their moving figures and mechanical effects, seemed veritable happenings rather than mere imitations.

This excellent entertainment will be repeated to-night, and those who fail to see it will miss a genuine treat.

UNITARIAN CONVENTION.

The 26th annual meeting of the New Hampshire Unitarian churches will be held in the South Parish in this city on Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 10th and 11th. Following is the order of exercises.

Wednesday: 8:00 P. M., Sermon by Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke, of Newton, Mass.

Thursday: 9:00 A. M., Devotional meeting, led by Rev. J. Bradley Gilman, of Concord; 10:00, business meeting; 11:00, essay by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of Exeter, on "The working elements in Unitarian Christianity;" 2:30 P. M., essay by Rev. E. S. Elder, of Franklin; subject, "Essential Unitarianism; How shall we interest men in it?" 3:30, address by Rev. S. C. Beach, of Dedham, Mass., on "The American Unitarian association and the parishes;" 4:00, Rev. A. M. Pendleton, of Milford, will read a short paper on "The need of men, money and hospitality in the carrying on the work of our Unitarian churches." Followed by a discussion of essays and addresses.

8:00 P. M. Reception at the chapel on Court street. Brief speeches by clergy and laymen.

The public is cordially invited to all meetings held in the church.

Members of the South Parish who are to entertain delegates are requested to meet their guests at the church at six o'clock on Wednesday afternoon.

THE COTTAGE HOSPITAL.

The directors of the Cottage Hospital feel warranted by the measure of success exhibited in their report to repeat earnest desire that all the religious societies in town, and any other organization or individual who can do so, would come forward and unite in the work; $200 entitles the donor to representation on the board of directors, and nominally supports a bed; and if there were a general response to the appeal of the directors it would not be long before we should have an institution here which would be an honor to the town in its aspect, as it is already a blessing and comfort to the community.

A CHANCE FOR MR. STICKNEY.

A despatch of the 8th inst. from Harrisburg, Pa., says:

A number of the friends of Mr. John Early of this city have issued an open challenge to any lifter of heavy dumb-bells in the United States for from $100 to $500. Mr. Early weighs 112 pounds, and is scarcely five feet four inches tall. He has not had any professional training, but a year ago, in a Philadelphia gymnasium, he astonished the professor and public by his great strength in handling dumb-bells.

Here is an opening for Mr. Edward C. Stickney of Swampscott, Mass., formerly of this city, champion dumb-bell lifter of New England. If the little Harrisburg man can sling around heavy dumb-bells in a way to beat Stickney, he is indeed a phenomenon of strength.

PERSONAL.

Miss Iola M. Ayers, of New Durham, formerly of this city, is visiting Mr. Thomas Watkins and family of Manning street.

Mr. Andrew Anderson arrived home last week from White Rock, Me., where he has passed the summer in search of renewed health. He returns much improved, and has resumed work with Anderson & Junkins, contractors and carpenters.

Mr. George F. Wallis and wife, of this city, arrived home from a visit to New York on Saturday evening last.

George H. Abbott, the Congress street grocer, who has been visiting in Boston for the past two weeks, arrived home on Saturday evening.

Mr. Willard C. Pooler, the popular clerk with Fred B. Coleman, the druggist, leaves this morning on his annual vacation. He will visit Salem, Boston and other places in Massachusetts before his return.

Samuel R. Gardner, Esq., city messenger, arrived home on Saturday from a vacation trip to New York and other places.

Dennis J. Sullivan and Thomas E. Deane started for Boston on Monday morning, to join the grocerymen's excursion from that city to Saratoga, Albany and other places in New York state.

Boston papers announce the matrimonial engagement of Mr. Willis E. Nowell of Commonwealth avenue, and Miss Inez Maynz, eldest daughter of Edward Maynz of Fairfield street, that city. Mr. Nowell is a native of Portsmouth, a well known violinist, and leader of the Boston Symphony Orchestral club.

Considerable talk is being made at the navy yard over the fact that a large amount of cordage, which had been hauled to the tug Rocket for transportation to the Boston navy yard, was held back, owing to the unsafe condiditon of the boat, yet 109 sailors were obliged to take passage on the boat in spite of their earnest remonstrances against being sent around in her, and their offer to pay their own expenses by rail rather than needlessly imperil their lives.

Col. William H. Hackett, clerk of the United States circuit court, and John S. H. Frink, Esq., United States district attorney, went to Concord on Monday to attend the session of the circuit court in that city, which is expected to require their presence through the week. Judge Colt presides.

The first brewing in the new Jones brewery was made on Wednesday of last week, in honor of which a big and handsome ensign was displayed from a forty-foot staff on top of the tower of the new building, which is about 135 feet high.

A social assembly will be given in the south ward room on Wednesday evening under the management of Mr. Peter Williams; tickets fifty cents; all well behaved citizens invited.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Nathaniel Libbey, who died at his home in Warren on the 25th ult., at the age of ninety-three years and six months, was a pensioner of the war of 1812, having been stationed at Fort Constitution, Portsmouth harbor, for several months.

The tides were very high on Monday, and a number of the wharves were partially submerged. The marginal road, alias "the dump," was covered by the waters of the south pond.

Says the Penny Post: "Hon Frank Jones is reported as saying that if Cleveland is beaten it will be owing to his free trade message to Congress a year ago, and his reckless use of the veto power with respect to soldiers' pensions." We have grave doubts as to Mr. Jones having said that, in the hearing of any one who would report it; but he might have said it without getting far away from the facts.

Our young people will this winter have an excellent opportunity to learn plain and fancy dancing under the direction managed by Messrs. W. W. Stone, J. E. Dimick, Jr., and E. T. Wendell, three of our popular young men.

We have received from Hon. H. W. Blair, United States senator from New Hampshire, the report of the senate committee on finance on the Mills bill, with the minority report.

Mr. Thomas Ward and wife left this city on Monday morning by the 8:20 o'clock train, for Washington, D. C., where they will pass about two weeks. They were accompanied by Mr. Elvin Newton.

A large gang of men are at work on the grounds around the freight house of the York Harbor & Beach railroad at York harbor, clearing away the growth of alders, removing the rocks which project above the ground, and levelling the surface; they are also putting in a long side track.

POLICE COURT—BATCHELDER J.

H. Jameson, a sailor, drunk, fine $3, costs $6.90.

Stephen McIvor, assault on a person unknown, fine $2, costs $6.90; paid.

The name of another young fellow, who was assessed $9.90 for drunkenness, we leave out by request.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Anna M. Dickinson, Hart master, arrived at this port on the 7th inst. from Rondout, N. Y., with 1000 barrels cement to John H. Broughton.

Schooner Jonathan Sawyer, Captain Reynolds, arrived at Saco last Friday morning from Philadelphia, with coal for the York corporation. She made the fastest round trip from Saco to Philadelphia on record, it being but eleven days and eighteen hours between her departure from and arrival at the mouth of the Saco river.

The Boston fish bureau's report for the week ending Oct. 6th, in speaking of the mackerel catch says: "It has been a dry week in mackerel all along the coast. The fleet, after being out a few days, sought shelter again in harbors on Tuesday, and remained there most of the week. Nine of the vessels in this port on Tuesday had fares ranging from seventeen to 100 barrels, an average of about fifty each. Others had small trips running from two to thirty-five barrels. One vessel arrived at Gloucester from Block island and Barnstable bay with 150 barrels. No mackerel have been seen for several days, and it seems that the recent storm started them off the coast. Some may show up again, but only three weeks of the regular fishing season remains, and several vessels have week, and 3702 barrels for the corresponding week last year. Total catch to date is 31,563 barrels, against 65,740 barrels in 1887, 63,235 barrels in 1886, and 278,767 barrels in 1885. A schooner arrived yesterday from the Magdalen islands, the first for some time, with 330 barrels mackerel."

Lieutenant Charles H. McLellan, assistant inspector of United States life saving stations, was last week engaged in taking depositions at Gloucester regarding the alleged inefficiency of the life-saving station's crew at Bay View, Mass., at the wreck of the schooner Addie P. Cranmer, totally lost on Coffin's beach during the great gale of the latter part of September, on the voyage from Baltimore to this port with a cargo of coal for E. F. Siso & Co. The crew of the schooner, and the captain's wife, it may be remembered were taken from the rigging of the wrecked schooner by the Massachusetts Humane society's lifeboat, which was transported overland from Annisquam, and manned by a volunteer crew.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TRUST COMPANY,

Manchester, N. H.

CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

BILIOUSNESS.

This very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the head causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." evening paper observes, anent the mighty roar of its waters: One can never forget the effect of listening to this mighty voice for the first time, nor is it an unpleasant sound which assails the ear. The roar is positively musical, they say, and a few years ago a distinguished American organist spent a long time in studying it, and trying to learn the measure and compass of its tones. He finally came to the conclusion that the deepest tone made by the falling cataract was that which would be produced by an organ pipe about 160 feet in length, and of proportionate dimensions as organ pipes are made. Now, 160 feet, which is about the height of the falls (this varies from 160 feet to nearly 180 feet), is much longer than any organ pipe is made, and the sound emitted by such a pipe would not be sensible to us as a musical sound. Therefore our ears could not apprehend the music of the deepest tones; and as our ears are at fault, we give this deep tones music such discordant epithets as noise and roar.

This story, according to one account, seems incorrectly stated. The organist in question suggested a sound not nearly three octaves below thirty-two feet C, but about F sharp below that note. The present writer tried to define the vast harmonic hum of the great waterfalls, and came to the conclusion that the task was all but hopeless, although a steady kind of tone seems to be maintained, and certainly the imagination might readily seize upon such a note as the authority in question named, but whether the indefinite sound could be described as of foundation or upper partial tone character it would be altogether impossible to say.—London Musical World.

Unusual Storage of Life.

From the facts at our command, there is evidence that individual storage of life may be far greater than the vast majority of people either expect or hope for. The mean duration of life in England may be taken at 41 years. But we have instances upon instances in which this storage of life is doubled, and some in which it is trebled. I recently had, in the consulting room, at the same time, three gentlemen, whose united ages reached the total of 262 years, or over 87 years each, and each with a fair promise of from four to five years of life at least. I also, within the present quarter, saw, on the same day, two gentlemen, whose united ages gave 186 years, or an average of 93 years each. I have seen, and carefully examined physically, a woman who had attained the age of 105 years, and who lived afterward for three or four years; and I once conducted an autopsy of a man who had passed his 98d year.

There was nothing in the social condition of the individuals concerned that could of itself account for such an unusual storage of life as that which they presented. Two of those specially referred to were men of the highest class of mental power; the other has come down from one of the oldest of the noble families of Europe; a fourth has fought his own way from the lowest position to one of affluence and power; while the oldest of all was, from first to last, in abject poverty and was in a workhouse. —Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson.

The Origin of Ideas.

While Capt. (afterward Sir Samuel) Brown was occupied in studying the construction of bridges, with the view of contriving one of a cheap description to be thrown across the Tweed, near which he lived, he was walking in his garden one dewy autumn morning, when he saw a tiny spider's net suspended across his path. The idea immediately occurred to him that a bridge of iron ropes or chains might be constructed in like manner, and the result was the invention of his suspension bridge. So James Watt, when consulted about the mode of carrying water by pipes under the Clyde, along the unequal bed of the river, turned his attention one day to the shell of a lobster presented at table, and from that model he invented an iron tube, which, when laid down, was found effectually to answer the purpose. Sir Isembert Brunel took his first lessons in forming the Thames tunnel from the tiny ship worm. He saw how the little creature perforated the wood with its well armed head, first in one direction and then in another, till the archway was complete, and then daubed over the roof and sides with a kind of varnish, and by copying this work exactly on a large scale Brunel was at length enabled to construct his shield and accomplish his great engineering work.—Once a Week.

The French Woman's Virtues.

The women of France are almost universally misunderstood and misjudged, because of the writings of such novelists as Dumas fils and Feydeau. The French woman is not a whit the inferior of the English or American woman. The middle class woman in the United States is better educated than the average woman of the same class in France. On the other hand the French woman is more active; she shares her husband's labors and often, indeed, takes more than her share. Often her labors begin in the early morning, to and only at midnight, or later still. The French woman of the lower middle class does not hold it beneath her dignity to perform the humblest household duties, while at the same time she is lively, pleasant and always willing to talk. She is as faithful to her husband as any American or English woman in the world, and it is the merest delusion to suppose that family life in France is undermined. —Mrs. Frank Leslie.

Russia's Horses and Boots.

In Moscow, as well as everywhere in Russia, the horses are very fine and very fast. They have the build of race horses, with their slim legs and far reaching necks. Even some of the droskies have full blooded horses, and their drivers are able to obtain a fancy price for their use. Horses and boots are the two things that Russians seem to pride themselves upon. They may not have any stockings—and few of the lower classes wear them at all—but boots they must have and will have. Boots with high morocco tops, and worn with the pantaloons tucked into the tops, so that every inch shows; and then, like the Mexican with his spurs, they are dressed. —Henry M. Wright in Detroit Free Press.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought forward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

Liberated from their Fetters

By the helpful, genial action of that most beneficent of aperients, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels soon throw off the burden that paralyzed and weakened them, and resume their normal freedom of action. The action of the Bitters, unlike that of average purgatives, involves no griping or drenching. If it did it would, like them, be valueless for ordinary use. There is nothing ungentile or unnatural attending its operation. Upon the liver, no less than the bowels, its action is most benign, promoting a healthful billious secretion, and directing out of the wrong and into the right channel. Conjointly with costiveness, other billious symptoms disappear when it is systematically used, and the stomach is strengthened as well as regulated by it. Malarial complaints, rheumatism, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles are completely relieved by it. Sleep and appetite are invariably promoted by it.

We are willing to bear personal testimony to the efficacy and value of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper, having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. How it Happened and All About It.

In was Tuesday, September 11th, 1888, always Tuesday, the 250th Grand Monthly drawing of The Louisiana State Lottery occurred under the sole management, as usual, of Gen'ls G. T. Beauregard of La., and Jubal A. Early of Va. The prizes ranged from $10 to $300,000, and were distributed everywhere. Do you want to know to whom and where? No. 97,429 drew the First Capital Prize of $300,000. It was sold in fractions; one-fourth sold to Jacob Shipsey, New York city; the rest went to Costa Rica, C. A. The Second Capital Prize of $100,000 went to No. 21,025, sold in fractional parts at $1 each, sent to M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La.; one-twentieth went to Bank of Maysville, Maysville, Ky.; one to J. O. Roman, St. James Parish, La; one to Ohio Valley Nat'l Bank of Cincinnati, O.; one to a depositor through State Nat'l Bank, New Orleans, La.; one to B. L. Bennett, care of So. Bank of Ga., Savannah, Ga.; one to a depositor through Wells, Fargo & Co., San Francisco, Cal.; one to Anglo-Californian Bank, San Francisco, Cal.; two to John H. Howald, Columbus, O., through Com'l Nat'l Bank of Columbus. The Third Capital Prize of $50,000 was drawn by No. 44,545, also sold in fractional parts of twentieths at $1 each, sent to M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La.; one went to Chas. T. Silk, Galesville, Wis., through Bank of Galesville; one to First Nat'l Bank of Sulphur Springs, Tex.; one to a deposit through Louisiana Nat'l Bank, New Orleans, La; one to Israel Seligman, New York; one to First Nat'l Bank of Temple, Tex.; the other parts went elsewhere. The Fourth Capital Prize of $25,000 went to No. 1,567, also sold in fractional twentieths; one to Jno. Wolmig, Jr., 86 Dorbigney St., New Orleans, La.; one to R. C. Porter, Central Music Hall, Chicago, Ill.; one to Martin Welch, through Atlanta Bank of Atlanta, Tex.; one to James Roberts, Hillsdale, Mich.; one to D. Geiger, So. Chicago, Ill. Any information desired can be had on application to M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La. The next drawing will take over on Tuesday, Nov. 13th, 1888. Take note of date.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. toc12

THE HOMEBOUND HOST.

The sound of a host advancing,
Tramp! tramp! tramp!
Under the windy flicker
And flare of the evening lamp,
Under the steady whiteness
Of the clear electric light,
The sound of an army marching
Is in the streets to-night.

Not to the clamor of bugles,
Nor to the stormy beat of drums,
Not to the battle's toccin,
The jubilant army comes.
A sweeter music summons
And thrills along the line,
Though each to himself may hear it,
And make to the next no sign.

The patter of tiny footfalls
That run to an open door,
The mother's tender singing,
Her step on the nursery floor;
The boyish shout of welcome,
The girlish ripple of glee,
At the click in the guarded portal
Of the homebound father's key

This is the army's music:
Cheerily calls good-night
The merry voice of the comrade
As he passes out of sight
Into the heart of the household
When the day's long work is done,
And wife and bairns are waiting
With a kiss for their dearest one.

Under the windy flicker
And flare of the evening lamp
I hear a host advancing
With steady and resolute tramp—
A host of the strong and gentle,
A throng of the brave and true,
Dear little wives and mothers,
Hastening home to you!

—Margaret E. Sangster in Harper's Bazar.

The Salmon's Feeding Grounds.

Where the sea salmon go is as much a mystery today as it has ever been. After leaving the coast they disappear. Stray fish have been found in very deep water hundreds of miles from any salmon river, but their marine feeding grounds are still undiscovered. In the spring they suddenly reappear at the mouths of rivers. While in salt water they never jump at a fly; the moment they strike fresh they rise freely. When going up stream they frequently stop in pools as though to rest, and when descending go most of the time tail first, letting the current carry them and keeping head up the river.—Globe-Democrat.

"Kine Cure" for Consumptives.

The odor of cows and cow stables is thought to have a curative effect upon consumptives. A hospital for this "kine cure" is about to be opened at Reinickendorf, near Berlin. The sanatorium proper consists of a vast circular building, in the basement of which several hundred cows will be kept, and the odor of the stables be conducted to the rooms in the upper stories. In the center of the building is a large yard, for which a whey cure, bathing establishments, etc., are planned. The surplus of the dairy products is to be disposed of to the public under proper precautions.—Home Journal.

Curious Treatment of Hydrophobia.

I recently met a gentleman of high educational attainments, who stated that, in six years' residence in the East Indies, he had known of three severe cases of hydrophobia, and that each case was permanently cured. The means used was to take the patient to a pool or stream of water, plunge him in and allow him to just about drown and then resuscitate him him. In each case, as before stated, a permanent cure was effected.—"W. T. G." in Scientific American.

How Clowns "Make Up."

How do clowns make up their faces? I will tell you. They take oxide-chloride of bismuth, which they mix with grease, rub upon their hands until the composition is thorough, when it is put upon the face like the burned cork of the negro minstrel. After that, common chalk, carefully dried, is laid on a second coat. The chalk adheres to the greasy skin, and the face is soon very thoroughly whitened. —Clown in Globe-Democrat.

Mrs. Benedict—John, please hold the baby for a little while. My arms are so tired.

Mr. B.—You seem to forget, dear, that that infant weighs fifteen pounds and that my arms are also tired.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Our Consumption of Raisins.

The United States is the largest raisin consuming country in the world, and trustworthy authorities estimate the consumption at about 2,000,000 boxes of twenty-two pounds each, which, at an average of $2 per box, shows an expenditure of $4,000,000 per annum for one dried fruit.—Once a Week.

The Tooth Brush for Children.

In many homes a tooth brush would be a curiosity, and yet every child should be provided with one and made to use it. This is a duty which cannot be too strongly insisted upon. Unless the teeth are kept clean they will decay, and without good teeth perfect health is absolutely impossible.—Boston Herald.

Leaves of the Palm.

A tribe in the palm region of the Amazon cradles the young in palm leaves. A single leaf turned up round the edges by some native process makes an excellent cradle, and now and then it is made to do service as a bath tub.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A JEWELER'S TREASURES.

All Gold Does Not Glitter—Diamonds for Forty Cents—Imitations.

Sometimes I think that the adage, "all is not gold that glitters," needs to be reconstructed by people in our line of business and made to read, "all gold does not glitter," remarked one of the leading manufacturing jewelers of Pittsburg to the writer. In proof of this assertion he exhibited several pieces of gold, as nearly pure as it can be, and still be worked to good advantage. The material looked very much like old brass, and was so dingy and lusterless that none but an expert would have pronounced it gold. Two small straight pieces, in shape and size very much like small horseshoe nails, were shown, and these, the jeweler said, would be transformed into the main portion of a finger ring, after being bent, shaped and properly joined together. The piece designed to form the top of the ring in which the stone is set, is separate. It is shaped like a tray, having been given this form by a die or stamp, by means of which it was cut from a piece of rolled gold.

The manufacturer next unlocked his safe and brought forth some of its rare and costly treasures. There were diamonds, rubies, pearls, emeralds, sapphires, amethysts and scores of other precious stones, in infinite variety, from all parts of the earth.

"We are obliged to keep a large stock on hand," said the jeweler, "much larger than the eastern manufacturers, who are able to send out and buy what they want at any time. A good deal of our work consists in the making of badges, pins, medals and other designs to order, at short notice, and a large assortment of precious stones is therefore indispensable. We have diamonds of every size, ranging from large and perfect stones several carats in weight and worth hundreds of dollars, down to the merest speck, costing less than half a dollar. Yes, you can buy a genuine diamond for 40 cents, but it won't be large enough to be remarkably conspicuous. Pearls, too, we have in great numbers, some larger than peas and others smaller than pinheads. The greater part of these gems are cut and polished abroad. Even the California pearl, fished from the ocean by divers along the Pacific coast, goes abroad to the hands of German lapidaries, and is then brought back to this country to be set in jewelry. The greater number of pearls found are imperfect, and all such have to be cut, making what are known as half pearls.

"We carry, also, a large stock of imitation stones. Every real gem is imitated, and the more precious the stone the greater will be the number of imitations. Many of the imitations are so perfect that only experts can distinguish them from the genuine. All stones for settings are bought by us, cut and polished and ready for use. They are all graded according to the French measurement, and the packages containing them marked with the exact size of each piece in millimetres. Take this line of turquois, for instance, and you will observe that each has the same pattern running through all the different sizes. Fashion rules in jewelry, as in everything else. A stone at one time very popular in rings may go out of style entirely in a few years. Hence, unless we take the utmost care, we are liable to have an accumulation of costly material on our hands, with no chance of getting rid of it until fashion's caprice brings it into favor again."

For weighing diamonds and other precious stones a very delicate instrument, known as the diamond scale, is used. It consists of balances, and is so delicate that it will turn when a weight equal to one sixty-fourth part of a carat is placed upon it. The smaller weights used on the scales are of aluminum, the lightest metal known, and a piece, one sixty-fourth of a carat in weight is but a small, filmy scale that the breath would move.—E. W. Bartlett in Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Nuisance of Gab.

A prater is a common nuisance, and as great a grievance to those that come near him as a pewterer is to his neighbors. His discourse is like the braying of a mortar, the more impertinent, the more voluble and loud, as a pestle makes more noise when it is rung on the sides of a mortar, than when it stamps downright, and hits upon the business. A dog that opens upon a wrong scent will do it oftener than one that never opens but upon a right. He is as long winded as a ventiduct, that fills as fast as it empties; or a trade wind, that blows one way for half a year together, and another as long, as if it drew in its breath for six months, and blew it out again for six more. He has no mercy on any man's ears or patience that he can get within his sphere of activity, but tortures him, as they correct boys in Scotland, by stretching their lungs without remorse. He is like an earwig; when he gets within a man's ear, he is not easily to be got out again. He is a siren to himself, and has no way to escape shipwreck but by having his mouth stopped instead of his ears. He plays with his tongue as a cat does with her tail, and is transported with the delight he gives himself of his own making. —Samuel Butler, author of "Hudibras."

Novel Theory of Massage.

We know massage is beneficial as we know the tongue to be coated in certain fevers, but why this occurs may puzzle many to whom the mysteries of physiology are too tightly sealed. In a word, then, the theory of massage is based not only upon the known effects already referred to, but upon the hypothesis of the direct alteration in the structure of cells. In disease the cell walls in the animal tissue become hypertrophied. The formative material or nucleus is imprisoned in an impenetrable sheath through which nourishment cannot be carried. This hypertrophy of the cell wall in pathological conditions is identical with that which results by a slow process from the advancement of age. Massage breaks down this hypertrophied condition of the cell wall by mechanical means, creating fissures through which nourishment forces its way to the nucleus within. Theoretically, if massage could be applied to every cell of the body, there would be no reason why we should ever grow old; but, this being practically impossible, we must be content with the more limited benefits it bestows, which, however, are important and considerable. — Medical Register.

He Sticks to Cleveland.

Carl Schurz, the eminent civil service reformer who was too good to vote for Grant and thought Blaine horrid, writes from his present residence in Germany a long letter, in which he announces that he is in favor of Cleveland's re-election, and gives his reasons. Like that other great reformer, George William Curtis, he acknowledges that Cleveland has violated every one of the civil-service-reform promises he so loudly made when a candidate for the office of president, when president-elect, and in the first months of his incumbency; but in spite of this—again like Mr. Curtis—he supports him for re-election. The confessed reason for the action of these political saints is, not that they love civil service reform less, but free trade more. Their "reform" talk was the merest pretense.

Nineteenth Century Humanity.

Charles Parker, wife, and two children aged two and four years, fled from Decatur, Ala., when the yellow fever broke out there, to the home of relatives at Oak Mountain. When within fifteen miles of Oak Mountain they were confronted by the shot-gun quarantine, and driven back. On the 7th inst. a brave physician went in search of them, and found them all dead, the parents having died in the woods of yellow fever, and the children of starvation.

DARTMOUTH ITEMS.

HANOVER, N. H., Oct. 8th.

Mr. I. N. Hurd, apothecary at the naval hospital, Kittery navy yard, was in town last week as a guest of R. E. Cox, '92.

J. Clifford Simpson of Greenland, N. H., and F. A. Fernald of Kittery, Me., both of the class of '87, were here last week. Mr. Simpson is teaching school at Woodstock, Conn. Mr. Fernald is principal of the high school at Waterbury, Vt., and is reading law in the office of Governor-elect Dillingham.

The twentieth field-meet of the Dartmouth Athletic association occurred last Wednesday and Thursday.

A Young Men's Christian Association building for Dartmouth is now a certainty. The conference of New Hampshire Congregationalists, a few weeks ago, pledged a generous sum for the purpose, and appointed a committee to carry on the work of raising funds. The trustees of the college have voted to erect the building, and in a short time their committee will report as to the time, place and means for completion.

The ready response made by the students to the efforts of the president and faculty last year, to revive the general musical interest throughout the college, has induced the faculty to try the experiment again this term, on a somewhat enlarged scale. It is probable that the services of a competent musical director will be secured and a system of regular musical training will be begun. B.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, Oct. 8th.

We had hoped for a bright morning Sunday, after so much dull weather, but the churches were thinly attended owing to the storm.

There are twenty-six voters in town by the name of Lamprey, twenty-four Blakes, twenty-three Browns and eighteen Towles.

While picking apples last week, Mr. Jacob T. Brown fell, and broke his leg in two places below the knee.

Mr. Abbott Young recently bought a lot of apples on the trees, for ten dollars; he filled thirty-six barrels, and had several bushels of cider apples left.

Mr. Charles Philbrook and a Kingston butcher bet $10 on the weight of a calf last week, and Philbrook got the money.

A few years since Rev. E. Scott offered his property in this town for $1500; the present owners ask $2500. Most people who rent tenements have added twenty-five dollars to the rental since the factory started.

The democratic party of Hampton were disappointed last week in not having an invitation to the rally at Exeter; however, another is planned for next Wednesday evening, and all are invited. There are several young men who work out on farms, who invariably vote the same ticket as their employers; it is too bad for young men to possess such weak minds.

Barberry picking is quite a businesst his season; they realize $1 per bushel, the heavy frosts giving the berries a fine color.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., Oct. 9th.

As the Gazette's readers have probably heard nothing said about the weather for some time past, perhaps they would like a few words as to the sample of the article we have been having in Eliot. The weather has been disagreeable for the past three weeks, and very unpopular, too, especially with farmers wishing to do harvesting. The apples have been blown off very badly, and corn broken down; it is said there never before was known so much rain during a harvesting season, and farmers have had no chance to do their fall ploughing, the low ground being too wet and soft.

Samuel Dixon is expecting a vessel at the wharf for the pupose of loading apples—perhaps two vessels, but certainly one.

Miss Alice M. Dixon is employed in the States and Union office at Portsmouth, as a compositor.

George W. Shapleigh was buried at this place on Thursday; he was employed on the Boston & Maine railroad, and got badly injured some time ago.

Nathaniel Parker was complained of for selling cider, and was fined $100, with costs of court. Others would do well to take warning.

Rev. W. F. Marshall will give a lecture next Sunday evening, the 14th; subject, "the two cups—the holy cup and the evil cup," and show what is in each cup. The public are cordially invited to attend the lecture, and can attend with the assurance of hearing a very interesting and profitable discourse. The services will commence with a praise service of fifteen minutes.

Rev. James Lade and Mr. Marshall are contemplating holding a series of meetings to commence a little later, of which due notice will be given.

Mrs. R. H. Staples and A. F. Grant have gone to Vineland, N. J. for a short visit.

Charles W. Rogers has raised this season three squashes which weigh in the aggregate 106 pounds—the largest raised in that section of the town this year, he thinks.

Dr. J. L. M. Willis and family returned from the White mountains region on Monday, the 2d inst., and reported a very heavy snowstorm prevailing when they left. Miss Sarah J. Farmer was also with the party.

Arthur C. Paul returned on Thursday last from Boston, where for fourteen months past he has been engaged in the drug business. He will pass the winter at home. HARRY.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, ME., Oct. 9th.

Mr. G. S. Wasson has costructed a nice little skiff, the "Aquopimoquk;" we understand it will be launched soon.

Last Wednesday morning Fannie Lawry, the daughter of Mr. John Lawry, died very suddenly of heart disease; she appeared as well as usual until about eight o'clock, when she was seized with an attack of the terrible disease, and in three minutes Fannie was dead. The funeral was at the residence of her father on Friday forenoon.

Mrs. Mary J. Williams and daughter Millie are here on a short visit.

The hotel Pepperrell closed last Wednesday, after a most successful season, and with good prospects for another summer.

Mr. William Bray, late a resident of Armory lane, Kittery, moved last Wednesday into his house here on the old homestead, which has been extensively repaired; it was formally an old one-story house; now it is pretty story-and-a-half cottage, painted white, with green blinds, and an ell attached. We hope Mr. Bray and his family will enjoy their new home as much as we enjoy looking at it.

Last Monday morning Mrs. George Carter, of the Bartlett road, was thrown to the ground by a calf, while going from the house to a shop, and considerably hurt. Dr. M. F. Wentworth was called as soon as possible, and found her collarbone broken, which he soon set, and left her as comfortable as could be expected.

Wm. S. Waldron has gone to the hotel Pepperrell to assist in the fall work.

UNCLE MOSES.

The king of the Netherlands, who is dying, has been in a precarious state for several months, and now he is wheeled about from room to room in a chair, and is even unable to sign his name. During the last three weeks all state business has been transacted by Queen Emma.

The new embankment of the Yellow river in China has been swept away by a flood, and a vast torrent is pouring into Honau; the work cost $9,000,000, and over 1000 laborers were drowned when it was destroyed. Another great flood, with vast loss of life, is reported in Moukden province.

The Woman's Congress will hold its annual meeting in Detroit, Mich., Nov. 14th to 16th. Miss Willard will deliver an address on "The White Cross and White Shield," and Miss Minnie Phelps, one of the leading W. C. T. U. workers of Canada, will be one of four to conduct a symposium on the subject of "Immigration."

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season, nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Peculiar To Itself

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

Oftentimes crabbedness of temper is induced by an unhealthy liver. Laxador will bring sunshine by prompt action on this great organ.

A circular has been sent to all federal officeholders in Ohio, making a "request" for the payment of ten per cent of their salaries to the national democratic committee. The circular is accompanied by a letter from Chairman Brice of the democratic committee, showing that it is authentic.

To any one purchasing a bottle of Constitutional Cough Syrup of me and it does not give satisfaction I will refund the money. David Kimball & Co., No. 36 Market street.

The men of education and ability are with the republican party now as ever. At Phillips academy, Exeter, a republican campaign company has been formed, meeting with serious opposition only from the son of Chairman Brice, who when he attempted to form an antagonistic democratic parade company, found his recruits sufficient only for a squad of six, and they probably more inclined to mugwumpism than democracy, since they speedily deserted young Brice's banner to return to the Harrison and Morton brigade.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Hon. Wm. H. Gale of Brooklyn, N. Y., and others, will speak on the political issues of the campaign in Music hall on Monday evening, Oct. 15th, from the republican standpoint. Music will be furnished by the Portsmouth band, and the public are cordially invited. The doors will be opened at seven o'clock, and speaking will commence promptly at eight.

"PERNICIOUS ACTIVITY."

It is rumored, on what seems to us to be good authority, that the democratic ward canvass in this city is being made by the letter carriers of the United States postal service. We only hope that Reformer Cleveland will not hear of it.

CHANGE OF TIME.

The winter arrangement on the navy yard goes into operation to-day, Oct. 10th. Work commences at 7:30 A. M.; knock off at noon; recommence at 12:45 P. M., and end at 4:15. The steamer Mystic now makes her first trip from this city at 6:55 A. M., and her second trip at 7:15.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Wallace Moses, formerly of this city, and wife, are in New York, refugees from the yellow fever.

Mrs. J. L. Martin of Dennett street arrived home on Monday from a prolonged stay in the White mountain region.

Mr. Judson P. Marvin, who was graduated at Tufts divinity school at the late commencement, was on Tuesday, the 9th inst., ordained to the ministry in Rochester, Vt., and settled as pastor of the Universalist church there, of which he has been acting pastor for some time. Rev. Mr. Marvin is a son of Col. T. E. O. Marvin of this city.

Mr. Stephen Muchemore, son of Mr. George W. Muchemore of North Kittery, for some time past with J. H. Carlton of Blackstone street, Boston, stove dealer, has taken the position of assistant clerk with Mr. John P. Sweetser of Market street, this city.

Mr. Fred F. Noyes of Hingham, Mass., son of Mr. Arthur W. Noyes, who was recently graduated from Boston university with the degree of B. S., has received an appointment as electrical engineer with the Thompson-Houston Co at Lynn, Mass. He is a grandson of Dea James Perkins of Hampton, and a nephew of Mr. Wm. E. Noyes of Kittery, Me.

There was a large audience at Music hall on Tuesday evening, when Seeman's Electra Co. repeated their inimitable entertainment. The universal verdict of all who have seen it is, that nothing of the kind to equal it was ever given here before.

A democratic alderman, a working man, who successfully carries on a mechanical business of his own without any aid from the party bosses or the United States government, remarked on Monday afternoon, as the men were coming from the navy yard shortly after five o'clock, "Where do all these new tin pans come from? It is less than sixty days from election, and the government is certainly not in an emergency."

Landlord Donnell, of the Donnell house at York, Me., was in this city on Tuesday. The Donnells of York have always been more or less well disposed toward the democratic party—in fact, they have been known as "one of the old democratic families." But this one, meeting on Tuesday a Portsmouth friend in the store of a strenuous democrat, who, not aware that they were old acquaintances, introduced the Portsmouth man as one once of the democratic persuasion, but whose allegiance to mere party had changed, replied: "Well, I always thought a good deal of him, but I think more of him now than I ever did before." It was a somewhat surprising declaration for the administration man to hear, from that source.

The Ladies' Humane society will meet at Miss Lyman's, No. 2 Austin street, Monday, Oct. 15th.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

The Tucker place on Rye road is advertised to be sold at auction on Wednesday, Oct. 31st, unless previously disposed of at private sale.

A social assembly will be given in the south ward room this evening under the management of Mr. Peter Williams; tickets twenty-five cents; all well behaved citizens invited.

The Catholic parochial school has adopted the plan of the public schools, of having sessions all day on Wednesday, and none on Saturday. This school has about 230 pupils.

Snow storm on Tuesday; not a very heavy one, but all that was needed on October 9th.

Mr. "Natty" Yeaton, the ancient boatman of the Piscataqua, was down again from Durham on Tuesday in his wherry, with a couple of passengers for this city, this being his 30th trip this season; and it depends upon the weather whether he comes down again or not. But people had best pay Natty beforehand for their passages, or else walk, to save the ancient boatman's arms, which are of more value than their legs, or than the necks of persons mean enough to cheat an old man out of the twenty-five cent fare he charges for a ten-mile trip.

The schooner Nathaniel Lank, which was run into while at anchor in the lower harbor last week by the U. S. S. Constellation, came down the river from Dover on Monday and went to the navy yard, where she will be repaired.

Mr. Frank W. Hidden is in Gloucester, Mass., and a note from there informs us that there is a good deal of talk going on, some of it pretty loud, regarding dory pulling. If the Gloucester dory racers want a good contest, they can no doubt secure it by getting up a race with Mr Hidden, who is the undisputed champion of this section in dory pulling.

Protection has not totally ruined the building business in Portsmouth yet, if we may judge from the fact that Mr. George A. Jackson finds it necessary to advertise for the services of ten carpenters—and has for several days been advertising for them. In any town in happy, free trade England, such an advertisement would bring a hundred responses within an hour.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Corinda A. Cunningham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cunningham of this city, to Mr. Andrew B. Bingham of Littleton, at St. John's church in this city at noon on Wednesday, Oct. 17th.

A paragraph is going the rounds of the press as to the danger from swallowing grape seeds, setting forth that as those seeds are indigestable it is quite possible for them to form a solid and impenetrable mass at the exit of the stomach, and so cause death. Any person so delicate as to be killed by a grape seed ought to be glad and thankful for a chance to die as quick as possible.

A number of men are at work on the wall of the old cemetery at York village, one of the most ancient burial places in New England, and fixing up the grounds generally, besides straightening up such of the stones as will bear straightening. The wall has for some time been in a very bad condition, but is now receiving thorough repairs. The work is paid for by subscriptions among the citizens.

A lot of about 100 acres of land near Bald Head cliff, York, has been bought by Philadelphia parties for $6000, and will be utilized for summer cottages.

Edwin W. Getchell and Hattie M. Getchell, formerly of Kittery, have been divorced by the court in Worcester, Mass.

Will Keen of York is painting his blacksmith shop, and making some needed improvements; he has just found time to do this work, having been driven up with business all through the summer.

The York County Congregational convention met in Cornish on the 9th inst., in a blustering snow storm. There was a good attendance.

A man who went into the city clerk's office at Biddeford recently to take out a marriage license, had to go home again to find out the name of his intended bride. This must have been a case of love at first sight.

Mr. George F. Plaisted, of York Corner, is putting another story on his dwelling, at the back of his store, bringing the house and store on a level; his son, Mr. John Plaisted, is bossing the job, for which duty his superior mechanical ability makes him eminently fit. The jovial "George" has a large store filled with a well selected stock of all such goods as are usually found, and some not usually found, in a village variety store: he also carries a full stock of medicines and drugs—he is a registered pharmacist—and does job printing to whatever extent is demanded, besides writing for the papers when he has time and feels like it, which does not occur half so often as the newspaper men would like.

Miss Lizzie Haley, the evangelist, who has been holding meetings in York the past week, is expected to close her labors there on Sunday next.

Miss Tillie Young of Boston, who has been passing a few weeks very pleasantly with her friend, Miss Lulu Parsons of the Scituate district, York, returned home last week.

The money order system was put into operation at Sanford, Me., Oct. 1st, and it is likely the office will soon be made a "presidential" one, with a salary at $1200 per year. The first domestic money order issued was purchased by the postmaster himself; the first inter-national one was issued to George Crossley, and the first postal note to Mrs. L. A. Perkins, all of Sanford. The system will afford many conveniences to the public. Speaking of the growth of Sanford an exchange says: "In the past eight years its population has increased eighty-eight per cent, and there are on the voting list nearly one thousand names, which multiplied by four gives Sanford an aggregate population approaching four thousand souls. Since 1870 the number of buildings in the village alone has nearly, if not quite, quadrupled, one hundred new buildings being erected last year, while others are now in process of construction, among them a new school building, factory and church."

Texas is putting down artesian wells, one of which is to yield a million gallons per day.

The probable cost of the Nicaragua canal is put at between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

The first eclipse upon record was a lunar one, and was observed at Babylon 721 B. C.

The apparent objections to twin screws for great ocean ships have produced a call for ocean paddle wheels.

Spain is to build five or six ironclads in her own country.

A canal will soon be built between the Black and Caspian seas.

The Japanese are cultivating a taste for beer and porter as well as for European costume.

A tablet dedicated to Mrs. Sigourney, the poet, has been placed in Christ church, in Hartford, Conn.

AUTUMN.

Autumn has come, autumn has come,
And all the flowers of summer are gone,
Under the white snow to sleep,
And in the spring again they'll meet.

Jack Frost gives the frost flowers their glow—
The dear frost flowers, I love them so!
But soon they with the lilies will sleep
Under the snow's white coverlet deep.

Jack has come with his icy fingers,
He in his home but seldom lingers;
He on our windows paints his pictures,
And hangs them there without their fixtures.

He is in the meadows,
He is on the hills,
He is in the valleys,
And in the tiny rills;
Soon the Christmas will be here,
That is to us so dear;
And, with its tidings glad,
The Happy New Year.

We'll say good bye to autumn once more,
As we have done in years before;
So, sweet autumn adieu,
Many good wishes to you.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

CLEVELAND BROTHERS, ALBANY, N. Y.

FARM AT AUCTION!

WILL be sold at Public Auction on Wednesday, the 31st day of October instant, (unless prevented by previous sale,) on the premises, the TUCKER PLACE, so-called, situated on the Elwyn Road, about three miles from this city, the land being partly in Rye and partly in Portsmouth, and being the late residence of Edward W. Tucker. Said farm is estimated to contain about fifty acres of field, wood and pasture land and marsh, and is in good condition. The wood land is heavily timbered. To be sold entire or in lots to suit purchasers. Terms made known at sale.

Dated Oct. 9th, 1888. Administrator.

The telephone was allowed to be used on Sunday for the first time in London a few weeks ago. The managers of the company, it is said, had grave doubts about the result of such an innovation, but the large use that was made of the privilege satisfied them.

The latest thing in barometers has three little landscapes representing a stormy, a fair and a variable sky. The rise or fall of the mercury causes a thin mica plate to cover or reveal these pictures, in accordance with the indications.

NEW HAMPSHIRE
TRUST COMPANY,
Manchester, N. H.
CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $300 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences. Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER. Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

BILIOUSNESS.

This very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as it can also cure the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

Mrs. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest trouble from the complaint, so prominent know. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." 100 Doses One Dollar

TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

A Plea in Behalf of School Children—The Ailing One.

Occasionally is encountered a lad who has grown up in our streets and successfully eluded the truant officers. Such a one is almost always of the "gamin" order, ill fed, scantily clothed and generally neglected. And yet, notwithstanding the hardships implied, we find him strong, active and "wiry." If pitted against a country boy of his age the chances are our city lad would "use the other up." All things considered it must appear evident to those who study the subject that because our children are sent to school at too early an age is one potent reason why they suffer so much from the contrast with their country cousins. But it is purposeless to attempt to persuade parents to keep their little ones out of school until it is safe to send them. Borrowing an expression, one might as well hope to level Gibraltar with a crowbar. In the proper authorities is our only hope of reform. They cannot be ignorant of this grave responsibility. Reluctantly accepting the situation, we will give mothers and teachers a few words of practical advice as regards their treatment of school children, in so far as pertains to health.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." Its importance is not always appreciated, either by parents or children. Every child should have a full bath at least once a week, whereas many in our public schools know that luxury only when the public bathing houses are opened to them, which is, of course, only in warm weather. Neglect of cleanliness propagates other mean habits, and tends to develop the beast in one's nature. If a child's body is continually dirty he will soon grow low and depraved, notwithstanding all his other influences are the best. Let parents fix that fact in their minds, else by that one neglect they utterly ruin the natures of their children. Those who live in humble tenements, destitute of bathing facilities, should call the washing people into service at least once a week, and a general scrubbing of the children take place. Some mothers take pleasure and pride in the appearance of their little ones; others seem positively indifferent whether or not their faces are washed or hair is ever combed. They should see that both is done faithfully, not only in the morning, but on going to bed.

The character of the clothing generally is not a matter of dictation. We cannot expect the children of poor parents to wear "good clothes," but what is worn can be clean, and there is no excuse for their being otherwise. From this time out until school closes in the spring, children should wear flannel next to the skin, and let mothers remember that underclothing worn during the day must not be worn during the night while in bed. Children, as well as adults, must have undershirts for night wear, and the one taken off at bedtime should be spread over a chair to dry and air well. A word here about the sleeping room. Our poorer people are forced to content themselves with a few small rooms, and, as a rule, they are sadly overcrowded. That cannot be helped in many instances, but such rooms can be properly ventilated. Open—throw wide open—the windows of the bedroom a little while before the children go to bed, and then, when they are ready to undress, go in and partially, but not entirely, close them. Leave them open as much as the weather will permit. A disinclination to ventilate their rooms properly is one glaring and fatal fault with ignorant people. To that cause alone can be attributed much of the sickness and many of the deaths among them.

Some mothers allow their children to remain in bed in the morning until late and then hurry them away to school. The consequence is breakfast must be bolted. It ought not to be necessary to say that children should have ample time in which to eat, and should be forced to do so slowly. Tea and coffee are injurious to them. If mothers will insist in allowing them to have those drinks, then let the quantity be small, and in much milk. Cocoa is liked by every child, and, if not made too strong, it is wholesome and nourishing. One thing more about breakfast; be sure that the children eat enough. Even if they eat heartily, as a rule they will be hungry before dinner time comes; therefore, provide them with a light luncheon—bread and butter and some sound, ripe fruit if possible. "Early to bed and early to rise" is a rule which cannot safely be violated by children. That they need much more sleep than adults, every one should know. Let the hour before retiring be passed quietly in some form of amusement.

To allow them to go to bed excited either by hard play, by study, or by a "story book," means wakeful hours or sleep disturbed by dreams. When a child appears to be ailing he should be kept out of school until he is himself again. By teachers much too high a premium is put upon punctuality and unbroken attendance. In consequence, children are encouraged to go to school when they are really quite sick enough to be at home and in bed. Scarlet fever, measles, diphtheria and the like are very easily transmitted from an affected child to one in perfect health. The former need not be very ill; he may, in fact, be in school and appear but slightly ailing, and yet it is quite possible for him to bear about with him the germs of disease, and communicate them to those with whom he is brought in contact. All must remember that a case of infectious disease need not be severe to be a source of great danger to others. A child is just as likely to "catch the disease" from one who has only a very light attack of an infectious nature as he would were the attack of deadly intensity.

Again, the first sufferer may be only slightly ill—in fact, be up playing about the house, or even in school—and yet the one to whom he transmits the disease may become terribly ill with it and die. Hence, there is but one rule for mothers and teachers to follow; Never send a child to school who appears to be ailing, no matter how confident you may be that the trouble is but trifling. And a teacher should never allow a child to remain in school a moment after she detects a sign which leads her to suspect that he is not well. If this rule is rigorously observed, the death rate will be measurably decreased.—Boston Herald.

Are Your Pullets Laying?

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought foward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, pullets' eggs will probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets laid at all, they would lay a litter, and then either want to set, or move around for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in all experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. A large 2 1-4 pound can of the Powder for $1.20 and the Guide free; six cans $5, express pre-paid. They will send a testimonial circular free to any one.

The weary and woe-begone expression of the dyspeptic is soon changed into one of health and hilarity by using Laxador. It only costs 25 cents.

When your child is suffering, give it Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup, which will at once relieve and permanently cure by its soothing action. Price 25 cents.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

Liberated from their Fetters

By the helpful, genial action of that most beneficent of aperients, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels soon throw off the burden that paralyzed and weakened them, and resume their normal freedom of action. The action of the Bitters, unlike that of average purgatives, involves no griping or drenching. If it did it would, like them, be valueless for ordinary use. There is nothing ungentile or unnatural attending its operation. Upon the liver, no less than the bowels, its action is most benign, promoting a healthful bilious secretion, and directing out of the wrong and into the right channel. Conjointly with costiveness, other bilious symptoms disappear when it is systematically used, and the stomach is strengthened as well as regulated by it. Malarial complaints, rheumatism, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles are completely relieved by it. Sleep and appetite are invariably promoted by it.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he enters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

We are willing to bear personal testimony to the efficacy and value of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which we have been advertising some years in our paper, having used it for blood impurities with great success. It is a preparation of standard merit, made of perfectly pure ingredients, and thoroughly effective in cleansing and purifying the system. For eruptions, boils, etc., it can be relied upon every time. Our own experience with it has been most gratifying, and we are glad to give it this endorsement.—Athol (Mass.) Transcript.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries Eng[illegible] sympathy.—London Globe.

After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.
Mrs. Wm. Alden, Duxbury, Mass., Feb. 21, 1887.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents dandruff and stimulates the hair to renewed growth.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

INVENTION AND DISCOVERY.

Two words which glibly enough fall from the lips of the average man in a careless sort of indiscrimination as if they were synonymous. But there is a vast sea of distinction between them. Literally, they are not so widely separated; but they have come to represent two totally different aspects of human action. To the writer's thinking, the terms have been greatly confused. Columbus hardly discovered America, he invented it—that is, as to its cognizable existence. He studied, figured, applied the laws as he knew them, and determined that there must be a continent there, and he plodded on till he proved the fact, and reduced his invention to practice.

Newton discovered the law of gravity, one might say, without either mental or physical effort. Watt invented the steam engine and Stephenson invented the locomotive. They felt and knew the goal was ahead, but how to reach it was the question which required invention of the highest order. Eli Whitney saw the painful and laborious methods of cleaning out cotton and shredding it, intuitively felt it could be done by machinery, went to work and gave the world one of his great inventions, the cotton gin. Howe's great inspiration to place the eye at the point of a needle may be said to have been a discovery. It unfolded a picture to his mind prophetic of good to almost countless millions, but invention had to be invoked to give the picture life, and the sewing machine, in all its beauty, came slowly forth from the chrysalis of Howe's discovery. The irregular lathe and the modern harvester were inventions; their dim, indefinable forms loomed up in the mists of their inventors' minds, they felt the impulse of improvement, the value of the goal gained, and they went to work and at last succeeded, and the wood carver and reaping hook lost their usefulness to that extent.

The electric telegraph was never discovered; it was consistently invented. Countless devices and methods were designed, tested, thrown away—to be afterwards revivified, many of them—new appliances and systems laboriously worked out, the midnight oil unsparingly sacrificed, until at last a perfected and practical system and apparatus were given to the world.

It is hard to say whether the dynamo was invented or discovered, considering its prototype, the magneto machine. The probabilities are it was an accidental discovery. The arc light was a discovery pure and simple. Electric incandescence was a discovery, but the incandescent lamp in its commercial form stands forth as one of the most beautiful examples of man's inventive faculty. The countless experiments on material, the bulb, the seal, the standardizing, the pumps, and all the appliances that go to provide us with the beautifully glowing luminary, all are ineradicable proofs of invention of the very highest order. Midnight oil and noonday sun, morning's vigor and evening's reposeful ruminations, were all called into requisition to complete the work. This is true invention.

The phonograph was originally a discovery, a happy thought of Edison's, but invention of a high order was necessary to produce the beautiful instrument of the present day. It was like Howe's needle—the germ was there, but the machine had to be devised to make it practicable. The undulatory telephone was a discovery, a brilliant one, but still a discovery. A happy thought supplied the missing link in an incomplete chain, and when the weld of that link was accomplished the whole world was enchained in admiration, the wonderful utility of the device was quickly recognized, and the discoverer reaped a rich harvest. The pneumatic process of Bessemer was an invention of high grade and far reaching importance, and the Siemens regenerative furnace has proved its equal in merit as a methodical and logical invention beautifully carried out.

The inventor sees his goal, and consistently strives for it. He knows the object is there, and he goes energetically after it, sometimes straight to it, but oftener is many times lost in the wilderness of deluded fancy. He sees a light ahead, sighs relief and darts after it, only to find it a will o'-the-wisp. Undaunted, he starts again, only perhaps to meet other and worse misfortunes. But he struggles on hopefully, and at last reaches the shrine of his adoration and is for the time content.

The discoverer walks along calmly toward some goal, or lies on the roadside meditating, and happening to cast his idle eyes downward, sees a gem sparkling at his feet, and he sometimes picks it up and adds it to the galaxy of the world's diadem, but he as often fails to note the scintillations that betoken its preciousness, and spurns it back into the deeper dust, to lie unseen and unknown perhaps for ages. Which of these two promoters of the world's welfare merits the highest praise, it is needless to ask. —Electrical Review.

Soldiers' Antiseptic Ammunition.

According to The Medical Press a useful suggestion is being carried out by the Netherland government, by which provision will be made for supplying each soldier during the time of war with a cartridge containing some antiseptic dressings. Each cartridge will be made of convenient size, namely, about three inches in length by two in width, and will be secured at one end with a safety pin. The dressing contained in each will consist of a bandage about three yards long, and two pieces of gauze, all of which have been rendered antiseptic by a sublimate solution. Hence in the event of wounds being received a ready means would be at hand for the immediate application of antiseptic dressings. Soldiers in the case of slight injuries would probably at once avail themselves of the dressings, and the latter could not fail to be of much use to the surgeons. The idea is well worthy of the attention of the military authorities in this country, and might even with advantage be adopted, as it has been for years past in the German army. In the wars in which, during the past few years England has been engaged in tropical climates, the early application of antiseptics to the wounds received by the men was admitted to be a matter of the utmost importance by the army medical officers attached to the forces.—Science.

American Women in London.

The presence of American women in London society has had an influence on conversation as it has on other things. Youth and beauty and cleverness are often to be found in the same person; it would be wonderful if they were not to be found in the same group. The American girl who marries in England has begun life earlier than her English cousin. She has met men and even talked to them while yet unmarried, a thing which few English girls venture to do. She has probably lived in Paris; part of her education is French; she knows three of the great capitals of the world; her ideas are not bounded by the horizon of Mayfair. She is fresh, original, independent. She cannot always be clever, but she has been taught to think for herself, and never was there a more apt pupil in that science. Above all, perhaps, she was not born into a respect for rank, or even for royalty, and she catches therefore at once that note of equality which is essential to social success—in London as much as anywhere in the world—as well as to intellectual freedom.

It was always said that the secret or one secret of American popularity in royal circles was in this American freedom from the purely conventional notion about royalty which prevails in England. A girl from New York talked to the Prince of Wales as if royalty had no more rights than republicanism. She spoke her mind, as she expected the prince to speak his. I don't know that he always did, but he was delighted by the girl's frankness. It is many years since he began to cover American society, and there has never been a time when there was not some one or more American women who, in the current phrase of London, had to be asked if you wanted the prince.—G. W. Smalley in New York Tribune.

Holland's Arm of Defense.

There is, however, another matter, ridiculous as it may appear to those who have not studied the topography of the country and its adjacent territory, why Holland feels secure as to its continued independence. Not far from Utrecht there is a strip of land that either belligerent must cross in order to invade the enemy's country. That strip of land is sufficiently broad and long for the passage of many corps d'armee should either the Germans or French violate Holland's neutrality. This entire strip can be put under water "in less than no time," drowning the invading armies, with ample safety to the inland retreating Dutch forces.

It will be remembered that while Belgium was used as territory for "interning" French soldiers, making this entire kingdom virtually a shelter for all those thrown hors de combat, Holland was not even scratched by the foot of a single foreign soldier during the Franco-German war. The little country was on the alert ever and anon. She had her army of 90,000 men on a war footing, but with one hand on the sword, the other on the sluices, she stood ready to fight with water any one daring to violate the merest inch of her territory. The experience then gained has been improved upon since, and during the past eighteen years the dikes and duinen have been so improved for the purposes of defense against sea and foe that the Hollanders of our day can as effectually make use of the water as an arm of defense as did their forefathers over 200 years ago against the then powerful Spain.—The Hague Cor. New York Herald.

Police Surveillance in Russia.

The only shade of discomfort which an American may meet in traveling in Russia comes from their system of espionage, and that is more in imagination than reality. Probably no country in Europe has such a thorough system of police surveillance.

As soon as you reach their border your passport is given up and registered. When you arrive at your hotel you give it up again and it is at once sent to police headquarters, and you are again registered. Whenever you change your location you do the same thing, and in this way the landlord everywhere is made responsible to the government for the foreigners under his roof. Then, when you wish to leave the country, you must again send your passport to the police office and obtain a permit, which is good for only three days, and which is attached to your passport and removed at the last Russian station on the Austrian or German frontier. So that your passport contains a complete record of when and where you entered the country, just where you have been and how long you have remained. Yet with all this you have no consciousness of being watched, and you probably are not, when the authorities are once satisfied as regards your nationality and good character. And after all the plots that have been formed against the government in foreign countries, is it any wonder that they should consider these precautions necessary?—Henry M. Wright in Detroit Free Press.

Flower Gardens for Show.

Oswald Crawford, in The Fortnightly, has a charming article on "Summer Time in Rural Portugal." He gives an account of the survival of the fittest in the noble gardens that are found as relics and reminders of Moorish taste. He says that "it humiliates his national pride to contemplate the pleasure gardens of his English friends; even to pass by train, in summer time, through the land and see no garden that is any refreshment to the spirits, save those of the cottagers." In other words, the northern garden is a show place for flowers, but in the southern garden "flowers of infinitely less importance than the walks, the shades of branching trees, the greenery of leaf and spray, the cooling breezes in summer, the warmth of the sun in winter, and at all seasons the golden fretwork that the sunlight makes upon the ground through overhanging boughs." We are young in a good many ways; but in the art of the beautiful we have most of all to learn. Such notes as Mr. Crawford gives us are especially valuable, not to England only, but to America. We have a superabundance of show gardens without a thought of comfort and refreshments. The one need of Americans is recuperation. Even our gardens are wearisome and formal.—Globe-Democrat.

Don't Care to Risk It.

A New York despatch of the 10th inst. says: The democratic betting men who have had access to Bill Scott's money the past week, and have put up thirty thousand dollars in three even bets, are not willing to-night to take odds which are offered by republicans. Ex-Sheriff Albert Daggett, of Brooklyn, was looking for some one who had the necessary financial backing to his political convictions to put up ninety-five thousand dollars against the one hundred thousand Mr. Daggett was willing to risk upon the general result between the two presidential candidates, in favor of General Harrison. Mr. Daggett was earnest, energetic, and hopeful of finding some one ardent believer in Cleveland who would meet him in his very generous offer, but up to ten o'clock had not succeeded. He did not insist upon these amounts or odds, and offered to put up fifty thousand against forty thousand upon the same issue. But there were no takers. Mr. Daggett, who is an astute politician, is confident thot the democracy are in such condition that they cannot meet the issue, and is willing to risk the above, after his close and careful study of the circumstances. This endeavor to bring democratic followers to a positive declaration of their honest belief, and its failure thus far, shows conclusively that they are extremely doubtful as to the result, a condition of things which has been intensified during the past four days by the local manipulations, which have caused the administration democrats to look exteremely blue and to entertain most serious doubts of the democratic outcome of this contest.

"A Strange Message."

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—"A Strange Message" is the fascinating title of Dora Russell's new and thrilling story, which will be in the Boston Daily Globe on Saturday of this week, Oct. 13. It will have an immense sale.

A Shell in the Fraud Camp.

New York advices of the 9th inst. say: The advertisement published in all the morning papers by the republican national committee, offering rewards for the detection and conviction of colonizers, has created a big stir in political circles in this city. The fact that the republican committee had placed twenty-five thousand dollars as a starter in the Garfield national bank seems to have been accepted as convincing proof that Chairman Quay meant business. There is a very interesting story back of this move on the part of Mr. Quay. Some ten days ago the republicans discovered that a well organized scheme on the part of the democratic district bosses to colonize the lower wards of this city, had been concocted and was about to be put into effect. Steps were immediately taken to stop the fraud, and which culminated in the offer of rewards. In the meantime, however, the democratic managers had "got wind that Mr. Quay was onto their little game." So in order to flank him, forestall him, and take away some of his thunder, they caused to be printed some five days ago that Mr. Quay was bringing into this state and New Jersey republican manipulators from Pennsylvania, for the purpose of colonizing both states. Despatches to this effect were sent all over the country. In political circles to-night Mr. Quay's emphatic action was the subject of universal discussion. It seemed to have caused consternation among several of the down town democratic leaders. It is authoritatively reported to-night that several arrests will be made within a couple of days.

Secretary of War Endicott, the blue-blooded mugwump member of the Cleveland cabinet, has undoubtedly been more of a partisan than any previous incumbent of the position, but he cannot be justly charged with any extravagance. He saved $654 by buying several thousand blankets for the soldiers of the United States army, of English manufacturers—the government not having to pay any duty on them!

It is said that Judge Thurman has given $2,000 to the democratic national committee's fund. That was a rather foolish thing to do, but it was not a direct violation of the law of the land as was the case with Mr. Cleveland's $10,000 contribution.

The Star, the special Cleveland organ in New York, is rather sober over the double and twisted democratic campaign in that city. It declares that the local factional contest might have been and should have been prevented. It further says: "Our only anxiety is regarding the national and state tickets. If they do not suffer, we can afford to regard the outcome of the local situation with complacency." The Star evidently recognizes the size of that "if."

The democrats make the surplus the special excuse for their proposed step toward free trade. If the Mills bill were enacted the same excuse would doubtless exist for another step; for that measure would surely draw into our market enough more goods of foreign manufacture, on which duties have been decreased but which have not been put on the free list, to more than keep up the revenues from imports to at least the present amount. And more surplus would of course call for more free trade.

The New York Times urges the republicans of that city to ratify the citizens' nomination of Hewitt for mayor. The Times being a democratic paper, it is likely that the republicans will look elsewhere for their inspiration.

The charter election at Newark, N. J., Oct. 9th, showed a falling off of about 700 in the democratic majority of 1805 of last year on the city ticket. The republicans elect eight out of the fifteen aldermen voted for, and will have a majority of about six in the common council next year. The democratic leaders made great efforts to get out a big vote and secure a majority in the city government, on account of the influence it would have in the rest of the state, and they are very much disappointed at the result.

An Irish-American Republican club was formed in Concord on Saturday evening, Oct. 6th, with forty-five members. William Foley is president. Fully half of them voted for Cleveland four years ago. It is expected that the membership will reach 100 before Nov. 6th.

There have been some novel strikes in this country, but the recent one of a grand jury in the United States court at Cincinnati for more pay is without parallel. This jury wanted mileage and $4 a day, and adopted a resolution to that effect in true Knights of Labor style. They did not get what they wanted, so they boycotted the district-attorney by refusing to find an indictment in the face of clear testimony, when the judge came to the rescue of the latter by declaring a lockout by discharging the jury. It is not stated whether the locked-out juriors propose establishing a jurors' assembly of knights, or a jurors' union.—Traveller.

Judge O'Brien of the supreme court of New York has granted permission to Attorney-General Tabor of that state to bring an action for annulment of the charter of the Havemeyer & Elder Sugar Refining company, on the ground that in becoming a party to the sugar trust, which, it is alleged; is a conspiracy under the state laws against the welfare of the people, the company has forfeited its corporate rights and is exercising privileges not conferred upon it by law. The attorney-general has appointed General Roger A. Pryor as counsel to represent him in the matter. The head of this company, Mr. Havemeyer, is also the head of the sugar trust, an earnest Cleveland man and large contributor to the democratic campaign fund. He was one of the few persons who were allowed to be heard by the democratic members of the committee which framed the Mills tariff bill, and it was owing to his efforts that the enormous tariff was continued on the "poor man's sugar."

And now Treasurer Lewis of the Massachusetts state general democratic committee notifies the federal office-holders to step up to the captain's office and settle. Ten per cent is about the figure desired, though it is understood five per cent will be accepted.

A decision has been made by Chief Justice Peters of Maine, who acted as referee in the matter of the reward for the capture of the money and robbers in the Bennett robbery. Deputy Sheriff Sylvester and Constable Horn, who arrested Whitney and Foster, got $450 each; Sheriff G. W. Brown, $100; Deputy Sheriff Maloney, $50; Detective Thomas F. Allen, $25; Rand Harden, $103.60; and B. S. Vining, $25. Harden and Vining gave the information as to the whereabouts of the robbers. Those who received the reward were paid on the 6th inst. by Barker, Vose & Barker, counsel for Bennett. The decision is satisfactory to all concerned.

English and Australian wool dealers and growers are said to be anxiously awaiting the result of the November election. If Cleveland pulls through, up goes the price of Australian wool.

TRADE MARK. S.S.S. FOR THE BLOOD

An Important Announcement

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniments and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS MARKLLIE,

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I have warded off a severe attack of rheumatism by a timely resort to Swift's Specific. In all cases where a permanent relief is sought this medicine commends itself for a constitutional treatment that thoroughly eradicates the seeds of disease from the system. Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

NEW YORK, 31 THE ARK.—After spending $200 to be relieved of Blood Poison without any benefit, a few bottles of Swift's Specific worked a perfect cure. T. FORREST.

VIENNA, GA.—My little girl, aged six, and boy, aged four years, had scrofula in the worst aggravated shape. They were puny and sickly. To-day they are healthy and robust, all the result of taking S. S. S. JOE T. COLLIER.

LADY LAKE, SUMTER CO., FLA.—Your S. S. S. has proved a wonderful success in my case. The cancer on my face, no doubt, would have soon hurried me to my grave. I do think its wonderful, and has no equal. B. H. BYRD, Postmaster.

WACO, TEXAS, May 4, 1888.

S. S. CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—Knowing that you appreciate voluntary testimonials, we take pleasure in stating that one of our lady customers has regained her health by the use of four large bottles of your great remedy, after having been an invalid for several years. Her trouble was extreme debility, caused by a disease peculiar to her sex. WILLIS & CO., Druggists.

is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum, and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington Street, Boston, writes. "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

UNITARIAN CONVENTION.

The 26th annual meeting of Unitarian churches of New Hampshire commenced in the South Parish church of this city last evening, when a sermon was delivered to a large congregation by Rev. F. B. Hornbrooke of Newton, Mass. The following is the programme for to-day:

Thursday: 9:00 A. M., Devotional meeting, led by Rev. J. Bradley Gilman, of Concord; 10:00, business meeting; 11:00, essay by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of Exeter, on "The working elements in Unitarian Christianity;" 2:30 P. M., essay by Rev. E. S. Elder, of Franklin; subject, "Essential Unitarianism; How shall we interest men in it?" 3:30, address by Rev. S. C. Beach, of Dedham, Mass., on "The American Unitarian association and the parishes;" 4:00, Rev. A. M. Pendleton, of Milford, will read a short paper on "The need of men, money and hospitality in the carrying on the work of our Unitarian churches." Followed by a discussion of essays and addresses.

A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend any or all the above mentioned meetings.

This evening at eight o'clock a reception to the visiting clergymen and delegates will be given by the South Parish in the chapel on Court street, on which occasion brief addresses will be made by clergy and laymen.

CIRCUIT COURT.

At the calling of the docket in the United States Circuit court at Concord this week, when the case of Lang, Bernheimer & Co. of Philadelphia vs. Dennis J. Lynch of Portsmouth was reached, a question arose on the sale of intoxicating liquor by the plaintiff to Lynch, as to whether the statute of New Hampshire inflicting a penalty for soliciting orders for liquor was not in conflict with the power of Congress to regulate commerce between the states. This point was argued by John S. H. Frink and John Hatch.

The grand jury returned indictments against Fred G. R. Gordon of Manchester, for robbing the mail while a postal clerk; Benjamin W. Adams of Canaan, personating an officer of the United States; John George of Barnstead, robbing the mail.

ELECTION BETS.

A bet proves nothing, beyond the confidence of the person betting, on either side, that he or she knows better of the matter in dispute than does the one taking the opposite side. And yet, that "the betting is in favor of our side" is always regarded as a good political item by the party organs, and no doubt goes a long way with a certain class of voters—those who wish to be on the winning side, without much regard as to which side that may be—in determining how their votes shall be cast. But we did not commence this item with the intention of making it a dissertation on betting, in its moral, immoral or political aspects, but to say that the Penny Post of this city, under the heading of "Attention Democrats," keeps standing in its columns a number of offers to bet on the election, as follows:

That New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana and New Hampshire will not give their electoral votes to Cleveland in November, ten dollars on each state, $50 is all, and all bets to be taken together.

Twenty-five dollars that a northern state cannot be named that will give its electoral vote to Cleveland. [This bet has been taken twice, one of the parties naming New York, and the other, we believe, New Jersey; but the offer still holds good for others to try their luck.]

Eight dollars to twenty that the republicans carry West Virginia.

Twenty-five dollars to twenty that Indiana's electoral vote is given to Gen. Harrison.

Ten dollars even that Connecticut will give its electoral vote to Gen. Harrison.

One hundred dollars that Grover Cleveland will not be the next president of the United States.

Twenty-five dollars that Luther F. McKinney is not re-elected to Congress from this district.

Twenty-five dollars that the republicans carry Indiana, Connecticut and New Hampshire.

Twenty-five dollars that Benjaman Harrison will be the next president of the United States.

The number and variety of these offers of election wagers indicate one of two things—either that somebody is indulging in a very stiff game of bluff, or else some republican having a very strong degree of faith in the success of his party all along the line in the coming election, and having money at hand, is ready to back up his opinions with his money. If it is merely a game of bluff, we should think the monied democrats of Portsmouth who are sure of Cleveland's re-election would promptly proceed to back the bluffer down, or else lay plans to take all his money away after Nov. 6th. But so far they haven't done it.

PERSONAL.

Miss Albee and Miss Lulu Albee, of Newcastle, are passing a few months in Boston.

Mrs. Whiton-Stone of Independence square, South Boston, is the guest of Capt. J. G. Moses and wife of Maplewood avenue.

Mrs. Horace Mudge and daughter, of this city, are visiting relatives in Manchester.

We are indebted to Hon. Wm. E. Chandler for public documents which we were unable to procure from any other source.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Hon. Wm. H. Gale of Brooklyn, N. Y., and others, will speak on the political issues of the campaign in Music hall on Monday evening, Oct. 15th, from the republican standpoint. Music will be furnished by the Portsmouth band, and the public are cordially invited. The doors will be opened at seven o'clock, and speaking will commence promptly at eight.

Entertainment in Grand Army hall this (Thursday) evening. All are invited.

Albert R. Junkins of this city was elected grand high priest at the annual session of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of New Hampshire, held in Manchester on the 9th inst. Wm. W. Cotton was elected grand representative.

Hon. Frank D. Currier of Canaan will be one of the speakers at the grand republican rally in Music hall next Monday evening.

Don't forget the entertainment and supper in Grand Army hall, this (Thursday) evening, given by the ladies of the Court street Christian church. Admission fifteen cents, including supper.

A man was seen raking hay in a lot on Union street, Wednesday morning of this week. Rather late for haying, and not very good haying weather, either.

The republican committee of ward one are requested to meet at the republican headquarters on Congress street this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Every member is requested to be present.

Howe Call, Esq., of this city, is on the political stump in New Jersey for the republicans. After the 20th inst. he will speak in Connecticut, and later in Indiana and Michigan, and will close his canvass in New York from the 1st to the 5th of November. Mr. Call was one of the most eloquent of Cleveland's orators of 1884, but he cannot stand free trade.

The Universalist Ladies' Social circle open the series of social meetings for the season this (Thursday) evening, by a musical and literary entertainment in the vestry of the Universalist church. Supper will be served, as usual on these occasions; free to members.

The Manchester Union has concluded that the republicans "held their own" in Maine! The entire people of Maine, democrats and republicans, and the democrats in this city, came to that conclusion before the returns were half in on the night of election day.

The Rockingham County Convention of Universalist Churches and Sunday Schools will hold a two days' convention in Nottingham next week.

The three-masted schooner Frank Harrington, while being towed down the river on Wednesday afternoon, the 10th inst., owing to an accident ran ashore at Church point, and hung there until the turn of the tide.

It was reported on the evening of the 16th inst. that the United States tug Leyden, at the navy yard, had that day again been found to have so much water in her hold that one of the yard fire engines was required to pump it out.

The apple crop in all sections is reported to be so abundant that dealers say not more than ninety cents or $1 per barrel will be paid in the country for No. 1's.

The French fishing schooner Madeline was cut completely in two on the 5th inst., during a fog on the Grand banks, by the National line steamer Queen. The captain and three men were picked up by the steamer's boats; twenty-one men were drowned.

United States Senator Faulkner, democrat, of West Virginia, says the republicans are making a strong fight to carry the legislature of his state, but he believes "there will be a democratic majority in the legislature of no less than ten or twelve." When the ante-election boast of a democratic senator makes a claim of so slender a majority as that, it is evident that there is a strong possibility of the next United States senator from West Virginia being a republican.

The democrats are dreadfully put out that Mr. Blaine refuses to be "ovated" on his western tour. They wanted to say that Blaine, not Harrison, is the real candidate. And for that matter, the little circumstance that the statement isn't true don't much trouble them. They had made up their minds to say it, and say it they do.

"Whatever may be the issue of the trouble between Hill and Cleveland," observes the New York Independent, "there is no question that a revolt of large dimensions from the democratic national ticket and platform is quietly proceeding throughout the state. There are thousands of voters who are going to reject both Cleveland and Hill and the policies they represent, and vote for candidates against whom no man can allege anything. Harrison and Morton and Miller are men of whom the country may be proud, and they represent policies which the pure and the patriotic delight to approve."

The Old Roman appeared before the United States supreme court in Washington on the 9th inst., as one of the counsel in the administration's case against the Bell Telephone Co., known as the Pan-Electric case.

A maritime alliance of England and Italy against France is reported.

Great freshets have occurred in New Brunswick, and railroad travel has been badly interrupted. Four bridges over the Nashwaak river were swept away on the 9th inst., and over a million logs carried to sea.

The eccentric phenomena of this peculiar year seem to have no end. Every congressional district in Kentucky has a prohibition candidate in the field.

There is a brother of Ex-Marshal Bazaine's still living in France. He is an engineer, and his two sons are promising young officers in the French army. They have obtained the authorization of the chancellerie to take on their mother's surname to the family patronymic, and their name is given as Bazaine-Hayter in the army list.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

ENTERTAINMENT AND SUPPER.

The entertainment to be given by the Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Court street Christian church, in Grand Army hall Thursday evening, promises to be very interesting. All who can should attend; admission including supper only fifteen cents.

Mr. Wilson M. Walker, at York village, is doing a good business in his general store. The post office of the village is located in his store.

Frank Cook's farm buildings in Milton were burned on the night of the 9th inst., with forty-five tons of hay and nine cattle; loss $1900, with no insurance.

Four children in a family of five, in Manchester, have died of diphtheria within two weeks.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TRUST COMPANY,

CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER. Avoid cheap and dangerous imitations.

BILIOUSNESS.

This very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Climbing Up the Rigi.

I am not certain whether it pays or not to go up on the Rigi. When the weather is clear you can see three mountain ranges all snow capped, 19 or 13 lakes, 17 towns and cities, 40 villages, 60 odd glaciers, and this in a circumference of about 300 miles. Glorious, I admit, but oh! the discomfort of the descent again! It takes longer to come down than it does to go up, and passengers are jerked, jerked, jerked from apex to base so rudely that life is no longer a pleasure ere we have reached Vitznau again. Out on such cogwheel contrivances for human torture, say I; the old fashioned diligences may have been slow and cruel, but they were Pullmans alongside of these new fangled cars.

Four years ago I climbed the Rigi, mere child's play after doing Pilatus, and I have not grown much older since I said I would climb it again and I did so day before yesterday. It was a warm afternoon. Not a breath of air, and the sun shining full on me for half the distance. By half-past 7 o'clock I had reached the kulm or highest point, and there I threw myself on the earth and saw the sun go down. Then I had my feet and legs well rubbed with liniment, meanwhile eating dinner, and then I went to bed to be called early enough to see that same sun rise again. The Rigi Kulm is the best place I know of to observe the splendid ruddy glow that comes over the great Alpine peaks at the rising and setting of the sun. Unfortunately these effects of light do not last long, but they are marvelously beautiful. Night before last as the sun went down it became first yellow, then dark red and in an instant everything touched by its dying rays assumed the same ruddy tint. This lasted for a couple of minutes after the sun had entirely disappeared, and then suddenly everything turned black and lo! the stars were shining.—Henry Haynie in New Orleans Picayune.

No Chances Against Gamblers.

In 1849 that famous magician, Robert Houdin, was requested by the judge of instruction of the tribunal of the Seine to examine and verify the genuineness of 150 packs of cards which had been seized in the possession of a man who enjoyed anything but a savory reputation. A peculiarity of the cards was that they were perfectly white, and it was impossible to detect the least proof of their having been tampered with or to find the slightest mark upon them. Over his work Houdin spent a fortnight, now inspecting them with the unaided eye, again by means of superior lens. Every individual card of the 150 packs was inspected again and again. He was giving up his work in despair, when, of a sudden, close to the corner of one of them, he perceived a bilious spot. Looking at it closer the spot disappeared, but holding it at a distance from him the spot reappeared. Following up this clew, he ascertained that on every card there existed a spot which, according to its position on the card, indicated the suit and the value of the card.

He pursued the subject further, for the purpose of ascertaining whether a person who plays for amusement only has the slightest chance of winning with a person who plays only to live. The conclusion he arrived at was that there is no such supposed favorable chance, and that the amount of the non-professional's losses is limited only by the magnanimity of the professional.—Boston Herald.

Favorite Beverages in Persia.

The great beverage in Persia is sherbet, which is plentifully supplied, and of which there are many varieties—from the bowl of water with a squeeze of lemon to the clear, concentrated juice of any sort of fruit to which water is added to dilute it. The preparation of sherbet, which is done with the greatest care, is a very important point in so thirsty a country as Persia, and one to which much time is devoted. It may be either expressed from the juice of fruit freshly gathered or from the preserved extract of pomegranates, cherries or lemons mixed with sugar and submitted to a certain degree of heat to preserve it for winter consumption.

Another sherbet much drank is called guzang ebben. It is made from the honey of the tamarisk tree. This honey is not the work of the bee, but is made by a small insect living under the leaves of the shrub. During the months of August and September the insect is collected and the honey is preserved. When used for sherbet it is mixed with vinegar, and, although not so delicious as that made from fruit, it makes an excellent beverage.

Only among the rich and fashionable are glasses used. In all other cases sherbet is served in china bowls and drank from deep wooden spoons carved in pearwood.—Youth's Companion.

Some Facts About Honey.

Starch and sugar when eaten undergo a digestive change before they are assimilated. In honey this change has been made to a considerable extent by the bees. It is partly digested, easy of assimilation and concentrated, and furnishes the same element of nutrition as sugar and starch—imparts warmth and energy.

As a medicine honey has great value and many uses. It is excellent in most lung and throat affections, and is often used with great benefit in place of cod liver oil. Occasionally there is a person with whom it does not agree, but most people can learn to use it with beneficial results. Children, who have more natural appetites, generally prefer it to butter. Honey is a laxative and sedative, and in diseases of the bladder and kidneys it is an excellent remedy. It has much the same effect as wine or stimulants, without their injurious effects, and is unequaled in mead and harvest drinks. As an external application it is irritating when clear and soothing when diluted. In many places it is much appreciated as a remedy for croup and colds. In preserving fruit, the formic acid it contains makes a better preservative than sugar syrup, and it is also used in cooking and confectionery.—American Bee Journal.

Are Your Pullets Laying?

This question is often asked at this season by persons keeping hens; and the answer is too often, "No! and suppose they won't lay until eggs get cheap next spring; just my luck." It ought not to be your luck. Pullets hatched in April last should have commenced laying a month ago; while May and June hatches should be laying this month. It is not too late even now, to force the early pullets to laying in a few weeks. The late ones, even as late as July and August, can be brought forward, so as to pay well, while eggs bring good prices. Strictly fresh, four years ago it would probably retail as high as 50 to 60 cents per dozen, in Boston and New York markets, before March 1st, 1889. Mrs. L. J. Wilson of Northboro, Mass., says: "In past years, I have noticed when my pullets hatched, they would lay a litter, and then they want to set, or make about for ten days, often for weeks, doing no laying. Last fall and winter, there was no interruption of their laying. The results were the best I ever saw in an experience of eighteen years. My thirty pullets were all just six months old, when they commenced laying. I never saw such return of eggs. In just eight weeks after they commenced to lay, the thirty pullets laid 1437 eggs; which I ascribed to the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder, to make hens lay." The new and enlarged edition of the Farmers' Poultry Guide contains much information upon the above subject. I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House street, Boston, Mass., (the only manufacturers of Sheridan's Powder, to make hens lay) will send a Guide postpaid, to any address for 25 cents in stamps; or two 25 cent packs of Sheridan's Powder and the book for 60 cents, five packs $1. Liberated from their Fetters

By the helpful, genial action of that most beneficent of aperients, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels soon throw off the burden that paralyzed and weakened them, and resume their normal freedom of action. The action of the Bitters, unlike that of average purgatives, involves no griping or drenching. If it did it would, like them, be valueless for ordinary use. There is nothing ungentile or unnatural attending its operation. Upon the liver, no less than the bowels, its action is most benign, promoting a healthful billious secretion, and directing out of the wrong and into the right channel. Conjointly with costiveness, other billious symptoms disappear when it is systematically used, and the stomach is strengthened as well as regulated by it. Malarial complaints, rheumatism, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles are completely relieved by it. Sleep and appetite are invariably promoted by it.

CARP NOT POPULAR.

They Thrive Well Enough, but Are Not Very Good to Eat.

When the government some years ago began the introduction of carp into this country a great deal of interest was manifested in the project and all kinds of predictions were indulged in. Carp ponds were constructed all over the country and the immigrants took kindly to American water. The prediction that the carp would do well in this country was soon realized, but there does not seem to be much prospect of the realization of the prediction that it will be the future food fish of this country. At any rate, Jerseymen are not taking kindly to eating it. An attempt was made to introduce it into the market at Paterson and the price dropped to ten and eight cents per pound, but the taste of the people was more favorable to catfish and porgies, and the carp were driven out of the market. Those who ate them pronounced them worse than the American sucker, and nobody seemed anxious for a second trial. George Jackson, of Little Falls, was one of the first to catch the carp fever, and he has several ponds full of the various kinds. One day he killed one weighing about four pounds. It was prepared in various different ways, and was found to be enough for a dozen families. Carp boiled, stewed, fried and fixed in different other ways was passed about the neighborhood, but nobody called for a second plate. Then some one suggested that the proper way to eat it was with port wine sauce. The jury returned a verdict without leaving their seats that this was a good way to spoil port wine.

In the upper part of Passaic county there were a number of carp ponds. One night a freshet swept them away and the carp got into the river. Since that time they have multiplied rapidly, and last year large numbers weighing about a half to three-quarters of a pound were caught. This year they are caught in still larger numbers, and the average weight has increased to over a pound, and occasionally one weighing three or four pounds is caught. They have been caught weighing six or seven pounds, but carp of this size are scarce.

The Passaic river, from the Morris county line for several miles either way, is a sluggish stream, admirably adapted for the growth of carp. This part of the river is now literally alive with them, and it takes but a short time to catch a large number. They will take a worm like any common fish, but the largest number are caught on dough mixed with cotton. Boiled peas make a delicate bait, and when boiled string beans are presented to them the carp fairly jump with delight.

After they are caught they are generally thrown away, fed to the cats or used for manure. Very few people undertake to eat them. In some places the carp are so thick that they can be seen at times by the hundred. Then again they stir up the bottom in search of bait, and the water presents a muddy appearance for a considerable distance around. In this way the river is kept almost continually stirred up, so that people living along the banks are complaining of the quality of the drinking water.

What this marvelous increase in carp is going to result in is a question that is troubling some people. Other fish introduced into waters where they do not belong have frequently multiplied so rapidly as to die off by the thousands for want of nourishment, and have thus caused disease, their rotting carcasses being exposed to the action of the sun and the water. If is feared that this will be the case with the carp, and many of the residents along the Passaic river are talking about joining the Knownothing party and putting nothing but American fish on guard.

Anglers having tried the carp and found them wanting in gamy qualities, concluded that their introduction would be a good thing for the bass and pickerel, who, it was thought, would relish the carp to feed upon. But the bass are too intensely American to have a taste for carp, and they let them severely alone and look for other food. Fishing for bass and pickerel is just as good as it has been for years, and the carp do not seem to have interfered with the food supply of other fish. Catching carp is a novelty to an angler, but he soon tires of it, and the result is that they are being let alone, and when caught by accident they are generally thrown back into the water. The carp, consequently, have everything their own way, and are continuing to multiply until they threaten to take rank among the fishes which the English sparrow occupies among the birds of this country.—New York Herald.

A Source of Courage.

There are, of course, many degrees of courage, endless varieties in its manifestations, but my own experience leads me to believe that this virtue in man follows the same natural laws as obtain in the case of horses and dogs. The better bred all three are the greater will be their innate pluck. In the well born man, however, there is found another element of the highest value. The man proud of a brave father, or, still more, of a long list of brave progenitors, even if fate has been so cruel as to give him thin blood and a timid disposition, will feel bound to sustain what is commonly called "the honor of his name." The struggle within him may possibly strain every nerve, but his pride will conquer his weak spirit, and in the hour of trial—aye, even of appalling danger—will enable him to play the part of the hero, and to play it well.—Lord Wolseley in Fortnightly Review.

Disease Among Copper Workers.

A physician of Birmingham, Eng., who has spent long years in observation of what is known as "braziers' disease," or "brass workers' ague," asserts that the trouble is due to acute or chronic copper poisoning. Almost all workers in brass or copper soon begin to show signs of the disease. A green band appears on the neck of the teeth, between the crown and the gum, the edge of the gum itself becomes slightly blackened, the perspiration has a greenish tinge, and even the hair takes on a greenish hue, signs all indicating the absorption of copper by the workmen. Where the complaint is acute, dyspepsia, colic, and nervousness set in, and even deafness and symptoms of locomotor ataxia have been observed.—Chicago News.

A FEW FORCED MARCHES.

Infantry Averages but Fifteen Miles a Day. Ancient Figures.

A dispatch from Fort Robinson, Neb., mentions an exceptional march made by the Eighth United States cavalry, commanded by Col. J. Misener, from Fort Davis, Tex., having Fort Meade, D. T., for its destination, a distance of 1,650 miles. The regiment reached Fort Robinson on the 26th of August, having made 1,550 miles of the march, leaving 100 miles still to go. The regiment left Fort Davis on May 17, and reached Fort Meade on Sept. 8, making the time 109 days, and an average of a fraction over fifteen miles a day, a rate of traveling considered exceedingly good. The band and regimental headquarters accompanied the expedition. This move is merely one of the ordinary changes of quarters, and is of interest only as an initial step toward a change of system in transporting troops. Where time is of little object the government has concluded to adopt the plan of marches instead of using the railroad, thereby saving the cost of transportation—a very considerable item. Of course this can only be done in the open country, but even there in the great west the land is becoming settled so fast that a barb wire fence is frequently met with as an obstruction.

Lieut. L. W. V. Kennon, aide-de-camp on Gen. Crook's staff, whose main hobby, by the way, is tactics, he having written a number of exhaustive articles upon that subject, one lately appearing in The Army and Navy Journal, expressed the opinion that the system would become very popular, for, besides the saving in expense, he claims it is the best sort of drill, hardening and toughening the troops as would no other method. Fourteen to fifteen miles a day is considered a fair pace; over fifteen is called quick marching, and over twenty is set down in military books as a forced march, but there have been some rare instances of quick marching that make the ordinary forced march seem like play.

Moving a whole army, consisting of infantry, cavalry, artillery, with the accompanying baggage wagons and army necessaries, is vastly different from the transportation of a single regiment of infantry or cavalry. Napoleon is credited with having performed the most astonishing feat of this character on record when in 1805 he marched his entire army from the channel to the Rhine, a distance of 400 miles, in twenty-five days, sixteen miles a day. The historian Gibbon tells of a march of the Sultan Galaleddin in 1300 with his troops of 1,000 miles, making fifty-eight miles a day. The same authority mentions an incident a century later when Mirza Meheddin Sultan marched with 30,000 soldiers 230 miles in five days, but states that the penalty of the commander's ardor was the loss of 26,000 of his men, reaching his destination with but 4,000.

During the late war Gen. Grierson, now colonel of the Tenth cavalry, marched 600 miles in sixteen days through the enemy's country; this was at the rate of thirty-seven and a half miles a day. Later than this, some time in 1873, Gen. Stanley marched through Montana and Dakota with a regiment of infantry 900 miles in twenty-eight days, thirty-two miles a day.—Chicago Herald.

Majestic, Towering and Plucky.

The manners of English women are marvelously austere. They are of one type, except a few glittering exceptions, who pursue the frolicsome demon—"animation"—in the vain delusion that they are imitating American women. With our girls—God bless their beaming eyes, clever brains and captivating ways—sprightliness and vivacity spring from the heart. With English women, buoyancy of manner comes from a thoughtful and logical deduction from facts.

"We are heavy," the daughters of England muse; "we must be larky and loud. American girls are vivacious, and the mob pursues them, while we sit stolidly by in the indisputable and soul searing position of rank outsiders. We must be gay—we will be gay."

The effort is invariably majestic, towering and plucky, but it is futile. An "animated" English girl of 24 reminds me of an overgrown colt who has not yet mastered his legs, gamboling with electrical playfulness over a stubby field.—Blakely Hall in The Argonaut.

Crossing the Atlantic Ocean.

One hundred years ago our fathers were content to hear from Europe once in two or three months—that was better than the six months of their fathers. It took at least a month to cross the Atlantic. The early steamers reduced this time to three weeks. This was considered speed. The Great Western brought the passage down to fourteen days, which was a miracle. In 1850 the Britannia reduced time to twelve days; then in 1870 the White Star line crossed in nine days. It was but a nine days' wonder. The Alaska cut the record to seven days, and then the Oregon to six days and a half, and the Umbria is a quarter of a day better yet. The ideal time seems to be five days. Probably that will be about the maximum and soon attained. Then the balloon.—Globe-Democrat.

Patients Attracted by Quackery.

A Paris magistrate had recently summoned before him a man charged with practicing medicine illegally. The accused, to the great surprise of the magistrate, immediately produced a diploma, and went on to explain that patients were attracted to him "by the semblance of illegal practice," and expressed his apprehension that his business would be ruined if his legal qualifications were known. There are some things that can be explained only on the principle of total depravity, and this seems to be one of them.—Once a Week.

Bacteria in Snuff.

A Berlin physician, Dr. Ernest Flothow, was consulted by a patient who was troubled by severe headaches. The physician's inquiries revealed the fact that the patient had been given to an immoderate use of snuff. The snuff box was produced, and a microscopic investigation showed that it was swarming with bacteria, which appeared in the form of a fine whitish powder. These parasites, it is stated, bore into the walls of the nasal cavity, where they multiply rapidly and finally find their way to the brain.—Chicago Times.

Terrible Railroad Disaster.

Seven heavy excursion trains passed through White Haven, Penn., over the Lehigh Valley railroad from Wilkesbarre, on the morning of the 10th inst., taking to the annual parade at Hazelton the Catholic Temperance societies of the Scranton diocese. In the evening on the return the trains were packed. The first three got through all right; the fourth, for some rersons not yet made clear, stopped near Mud Run station, five miles from White Haven, and the fifth one came around a curve at a high rate of speed, and crashed into the rear of the stationary one.

The destruction of life was frightful. The engine of the fifth train went its full length into the crowded rear car of the fourth one, driving that into the second car, and the second into the third. Not a person in the rear car escaped, those not instantly killed being scalded to death by the escaping steam and boiling water from the engine. One car was stood on end, and several were rolled down a high embankment.

The railroad officials at Wilkesbarre and other stations refused to give the frantic thousands who had friends on the trains any information, and the excitement and agony were frightful. After many hours of suspense trains commenced to come in, loaded with wounded, and persons who had left dead friends at the wreck. The total number of killed was on the afternoon of the 11th placed at fifty-five, and the seriously wounded at forty, many of the latter being likely to die; the less badly hurt were very numerous.

Rioting in Chicago.

An attempt to run a car on the West Side street railway, on the 10th inst., resulted in quite a riot, a howling mob of strikers and their sympathizers assailing the police guard on the car with bricks, rescuing from the officers all whom they attempted to arrest, until one officer who was hit chased his man through the crowd and fired at him, when the mob at that point dispersed. The local assembly to which the street car men belong, in the evening were notified that unless the New York syndicate comes to terms in a few days, all the men on lines ownedby the syndicate in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, and possibly Rochester, Buffalo and Brooklyn would be called out.

The Cracked Kettle Redivivus.

1st, The bill is badly planned;
2d, It is copied after the Mills bill;
3d, The Old Roman hasn't read it.

"Gentlemen of the jury," said the learned counsel for the defence in the historic case of the cracked kettle, "we shall prove to you three things:

1st, We did not borrow the kettle;
2d, It was cracked when we borrowed it;
3d, We returned it whole."

State Spiritualist Convention.

The semi-annual convention of the State Spiritualist society will be held in Washington, this state, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 12th, 13th and 14th. Among the noted speakers will be Prof. John W. Kenyon of Worcester, Mass., Mrs. Addie M. Stevens of Washington, Mrs. S. B. Craddock of Concord, S. Lizzie Ewer of this city, and Eunice K. Morgan of Woodstock, Vt.

Railroads will sell tickets at two cents a mile, and reduced stage and hotel rates have been secured.

Fair Election League.

The "Indiana Fair Election league" has been very quietly organized. What brought it to public attention was the issue of 500,000 circulars bearing the ominous title of "A fair election or the penitentiary." The president of the league is Col. Samuel Merrite, a leading book publisher and dealer of Indianapolis, and the secretary and treasurer is John B. Connor of the Dakota Former, formerly chief of the bureau of statistics. Both are republicans, but they are not active politicans.

Why Don't You Laugh

With The Globe Telephone Man Next Sunday.—He Will Reappear as Smiling and Funny as Ever.

BOSTON, Oct. 11.—Republicans, democrats, mugwumps, prohibitionists and tariff reformers are all agreed upon one subject—that, the Globe telephoneman is a thing of wit and joy forever in political campaigns. The Globe telephone man has been fed on fish and phosphates until he is brighter than ever, and he will appear in the next Boston Sunday Globe with an important and witty contribution to the campaign. Order the Sunday Globe to-day if you do not take it regularly.

Registration in New York City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11th. The registration in New York and Brooklyn thus far shows a large increase over last year and preceeding years; that of yesterday was larger than ever before. The increase is far beyond, proportionally, the growth of these two cities, and shows a phenomenal interest in the political situation this fall. Whenever a condition of this kind has existed, it has been followed by an increased republican vote and such a lessening of democratic majorities here that has had a decided bearing upon the result in the state.

New York being one of the states which the democracy have insisted upon calling their own in this campaign, the registration would show as the republican managers have all along held, namely, that the sentiment in the state is most decidedly for the republican candidates and the principles which their candidacy demonstrates. In six democratic districts the net democratic loss is 259 votes. This would indicate an increased republican registration of about fifty per cent over that made by the democrats. John S. Davenport, who is more familiar with registration statistics in this city than anyone else, said to-day that the registration was simply surprising; that it showed intense activity in republican circles, and comparative apathy among the democrats.

Democratic Civil-Service Reform.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10th.—The report of Senator Hale's committee on the civil service modes employed by the democratic civil service reformers in the New York custom house, has fallen like a bomb shell in the democratic camp. It came in a very inopportune moment—at a time when ample arrangements had been made to make every employe, whether democratic or republican, walk up to the office and settle.

This arrangement had been so far completed that an office had been secured in a down town street near the custom house, and a gentleman appointed to take charge of the receipts. Last Saturday the word was started around to the men in the custom house proper, that if they knew what was best for themselves they had better pay up at once, and they were informed where the office to pay in was located. Tuesday the word went around through the employees of the surveyor's office. To-day a prominent republican in the appraiser's store stated that he had been told to go and call upon a certain man at once; that he would find his name there on the list, with the amount which he was expected to pay; and the informant suggested to him that the best thing he could do to save his scalp, was to get there as soon as possible.

The custom house officials are, from all accounts, completely upset by the report. They have called a halt all along the lines, so it is stated, but is probable that the necessities of the democratic national committee in prosecuting the boodle campaign will make them go ahead all the same.

Want of Sleep

is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington Street, Boston, writes. "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Rowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

Encampment Officers, I. O. O. F.

At the forty-fourth annual session of the Grand Encampment, I. O. O. F., State of New Hampshire, held at Manchester on the 9th inst., the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

William H. Lamprey, grand patriarch, Laconia;
George E. Bagley, grand high priest, Nashua;
Albert R. Junkins, grand senior warden, Portsmouth;
Joseph Kidder, grand scribe, Manchester;
Lorenzo K. Peacock, grand treasurer, Concord;
William J. Fernald, grand junior warden, Concord;
Hinman C. Bailey, grand inside sentinel, Concord;
George W. Willey, grand outside sentinel. Rochester;
William W. Cotton, Portsmouth, Hiram Hill, Manchester, grand representatives;
Thurman Smith, Pittsfield, grand representative-elect.

New Hampshire Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F.

The annual session of the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire, I. O. O. F., was held in Manchester on the 10th inst., over 200 delegates being in attendance.

The session was a busy one. Secretary Joseph Kidder read his report, showing the number of lodges to be seventy-five, an addition of one during the year. The net gain in membership during the year was 289, the total membership up to June 30, 1888, being 10,117. There was paid for relief during the year $30,736 73. The total membership of the Rebekah degree lodges was 4216 up to January last, the number of brothers being 2056, and sisters, 2160. Total assets of the Rebekah Lodge, $6227.76.

The other business of the morning session was the reading of the report for the Sovereign Grand Lodge, the report of Grand Master William O. Folsom of Henniker, and the conferring of degrees upon nearly one hundred of the past grands from lodges throughout the state.

At 12:30 a recess was taken till two o'clock, when the following officers were elected:

Grand master, Herman Dare, Nashua;
Deputy grand master, Thomas Gifford, Jr., Gorham;
Grand warden, John W. Bourlet, Concord;
Grand secretary, Joseph Kidder, Manchester;
Grand treasurer, Robert C. Fernald, Salmon Falls;
Grand chaplain, Moses M. Burbank, Franklin.

There are 2500 speakers on the stump in Indiana.—1200 republicans, 1200 democrats and 100 prohibitionists. Glad of it; we don't like Indiana very well; its people vote democratic too often, and we don't care how much they are persecuted.

TRADE S.S.S. FOR THE BLOOD MARK

An Important Announcement

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniments and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and, after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS HARKILIN,

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I have warded off a severe attack of rheumatism by a timely resort to Swift's Specific. In all cases where a permanent relief is sought this medicine commends itself for a constitutional treatment that thoroughly eradicates the seeds of disease from the system. Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

NEW YORK, 51 7TH AVE.—After spending $200 to be relieved of Blood Poison without any benefit, a few bottles of Swift's Specific worked a perfect cure. C. FOWLER.

The National Echo, of Washington, D. C., for the past eight years the recognized central organ of the colored democracy, has taken the names of Cleveland and Thurman from the head of it columns, and put Harrison and Morton in their places. The paper is owned and edited by colored men, and the editor was one of the signers of J. Milton Turner's call for a convention of colored men for the express purpose of endorsing the nominees of Mr. Cleveland's convention at St. Louis. He shows in his paper that the colored democratic convention was purely a side show gotten up and paid for by the democratic national committee.

ENTERTAINMENT AND SUPPER.

The Ladies' Sewing Circle of the Court street Christian church gave an entertainment and supper in Grand Army hall on Thursday evening of this week, and it was largely attended, the hall being crowded. This was the opening of a series of entertainments to be given during the fall and winter by this society, the proceeds of which will be given towards building the new church. Rev. John A. Hainer, pastor of the church, deserves a large share of the credit for the arranging and successful carrying out of the exercises. The entertainment was one of the best ever given by this society, some of the numbers being especially fine; but all were so well rendered that we can name no special one. The following was the programme:

Chorus, "Let the Vales resound," choir.
Reading, Sadie Dickey.
Song, Pearl Seavey.
Recitation, Blanche Dennett.
Duet, Rev. John A. Hainer and Miss Florence M. Coleman.
Recitation, Flossie Hatch.
Reading, Edith Horrocks.
Reading, Miss Ethel Green.
Song, Emma May Leighton.
Song, Rev. John A. Hainer.
Dialogue, "The way to Windham."
Chorus, "We all Have a very Bad Cold," choir.

Miss Alice M. Swasey, who presided at the organ, should receive much credit for the carrying out of her part of the programme. She has always been willing to do what she could to help the society and entertainment committee, and has given much time in rehearsals, etc.

The committee desire to express their thanks to all who took part in the exercises, in assisting them in giving so fine an entertainment.

During the evening ice cream and cake were on sale. Supper was served from six to eight o'clock.

The next entertainment will be given Thursday evening, Nov. 8th. The admission fee is small, enabling all to attend—fifteen cents, including supper.

This society should receive the support of our citizens in helping them to erect their new edifice, as its attendance demands a much larger church, the seats in the present one being nearly all occupied.

VOTES ARE WHAT COUNT.

An old line democrat of this city, who never in his life voted any ticket but the straight democratic, but will this year vote for Harrison and Morton, on Thursday told another citizen of the same political stamp as himself,—and quite likely to vote as he does this year, too,—that he personally knew of at least forty hitherto reliable democrats in this city who will on Nov. 6th carry the republican national ticket, and most of them the local and state tickets of that party as well. We are personally acquainted with the gentlemen referred to, and know that while they have always been earnest democrats, neither has ever been what is called an active politican.

Another democrat, whom we have known for many years, this week said to us: "My first vote was cast for Frank Pierce, and I have voted the democratic ticket at every election since; but next month I shall vote for Harrison and Morton, and I believe I shall help to elect the next president and vice president of the United States."

Opposition to the free trade tendencies of the administration and the party leaders, disgust with the backing and filling on the fishery question—first an abject surrender and then a bluster—and dissatisfaction with the one-man power in local political affairs, account for these changes to a great extent.

TALL HAT COMPANY.

At a meeting of democrats at their headquarters on Daniel street, Wednesday evening of this week, to form a Tall Hat campaign company, Daniel E. Leavitt was chosen president, Charles Carroll secretary and George E. Hodgdon treasurer. Officers for the marching company were chosen as follows: Michael J. Ryan, captain; B. Stowe Laskey, 1st lieutenant; Daniel C. Bartlett, 2d lieutenant; James Quinn, sergeant.

UNITARIAN CONVENTION.

The 26th annual meeting of the Unitarian churches of New Hampshire, which commenced in the South Parish church in this city Wednesday evening, the 10th inst., closed on Thursday afternoon at a late hour, and a number of the visiting clergymen and delegates left for their homes by the last trains. To those who remained, a reception was given by the South Parish in the evening, at the chapel on Court street. At the business meeting, Thursday forenoon, the following were elected officers of the State Unitarian association for the ensuing year:

President, Hon. John H. Goodale of Nashua;

First vice president, Col. Charles C. Danforth of Concord;

Second vice president, Wm. H. Rollins, Esq., of Portsmouth;

Directors, Miss M. A. Downing, Concord; Rev. T. B. Morrison, Lancaster; J. W. Fellows, Manchester; Clarence E. Carr, Andover; Rev. T. P. Sheafe, Jr., Dover; Rev. Alfred Gooding, Portsmouth;

General secretary, Rev. W. H. Waldridge, Peterboro;

Recording secretary, Rev. Edward Green, Newport;

Treasurer, J. C. A. Hill, Esq., Concord.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Oct. 11th, Mayor Hodgdon in the chair, and the full board present:

Horace Wiggin was granted leave to encumber Vaughan street for building purposes.

James S. Saunders was appointed special police officer at the Portsmouth Shoe Co.'s factory.

Bills to the amount of $313.79 were approved and ordered to be paid.

Adjourned for two weeks.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. John D. Randall and son are visiting her sister, Mrs. J. I. Oliver, in Brockton, Mass.

Mr. M. J. Hartnett, formerly employed at the Rockingham, left on Thursday for East Boston, where he has been engaged in the employment of the Maverick house for five months.

Mrs. Oliver J. Goldsmith and children, of this city, are visiting in Waltham, Mass.

Mr. W. L. Tindall of Philadelphia arrived in this city on Thursday, and attended the meeting of Osgood Lodge, I. O. O. F., that evening.

Mr, Gustave Peyser and family started last Thursday morning on a trip to New York and Washington.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Gurnet, Clark master, at one time engaged in the brick trade out of this port, was towed into Vineyard Haven on the 11th inst. by the revenue cutter Gallatin, having lost both anchors and forty-five fathoms of chain near Bishop and Clerks ledge the previous day.

Mr. Charles N. Osgood, who has been on picnic parties during the summer season in the good old boat "Hoodlum," is about to pull her up for the winter, and hopes to have a good time in her next season.

The scooner W. F. Miller arrived on the 10th inst from Cape Neddick, with a load of wood for the Eliot brickyards.

MUSIC HALL.

The Home Journal says: "No musical organization for the ensuing season should receive a greater share of public attention than the Boston Symphony Orchestral Club. The founder of this club is Mr. Max Bachert, a gentleman who has already won to the support of his latest project many worthy musicians and artists who were formerly associated with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Under the auspices of Mr. Bachert, a brilliant series of concerts may be confidently anticipated from the new symphony club, and it is said to be his purpose to extend its reputation throughout the country" At Music hall Oct. 18th.

Lieut. Chauncy B. Hoyt, of the Sinclair Cadets, has accepted the wager offered in the Penny Post on the general result of the coming election, staking $25 that Cleveland will win.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Hon. Wm. H. Gale of Brooklyn, N. Y., and others, will speak on the political issues of the campaign in Music hall on Monday evening, Oct. 15th, from the republican standpoint. Music will be furnished by the Portsmouth band, and the public are cordially invited. The doors will be opened at seven o'clock, and speaking will commence promptly at eight.

Mr. Edwin B. Prime, for many years past a messenger on the navy yard, was dismissed on the 11th inst. Mr. Prime was a brave soldier on the Union side in the war of secession, and wears on his face the evidence of his honorable service in the form of a scar, caused by a bullet wound which has locked his jaws for the past twenty-five years.

The Portsmouth Shoe Co. on the 10th inst. sold to a house in Atlanta, Ga., 1014 cases of ladies' shoes—said to be the largest order ever placed with any New England shoe company.

The St. Mary's Benevolent society's 16th annual assembly, in Franklin hall on Wednesday evening of this week, was like all previous ones a complete success. Lord & Medcalf's orchestra furnished the music, and the order of fourteen dances was gone through with before two o'clock Thursday morning. The attendance was large.

About a dozen small urchins, with a drum, three flags, five torches, a big tin lantern and great enthusiasm, paraded the streets Thursday evening, singing and cheering lustily. Just what political party, if any, they were campaigning for, we did not ascertain; but they were having a mighty good time.

The following have been drawn to serve as jurors from ward one, at the coming term of the supreme court in this city: Grand, Henry R. Stoddard; petit, John Mooney, Daniel S. Philbrook, Joseph R. Curtis.

The Manchester Mirror of the 9th inst., in its base ball notes, says: "Frank J. Leonard is negotiating with players for next season's Portsmouths."

A few teaspoonfulls of Preston's Cologne added to the bath, renders it delightfully refreshing.

The Pullman train due in this city from the eastward about four o'clock Thursday morning, did not arrive until nearly nine o'clock, the delay having been caused by a washout on the Maine Central road.

The Boston & Maine railroad is building a new passenger station at North Conway.

Thomas Fitzgerald, aged seventy years, a wood sawyer and very feeble, was killed by a Maine Central locomotive at Augusta, Me., on the 10th inst.

"'LITTLE PHIL' AND HIS TROOPERS—THE LIFE OF GEN. PHILIP H. SHERIDAN—ITS ROMANCE AND REALITY."

Under this title Colonels Burr and Hinton have written a most fascinating history of the world's greatest cavalry leader. Starting with the General's birth, his career is tracted step by step from the humble clerkship in the country store to the position of leader of an army, and to the grave. The great soldier's manners and methods are so vividly portrayed one feels the magnetism of the man himself in this graphic account of his deeds. It is no wonder he won battles—a born soldier and fighter. He was always at the front in battle, his presence inspiring confidence in his followers, and victory followed his lead. The authors, well-known cavalrymen and writers, are to be congratulated upon having produced so readable a book. Their active participation in the cavalry service and personal acquaintance with General Sheridan well qualified them to produce an accurate and authentic account of the famous General's life. The book is finely illustrated with some seventy-five engravings of celebrated cavalry generals, battle scenes, etc. It is certain to have an immense sale, as the price, $2.50, places it within reach of every one. It is published by J. A. & R. A. Reid, Providence, R. I, whose other standard works have established their reputation as publishers.

"Our Bandanna" is what they call the latest and best issue of the campaign. This is a pamphlet of folio size, containing a brief political history of the country and sketches of its greatest statesmen and warriors. Some space is devoted to the career of the republican presidential candidate, the party platform, and the more important issues of the campaign. General Harrison's latter of acceptance is also included. Thomas Lawson of the Rand-Avery company, who edits the publication, has made the best of a very bright idea. Not the least attractive part of the pamphlet are the exceedingly faithful likenesses of those of whom all good citizens and republicans delight to honor. The whole thing makes a large folio of twenty pages, and is resplendent in a cover of stars and stripes, bearing the portraits of Harrison and Morton. A book lovers' edition of 300 copies, and a presidential edition, on silk, of five copies, are also published.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

NEW HAMPSHIRE
TRUST COMPANY,
Manchester, N. H.
CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable Institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

EPPS'S COCOA.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame.—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. A Cup of Sanford's Ginger.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and the best of French Brandy, is a most grateful stimulant to the stomach, speedily promoting digestion and assimilation of food, and hence fortifies the system against prostrating influences and summer ills.

It instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer ills, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of stomach troubles,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious and epidemic influences.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

BILIOUSNESS.

THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.

She suffered thirty years.

MRS. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the palpitations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."

Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen." Republican motto.

Liberated from their Fetters

By the helpful, genial action of that most beneficent of aperients, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the bowels soon throw off the burden that paralyzed and weakened them, and resume their normal freedom of action. The action of the Bitters, unlike that of average purgatives, involves no griping or drenching. If it did it would, like them, be valueless for ordinary use. There is nothing ungentile or unnatural attending its operation. Upon the liver, no less than the bowels, its action is most benign, promoting a healthful billious secretion, and directing out of the wrong and into the right channel. Conjointly with costiveness, other billious symptoms disappear when it is systematically used, and the stomach is strengthened as well as regulated by it. Malarial complaints, rheumatism, debility, nervousness and kidney troubles are completely relieved by it. Sleep and appetite are invariably promoted by it.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he enters up a free trade position without disguise —London Saturday Review.

Pimples, boils and other humors are liable to appear when the blood gets heated. To cure them, take Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

"For twenty years I have suffered with a severe bronchial cough, never lying down without a severe attack of the same. After much pursuasion, I was induced to try Adamson's Balsam, and its good effects for six months are certainly marvellous. Please use this truthful testimony for the advantage of all sufferers like myself.

Mrs. Wm. Alden, Duxbury, Mass., Feb. 21, 1887.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Many forget that the hair and scalp need cleansing. Extensive use of Ayer's Hair Vigor has proven that it is the best cleansing agent for the hair—that it prevents dandrug and stimulates the hair to renewed growth.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N.Y. eeowtjan89

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. eon.wed.fri.eu1al

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam for coughs and colds does, is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles are 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption. tool9

SONNET.

I now know why the dear gods gave me sight—
Oh, not to see the river lilies grow:
Ah, not to watch the seasons come and go,
Nor yet to see the jewels of the night.
To see one with the world against one fight
Through weary years and lonely years? Ah, no!
And not to see an iceberg, drifting, glow
Beneath a summer moon's celestial light.
But just because they knew that I would gaze
Upon a star, that shines as one through space,
Until my heart grew thick with strangled sighs.
My days are turned to nights, my nights to days—
For, oh, I see the woes of some dead race
Deep down in your miraculous, sad eyes!

—John Ernest McCann in New York World.

Vengeance of the Cobra.

Andrew Fischer, an employe of the Madras Railway company, was seated in the veranda of his bungalow and observed two large cobras on the barren plain immediately in front of the house. Arming himself with a stout stick, he proceeded to the spot and encountered the snakes. He succeeded in killing one of them, while the other, which had been slightly wounded, managed to escape. Mr. Fischer hunted about for the runaway, but could not find it. He then returned to his bungalow and rested for some time, as he was off duty. Later in the day he prepared to go to his work, and with that object got out his clothes to dress. He sat on his coat, and was about to put on his shirt when he felt something bite him on the back. He turned round, and to his horror found a snake on the cot behind him, which he is said to have recognized as the cobra he had wounded that morning. He immediately sought relief, and all kinds of remedies were applied, but to no effect, and he died in the evening. It is commonly believed among the Hindus that no animal is more revengeful than the cobra, and that if an attempt is made to kill it and it escapes it never gives itself rest until it has wreaked its vengeance upon its assailant.—Homeward Mail.

Canned Fruits and Vegetables.

Many fruits and vegetables, being hermetically sealed while they are fresh from the vines at the point of supply, are fresher, more wholesome and palatable than the so called fresh fruits and vegetables exposed for sale for considerable periods of time in city and village markets—a fact not generally understood or appreciated. Our best packers now insist that these articles shall be picked in the morning while the dew is on them, and brought to the factories in the highest state of perfection, and it is safe to say that in all well ordered factories cleaner and more tidy methods are employed in the systematic preparation of canned goods than in the average home kitchen. —Francis B. Thurber in Medical Classics.

Slippers for the Children.

In one of the cantons of Switzerland the public educational authorities celebrate the approach of the wet season by providing each of their young scholars with a pair of slippers, which the children bring with them in the morning and wear indoors during the day, while their damp boots are being dried at the fire. Thus the chances of their catching cold are reduced to a minimum, and the result is, of course, greater comfort for the youngsters, much relief from anxiety on the part of their parents, and, it may be assumed, a corresponding regularity in school attendance. Some day poor old England may see its way to taking a hint from little Switzerland.—London Globe.

Features of American Handicraft.

Rapidity of execution, not fine work, is the distinguishing feature of all American handicraft. American carpenters and wood workers do more good work in a given time than any of their brothers of other lands, but it does not have the faultless neatness of the product of Chinese and French artisans. The Chinese, for instance, make chairs, cabinets and even houses without the use of a single nail, and every piece of wood is fitted to its place with hair line exactness. It is not considered extraordinary in China to spend three years in the construction of a single bedstead.—Chicago News.

The Amount of Water Power.

The American Statistical association publishes some interesting figures on the amount of water power employed in the United States. In 1880 there was a total water power equal to 1,225,379 horse power used for manufacturing purposes, this being 85.9 per cent. of the total power thus employed in the states. The annual value of the water power thus utilized is set down at $24,000,000. The New England states alone use 34.5 per cent. of the whole water power of the country, and altogether the Atlantic states use over three-fourths of the whole. —Public Opinion.

The "Book of the Dead."

A magnificent hieroglyphic papyrus, containing a careful transcript of the "Book of the Dead," has been secured by the British museum. It was written for a royal scribe called Ani, who was a man of great importance in the early part of the period of the rule of the kings of the nineteenth dynasty over Egypt, about 3,200 years ago. The papyrus is quite complete, the first and last vignette having been preserved intact.—Chicago Herald.

What Dogs Cost Us.

There is in the United States a dog for every three inhabitants. The cost of keeping 20,000,000 dogs is at least $200,000,000 per annum. The food given to an average dog every year if fed to chickens would yield a return of more than $10. High toned dogs are very expensive, their food costing a good deal more than that of some people.—Public Opinion.

Hint to Drivers.

A wet sponge placed on the head of a working horse will save the animal from oppressive heat. In New York the use of the sponge has become a common practice.

Do today's duty, fight today's temptation; do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you cannot see, and could not understand.—Kingsley.

DIMPLES MADE TO ORDER.

A Chicago "Doctor's" Method—A Frenchman's Process—A Bad Job.

The doctor, a pleasant faced young man, said: "I am a regularly graduated physician, and believe myself capable of performing any ordinary operation. Chicago needs a dimple maker and I want to be the man. There's money in it for me and beauty in it for the ladies. The process is practically painless and the after result as beautiful a dimple as the heart of man could desire to look upon or woman to possess. Dimple making is a regular business in New York and other eastern cities. I think I can introduce improvements into the art. I have been to Paris and have studied there under the great dimple makers, and think myself competent. The process is simple. Through an incision made in the skin I remove a small portion of the flesh sufficient to leave a cavity large enough for a dimple. The wound is dressed and nature is left to heal it. No, I don't care to go into particulars, because I do not want to be imitated. The charge will be from $25 to $50, and the time required about one week. The operation itself takes but a few minutes. Of course the healing of the wound is a matter of more or less time."

The first establishment of the business, if it can be so called, in America, was managed by a Frenchman named Le Compte, who introduced it. He had been a barber in his own country, and had learned dimple making as an adjunct to shaving, as the Italians learn how to use the lancet. He was not an expert, but he was shrewd. He knew that doctors of a certain class come cheap, so when he hired a first floor front in one of the old houses on Fourteenth street, New York, before the reorganization of that thoroughfare, he hired a young graduate to help him. This was in 1875.

Le Compte soon became the rage. He early achieved newspaper notoriety from the novelty of his calling, and this helped him. His process was not so simple or so free from pain as the present method. He applied a small hollow cone of silver to the cheek or chin of the would be dimpled. To the open small end of the cone was affixed a tube leading to an air pump. By exhausting the air from the cone the integument and flesh covered by the open flared end of it was forced up, filling the cone. A ligament was then tied around the base of the conical portion of flesh to prevent it sinking back to the level of the face. The cone was then removed and an opening made in the elevated particle of face, and enough of that flesh removed to cause the desired depression, when the ligament was removed. As none of the epidermis was removed, there was usually no difficulty experienced in causing the wound to heal with suppuration. To give the dimple its required shape, a solid cone was inserted in the depression and kept there until the wound had healed by means of a bandage. During this time it was presumed that the more or less fair patient was not at home to callers. Or, if seen, she had a bad toothache or the mumps, or any other complaint causing the muffling of the face.

Le Compte did quite a business at first, but it was soon discovered that his operations left either a scar or a permanent redness behind, which was more unpleasant than the lack of a dimple. He had imitators, of course, and some of them improved on his methods. It was not until local anæsthetics came into vogue that the business received a great impetus. With cocaine a new field was opened to dimple makers and the other improvers and benefactors of humanity. The process was then made practically painless, and establishments, usually as adjuncts to dental offices and manicure shops, were located in Boston and Philadelphia as well as New York.

It rested with a Yankee herb doctor named Swain to reach the pinnacle of the profession. Swain had been an itinerant medicine vender throughout New England, in which capacity he had pulled teeth and performed other minor surgical operations upon the natives of the districts through which he traveled. Becoming acquainted with one of Le Compte's assistants he soon learned all that the Frenchman knew, and he resolved to see whether American ways and newspaper ink would not improve on the methods of Europe. He chose the City of Brotherly Love as the field for his operations, and opened with the glare of brass and the fluttering of dodgers—"health and beauty" parlors, as he described his apartments on Market street. He chose as chief assistant a pretty young Quakeress with a natural dimple of surpassing beauty. She was exhibited as a specimen of his handicraft. He did not confine himself to dimples. He sold powders and rouges and lotions, and had certain infallible recipes for baldness and paleness and redness and all the blemishes, real and imaginary, with which the belles of the city thought themselves afflicted. He soon worked up a good trade, and at one time he is said to have kept two assistants busy dimple making, but an end came to his prosperity.

His method of making dimples was substantially the same as that now practiced. But familiarity breeds carelessness as well as contempt, and one day when the chin of a patrician Philadelphia belle was in the process of dimpling a rusty scalpel was inadvertently used with disastrous effect. In a few days the lower jaw of that beauty was far from heightening her attractiveness. Let a veil be drawn over the picture. Suffice it, her good looks were gone forever, and as she valued her appearance at $25,000 it was rather a serious matter. Swain was brought into court on a damage suit and mulcted for a moiety of that sum. It appeared in evidence that he gave a guarantee to each patient to make a dimple without disfigurement, and as in this case he had failed lamentably in both provisions of his bond, he was charged for the same. That ended his career as a beautifier of womankind.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Machine Made Mortar.

An idea has been developed in Germany in the shape of the manufacture of mortar by machinery in large quantities to be delivered to contractors or individuals as required for use. About 2,000,000 barrels were disposed of in Berlin on this plan alone last year.—New York Star.

The Thumbscrews Put On.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12th. The democratic national committee are plaintively pleading for money; in fact thay have done little else the past four weeks, and they not only have found themselves irretrievably in debt, having expended far more than they can ever hope to liquidate, but have been compelled to discharge employees at headquarters, and reduce the salaries of others. But this has not had the effect to help the committee out of their troubles, and they have been lying awake nights to concoct plans to bleed the democratic lambs. The scheme to gain prestige by advertising that Cleveland had given ten thousand dollars to the committee had its effect for a short time, and a number of the enthusiastic followers of the democracy "Came down;" but as soon as it was discovered that the whole thing had been faked up the enthusiasm died out at once, and the receipts fell off to such a degree that virtual bankruptcy stared the committee in the face.

Mr. Brice, chairman of the democratic executive committee, has become fairly desperate over the condition of affairs, and has ordered the thumbscrews turned on the office holders of any description. This will be felt in every section, particularly in Indiana, Connecticut, Michigan and New York, where the employees of the government will be compelled to step up and pay a liberal percentage of their salaries into the coffers of the democratic national committee.

In this city Dick Jordan, brother of Conrad M. Jordan, assistant secretary of the treasury, has charge of the assessments. The reason Mr. Jordan has been selected as collector is on account of the influence his brother has with President Cleveland. The office holders know that if they fail to respond, the president will soon hear of their derelictions. One of the office holders has squealed; he is reported as saying that he did not intend to be bled any more. The assessments, he asserted, instead of coming once a month, were now averaging twice a month. He could not pay the percentage and support his family. In consideration of the fact that he has a large family, the "Thumbscrew committee," Chairman Barnum presiding, and Eugine Higgins acting as secretary pro tem. magnanimously agreed to remit two per cent of the amount due. The remission it is thought will pacify him. There are many other office holders who are tired of assessments, but they say they cannot afford to run the risk of discharge through refusing to pay.

A Plucky Boy.

At Manchester, Mass., on the 10th inst., what threatened to be a serious fire occurred at the summer residence of Mr. F. M. Stanwood. At noon a lady residing in the next house to Mr. Stanwood gave the alarm that the roof was on fire. The family were busy with preparations for their return to Boston, but had not yet gone, and Master Eben Blaine Stanwood, aged eleven years, immediately climbed to the ridgepole above the fire, braced himself against the chimney and called to those below to pass water to him in small pails. This was done, and the fire was subdued inside of half an hour—an impending disaster resulting merely in a badly damaged roof, and all owing to the activity and presence of mind of the courageous lad. The fire caught from a spark lodging beneath the shingles.

Haven't Got It Yet.

A Washington despatch of the 11th says: "President Cleveland's veto of the Maddox claim bill yesterday has stirred up the democrats here. The claim long since passed out of the hands of the original claimant, and it so happens that all of the people interested are democrats. It is a motley company of variegated intellect. The list comprises Senator Gorman, Eugene Higgins, State-Senator Raines of New York, who seconded Mr. Cleveland's renomination at St. Louis, Senator Voorhees, Ex-Senator McDonald and several others. There is not a republican in the entire list. The veto has fallen like a bombshell among these gentlemen, who have long been waiting to divide the $300,000 which they thought was awaiting them in the treasury."

A List of Health Suggestions.

The hot pastry and iced drinks of this country have much to do with th. thinness of its people.

Disordered digestion in adults is often the outcome of being compelled or induced to eat rich food in childhood.

Up to middle life most people are careless regarding their physical condition, hence persons who ought to live long lives have their days curtailed. The time to pay strict attention to the bodily health is during the vigorous portion of life.

It is quite a common practise to dose infants with teas, oils and sweetened waters when any real or imaginary ill is upon them. In some cases it is necessary to re-enforce the natural supply of nourishment, but where possible, nature's fount should be relied on chiefly.

For those who hurry to and from their meals soup is recommended as a preparatory agent for the reception of solid food. For a man to hurriedly rush to his meals and gulp down meat, vegetables and pie, without a short pause of rest for the stomach, is nearly akin to suicide.

Toasting bread destroys the yeast germs and converts the starch into a soluble substance which is incapable of fermentation. Dry toast will not sour the stomach nor produce any discomfort, and is, therefore, more agreeable to a weak digestion than any other bread.

A stooping position, maintained for any length of time, tends more to undermine the health than is supposed. An erect position should be observed, whether sitting, standing or lying. To sit with the body leaning forward on the stomach or to one side, with the heels elevated on a level with the hands, is not only in bad taste, but exceedingly detrimental to health; it cramps the stomach, presses the vital organs, interrupts the free motion of the chest and enfeebles the functions of the abdominal and thoracic organs, and, in fact, unbalances the whole muscular system.—Household.

Embroidery in Men's Dress.

It is probable that embroidery will soon play a prominent part in men's dress. Thus far it has only shown itself in connection with dress vests, which are embroidered with a degree of elaboration depending upon the taste and the pocketbook of the wearer. The coming fall will, however, witness the introduction of embroidery upon coats, vests and trousers. Thus far none of these garments have been made up in America, but the material has been made for them, and considerable quantities of West of England cloths have been sent to Paris to be embroidered to the order of leading New York tailors, in patterns for vest, coat and trousers.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Supply of Peanuts.

The supply of peanuts comes almost wholly from Virginia, Tennessee and North Carolina. Virginia is the banner peanut growing state, averaging 2,000,000 bushels yearly. Tennessee comes next with an average of 500,000 bushels, and North Carolina's production averages 150,000 bushels. The estimated supply for 1888 is 3,300,000 bushels, which includes the nearly 600,000 bushels of last year's crop which still remain in the market.—New York Mail and Express.

New Use for Ice.

"I'm going to Maine after a consignment of ice for consumption in Washington," said an avenue dealer to a new reporter nosing around for an item.

"Indeed!" exclaimed the reporter, pulling his notebook, "that's something new. I didn't know before that ice was a remedy for consumption."

The city editor saved the reputation of the paper.—Washington Critic.

The Great Railroad Disaster.

The wreck of a train at Mud Run, Pa., has been cleared away so that trains are running as usual. The total deaths were on the 12th placed at sixty-five, with four others who will probably die. The loss to the Lehigh Valley road will be $1,000,000 or more. The cause of the accident is variously stated, one account being that the engineer of the fifth section of the excursion train got frightened and jumped from his engine, and another that the brakeman of the fourth section did not go back far enough with his warning signal.

Rather An Unpleasant Dilemma.

A New York despatch says that Chairman William H. Barnum of the democratic national committee, alias "Sevenmules Barnum," is somewhat unpleasantly situated. He is afraid that if Connecticut goes republican, President Cleveland, Mr. W. T. Scott and other free traders will accuse Protectionist Barnum of purposely neglecting his business. Personally and privately Mr. Barnum is strongly opposed to the Mills bill and the president's tariff ideas, and had much rather see the republicans carry his state, but publicly he has to sustain the views of the administration.

Oh! ye who teach the ingenious youth of our great nation, let them learn the noble art of self defence, as Salvation Oil is the specific for hurts.

Little Annie yesterday told us, in her way, what a good medicine Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is; it had cured her of a very severe cold.

The republicans carried the municipal election in Chattanooga, Tenn., on the 9th inst., by a full thousand majority.

To any one purchasing a bottle of Constitutional Cough Syrup of me and it does not give satisfaction I will refund the money. David Kimball & Co., No. 36 Market street.

The Boston Globe says that Mr. Blaine in 1868 opposed a tariff duty on lumber. Nothing of the kind. Mr. Blaine did oppose an internal revenue tax on lumber. The tariff duty he has always supported.

Col. Dan. Lamont authorizes the statement that the president will not interfere in the democratic fight in New York. He was ready enough to interfere to secure the election of Fellows, the boodle aldermen's candidate, as county attorney of New York.

There was a $200,000 fire at the Standard Oil Co.'s works at Greenpoint, New York, on the 11th inst. A steamer and three schooners were partially burned. Five firemen were badly burned by an oil explosion, and another had a leg broken.

MARRIED.

NORTON—GALLINGER. In Concord, Oct. 10th, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. C. D. Crane, D. D., Mr. Harry A. Norton and Miss Katharine Chandler Gallinger. Mr. Norton is a son of ex-Mayor Norton of Nashua, and the bride is daughter of Congressman Jacob H. Gallinger of Concord.

TILTON—BLAUVELT. In Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 10th, Carroll Tilton, son of Theodore Tilton, and Miss Marian A. Blauvelt, daughter of F. S. Blauvelt. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Storrs, who took sides with Tilton in the Beecher controversy.

The preidential election will be fought out on the lines laid down months ago. President Cleveland has been accused of having shrunk from the free trade policy he then advocated. The accusation is unjust. * * * President Cleveland is substantially in favor of a financial policy which will impose duties mainly for revenue purposes, will take duties off raw materials, and so widen the market of the American purchaser. These are the aims and this is the policy of the free traders of all countries.—London Saturday Review, Sept. 15th, 1888.

By the breaking down of a grand stand at the pyrotechnic display of "the bombardment of Alexandria," at Quincy, Ill., on the evening of the 10th inst., about 6000 people were piled in a heap among a lot of broken timbers and boards. One man was fatally and several others seriously injured, and 150 or 200 were less badly hurt.

The Chicago street car strikers have commenced playing dynamite on the tracks of the horse railroads, to blow people up. This is a bad move for their side.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

WALDEN'S

JOB PRINTING OFFICE,

ON 7 PLEASANT ST. EXCHANGE BUILDING

For Men Chiefly.

When your collars and cuffs are rough and irritate your flesh, when you find the fine linen eaten away in spots, displaying the coarse filling, this is the cause:—They have been washed with ordinary soap, whose cleansing properties are due to caustic soda and elbow grease; either of these will produce the above, and the starch makes them feel as if you had a saw around your neck. Pyle's Pearline does away with the rubbing, hence it saves all wear and tear in the wash. It is as harmless as the finest imported castile soap. Linens washed with it are perfectly white and last many times as long as washed in the old rubbing, twisting, wrecking way.

Beware

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." It's false—they are not, and besides are dangerous. PEARLINE is never peddled but sold by all good grocers.

Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

CIRCUIT COURT.

On Friday forenoon, the 12th inst., Judge Colt denied the application of plaintiff in the Knibbs valve suits, and ordered judgment for the defendants. The plaintiffs' application was for leave to reopen the suits against Portsmouth and other New Hampshire cities, supposed to have been definitely settled years ago by a jury verdict in favor of Dover, and the written relinquishment by the plaintiffs of all claims against the other cities.

MUSIC HALL.

The first concert of the season by the Boston Symphony Orchestral Club of Boston was given in Association hall in that city on the evening of the 11th inst., and attracted an audience that more than filled the hall. Of the leader and solo violinist, Mr. Willis E. Nowell, formerly of this city, the Herald in its report says:

"Mr. Willis Nowell quite easily led in the evening's honors, and his playing of the 'Faust' fantasie by Sarasate was well calculated to arouse the audience to a full realization of his merits as a violinist. He has the advantage of a magnificent instrument, and he handles it with a degree of skill, taste and technical perfection that gives a great charm to his performance. His tone is singularly broad, rich and full, flawless in purity and rarely sympathetic in its character. His playing of the fantasie showed his masterly abilities at their best, and he richly merited the applause which rewarded his efforts".

The Herald's critique, which is accommendatory of the other members of the club as of Mr. Nowell, closes as follows:

"No organization has ever given greater satisfaction here, and the audience included a fine representation of the best musical circles of this vicinity."

It is this organization which is to give a concert in Music hall next Thursday evening, in aid of the yellow fever sufferers of the south.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. David D. Bagder of Newington, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Annie Badger, leaves on Monday for Greely, Col., to pass the winter there with Mrs. Badger's son, Fred Badger, formerly of this city, now a farmer in comfortable circumstances at Greeley.

Mrs. Lucius A. Bigelow of Boston is visiting Mrs. Elias Tarlton at Newcastle, Mrs. Bigelow proposes to sail for Europe on the 24th inst.

Mr. William Grovener, son of Rev. Francis Grovener of Kennebunk, formerly of Kittery, is visiting friends in the latter town for a few days.

Hon. Wm. H. Gale of Brooklyn, N. Y., and others, will speak on the political issues of the campaign in Music hall on Monday evening, Oct. 15th, from the republican standpoint. Music will be furnished by the Portsmouth band, and the public are cordially invited. The doors will be opened at seven o'clock, and speaking will commence promptly at eight.

A few teaspoonfulls of Preston's Cologne added to the bath, renders it delightfully refreshing.

John Kelly, late a seaman of the U. S. S. Portsmouth, had his skull fractured by a fall in Boston on the night of the 10th inst., and died next day. He was buried in the seamen's lot at the Chelsea hospital grounds. He was aged fifty-six years, and had been in the service forty-one years.

Under the heading "Loafers, move on," the Times of the 12th inst. says: "Corner and curbstone loafing on Congress street during the evening is getting to be an altogether too common a nuisance, and should be stopped. One of the principal loafing places is at the junction of Vaughan street, and to avoid the gaping crowds there, whose language is none of the most refined, decent people are forced to cross to the other side of the street rather than run the gauntlet of the bummers. Cannot something be done to stop this nuisance?"

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

Mrs. David Welch, who lives at the Plains, on Friday received notice that she had been granted a pension of $12 a month, with about $2400 of arrears. Her son, Richard Welch, enlisted in the 11th New Hampshire regiment of volunteers, and after serving two years was transferred to the navy; while at the Norfolk navy yard, being then attached to an ironclad, he fell overboard and was drowned.

The very valuable horse "Remember," owned by Dr. Ed. S. Fay, while exercising in his stable yard on Thursday afternoon broke one of his fore legs below the knee. The animal, which was one of the finest in the city, and for which Dr. Fay had refused $900 or $1000 within a week, was shot that evening.

The ladies of Storer Post Relief Corps, No. 1, will give a literary entertainment and hot supper in Grand Army hall on Tuesday evening of next week, for the benefit fund of the G. A. R. Tickets to the entertainment, including supper, adults, twenty cents; children under twelve years of age, fifteen cents. We hope our citizens will patronize the entertainment liberally, as this organization of ladies is doing a vast deal of good in the community.

In some of the shops of the various departments of the navy yard, some of the skilled workmen are standing around with folded arms, when they are around at all; it is understood that there will be a discharge there in a few days, on account of the niggardliness of the United States senate in refusing to grant sums for mercenary voting under the disguise of naval appropriations. The discharged men would best stop in Portsmouth, and enjoy some of the democratic corruption fund which is reported to be ready for distribution at the proper time—election day. V.

We notice an exhibit of Peirce's patent artificial stone at Mr. Treat's marble works on Vaughan street. This stone has met with great favor in the west and south, where it is extensively used; it is made to represent any desired kind of stone, and so perfectly that it can hardly be told from the natural rock which it represents, while in durability it is equal if not superior to anything known. We understand that the specimens shown were made some years since, and that the company are now making an article far superior to their former productions.

A Washington letter of the 12th inst. says the Kittery Point postoffice has been designated as a money order office.

Mr. U. Austin Caine, telegraph operator at Kennebunk Depot, and correspondent of the Biddeford Journal from that town, has been in Kittery and vicinity for the past two weeks, on a vacation trip, with which he has combined business to a degree, by canvassing, collecting and picking up items for the paper named. Mr. Caine is one of the leading Good Templars of Maine, and was for many years district secretary of York District Lodge. He visited Morrill Lodge of North Kittery on Friday evening, the 5th inst., and made some interesting remarks.

There is to be a grand concert in the Congregational church at Eliot on Friday evening, Oct. 19th, in aid of the church. Music and reading by the ladies of the Clifford quartette, from Massachusetts; ice cream and cake will be served in the vestry during the evening.

A gang of men under direction of Mr. Joseph R. Holmes are putting in a sea wall at the Lower Foreside in Kittery, at the old Whipple place, now the Harrison Philbrick place. The object of the wall is to prevent the river from encroaching upon the large and handsome tomb which Mr. Philbrick had constructed shortly before his decease.

A large red oak tree, about two feet in diameter, on the old road in North Kittery, back of Isaac Martin's residence, was struck by ligatning during one of the thunder storms last summer, had every atom of bark stripped from its trunk below the branches, was split into four pieces, and turned as black as a well-kept stove-pipe. It is hardly necessary to add that the tree is dead.

The town of Kittery is widening and improving the old road from Kittery to Eliot Neck; it has been widened a rod, and the town has allowed fifty dollars for land damages, which has been accepted. The road has been almost—sometimes wholly impassable every winter, from snow blockades, and it is believed that the widening will to a considerable extent obviate this trouble. Messrs. Joseph Remick and Levi Brooks are in charge of the work. The county commissioners and town officers are expected to lay out the new roadbed next week.

Mr. William Raynes, living on the Raynes road, so called, between York village and Raynes' neck, has declined an offer of $4000 for his farm.

The annual meeting the Eliot Library Association will be held in the town hall at Eliot on Tuesday evening, Oct. 16th. A full attendance of members is desired.

It is reported that Mr. Albert Wilson, an extensive farmer of Kittery, still has fifty acres of first-crop grass to cut. We should think it would be hay by this time. Mr. Wilson has a large quantity of potatoes and apples yet to harvest. The execrable weather this season is responsible for the backwardness of the work, and Mr. Wilson may consider himself lucky in having been able to get in what portion of his crop he has already housed.

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

This powder never varies. A marvel of purity trength and wholesomeness. More economical han the ordinary kinds, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low test, short weight, alum or phosphate powders. Sold only in cans. ROYAL BAKING POWDER CO., 106 Wall Street, New York.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales and no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Is Peculiar to Itself

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food. It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TRUST COMPANY,

Manchester, N. H.

CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

The Wonderful "Toddy Palm."

"When I was down in Washington the other day," remarked a western politician at the St. James, "they showed me a wonderful Indian palm in the botanical gardens. They call it the caryota ureus, and it cuts a bigger figure in the world as an intoxicant than all the distilleries of the United States. Just in proportion as the followers of Brahma and Buddha in India are far more numerous than the Christian population of the United States, in the same proportion does that palm tree surpass all our appliances for making an intoxicant. It is a beautiful tree, with a trunk something over a foot in diameter, grows to the height of about sixty feet, and is surmounted by an elegant crown of gracefully curved leaves. The flower spikes are ten or twelve feet long, and issue from the trunk at the base of the leaves, hanging down like a horse's tail. They are not produced till the tree has arrived at its full period of growth, and the manner in which the numerous spikes succeed each other is rather singular. The first spike issues from the top of the tree, and after it has done flowering another comes out below it, and so on, a flower spike being produced from the angle of each leaf stalk, or from the circular scar left by leaves that have fallen away from the trunk, until the process of flowering reaches the ground, when the tree is exhausted and dies.

"The English in India gave it the name of toddy palm because they traced a kinship between their old home toddy and the juice of the tree. The natives work it in this fashion: When the spikes are in the bud they cut them off, and the sap that would have flowed into the bud is caught by them in a gourd and used as a liquor. It's very powerful and produces a fine crop of delirium tremens in India. They expect this oriental distillery to flower some time this fall. Yes, it's the only toddy palm in this country."—New York Evening Sun.

Pure Drinking Water.

Many cities have adopted, or are now introducing, artificial filtration, and it is to be hoped that some terrible epidemic visitation will not be necessary to impress our authorities with the necessity for some action on their part. Pending such action, the following general directions, if given publicity and insisted upon, may be the means of saving many lives. Drink no water that has not been previously boiled. Do not put ice into the water unless it is known to be pure, for the ice may contain as many disease germs as the water. The water should only be allowed to come to a boil when it should be removed from the fire, for otherwise you will expel the oxygen, which gives it an unpleasant taste. After boiling it should be placed in a stone jar and covered over; when sufficiently cool it should be decanted into bottles and then put on ice. It is best to boil sufficient water each morning to last during the day. If possible to avoid it, do not use water that has come from a tank on top of the house, which is often a very hot bed of disease; far better to go to the basement or yard, if you cannot otherwise get a direct flow from the main.

If you have one of the many filtering water coolers that are on sale as every housefurnishing store, throw it away, but before doing so break it to pieces that some other unfortunate does not get hold of it. Such devices, unless provision is made for the entire removal and washing of all the filtering material and unless such operation is carried out every day, are filthy incubators for the propagation of bacteria.—Cor. New York Tribune.

The Use of Snakes.

Persons who dislike snakes continually ask: "What is the use of them?" That they are not without use will, I hope, appear in the course of this work, were it necessary to preach that all things have their use. But in no belief that offended Lord Bacon, namely, of "going on their belly," lies one of their greatest uses, because that, together with their internal formation and external covering, enables them to penetrate where no larger carnivorous animal could venture, into dark and noisome morasses, bog jungles, swamps, amid the vegetation of the tropics, where swarms of the lesser reptiles, on which so many of them feed, wouth otherwise outbalance the harmony of nature, die and produce pestilence. Wondrously and exquisitely constructed for their habit, they are able to exist where the higher animals could not, and while they help to clear those inaccessible places of the lesser vermin, they themselves supply food for a number of smaller mammalia, which, with many carnivorous birds, devour vast numbers of young snakes. The hedgehog, weasel, ichneumon, rat, peccary, hog, goat, and an immense number of birds keep snakes within due limits, while the latter perform their part among the grain devouring and herbivorous creatures. Thus beautifully is the balance of nature maintained.—New Orleans Picayune.

Disagreeable Paris Hotels.

Another disagreeable thing about Paris is that many of the hotels are at least fifty years behind the times. The damp wind enters through numberless cracks in the ill fitting windows and doors; the fireplaces are the kind which waste nine-tenths of the heat; there are no bathrooms, no arrangements for hot and cold water, no proper plumbing, no gas, no carpets except in the middle of the waxed floors, no call bells, speaking tubes, telephones, and a thousand other things which have long been thought a necessity in America, and even in London. Why, with all its magnificence, the Hotel Continental, and others equally luxurious, has no other means of lighting the bedrooms except by candles, and to make an elaborate toilet by the aid of one of these flaring, smoking, grease dispersing antiquities is not the easiest performance in the world.—Mrs. Frank Leslie's Letter.

A Debt of Gratitude.

Gratitude that takes the form of dollars and cents is generally well liked by the recipient. If so, Private Heath, of the Fifth cavalry, should feel repaid for a gallant deed he did eleven years ago in the Sioux war. In that campaign he rescued the captain of his company, who was wounded, from falling into the hands of the Indians, at the great risk of his own life. Now Capt. Price is looking him up to give him a deed to a Kansas farm worth $9,000.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. Vigor and Vitality
Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

BILIOUSNESS.
THIS very common complaint, which is caused by a dormant or inactive liver, can be cured in a short time by using Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, as can also the various diseases arising from inactive liver or kidneys. These organs, if inactive, will allow impure blood to enter the heart, causing tightness about that organ and palpitation.
She suffered thirty years.
Mrs. DUDLEY CHANDLER, of Melrose, Mass., says: "I had suffered with Palpitation of the Heart more than thirty years before I found anything to give me essential relief. Last fall I tried Ingalls' Mandrake Compound, and, remarkable as it was, this Compound relieved me in two days, so that for several months afterwards I felt not the slightest touch of it, and am perfectly free from it now. Sometimes, before I took this Compound, the pulsations of my heart were so violent as to shake my whole body with rapid agitations, and at times I fainted and became entirely insensible. Now I am perfectly free from all this suffering. Consequently I can most sincerely and earnestly recommend this Compound to all like sufferers, as pre-eminently the best medicine I ever knew for Palpitation of the Heart."
Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is sold by all Druggists. Price $1; six bottles for $5. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

A leading chemist of New York says: "No plasters of such merit as the Ath-lo-pho-ros Plasters have ever before been produced." They are a novelty because they are not made simply to sell cheap, they are the best that science, skill and money can produce, and will do what is claimed for them. For sprains, aches, weakness, lameness, etc., they are unequaled.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H. oct29

The presidential election will be fought out on the lines laid down months ago. President Cleveland has been accused of having shrunk from the free trade policy he then advocated. The accusation is unjust. * * * President Cleveland is substantially in favor of a financial policy which will impose duties mainly for revenue purposes, will take duties off raw materials, and so widen the market of the American purchaser. These are the aims and this is the policy of the free traders of all countries.—London Saturday Review, Sept. 15th, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Double Help for the Bilious.

In addition to that chief remedial measure—the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—persons suffering from an acute bilious attack, will facilitate recovery by the use at first of milk and lime water and thin gruels, and by a very gradual return to the use of solid foods. Fatty substances should be excluded from the diet. Blue pill is a remedy of doubtful safety, particularly if there be nausea and vomiting, frequent concomitants of liver trouble. The bitters, provided its reformatory action be not retarded and marred by gross indiscretions in diet, will soon restore the equilibrium of and action of the liver, stomach and bowels, all these disordered by billiousness. In all forms of malarial disease, which in every one of its phases presents indications of liver trouble, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the foremost of specifics. The light of over thirty years' experience also shows it to be a fine remedy for rheumatism, kidney troubles, dyspepsia, nervousness and debility.

Persons prematurely gray can have their hair restored to its youthful beauty, by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best article in the market.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

Every wife and mother in the country should know the great value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as a blood purifier. It gives tone, health, and strength, to the vital organs, corrects all irregularities, and expels impurities from the system. Young and old use it. Price $1.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C Calhoun.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

INSECT TORMENTS OF BRAZIL.

Creeping Pests Which Lodge Under the Skin and Must Be Cut Out.

Insects in all countries often possess an extensive power of annoyance greatly in contrast with their diminutive size. They appear to combine the maximum of effect with the minimum of effort in a very scientific fashion. Brazil is specially favored with parasitic torments, and even if those who are to the manner born become case hardened, the traveler from climes where insect life is less offensive in its attacks can never be wholly reconciled to his lot. Even the most generous of Christians harbors a revengeful spirit against his bloodthirsty but minute assailants, which are at once puny and powerful.

Take the bush tick, for example. Of this diminutive monster there are three species, of which the largest is about three-quarters of an inch in diameter. We are told that this insect was known to the ancients, but it is very unlikely that they enjoyed its acquaintance. There are three varieties: Ixodes ricinus, Ixodes plumbeus and Ixodes reticulatus. The Latin name was derived from its supposed resemblance to the ripe bean of the Palma Christi. The Brazilian name is carrapato, and when examined under a magnifying glass it is seen to be furnished with a weapon of offense in the form of a trident of teeth, which are serrated inward. It has also three pairs of legs, and each leg is provided with strong hooked claws. Enormous quantities of the eggs are laid upon the ground, and the young ones as they creep out climb up the plants and catch at any passing animal which brushes past, and fatten on it.

When Mr. H. W. Bates was in the highlands of Brazil, he had to devote an hour at the end of his daily rambles to picking off the carrapatos that clung to him by their incisive fangs. The infliction is so dreadful that horses and cattle sometimes die from the exhaustion caused by the bites of these creatures, which settle in swarms. The traveler soon has the appearance of a person suffering from shingles. Sometimes the attacks bring on ricinian fever, just as in Russia people may suffer from pulicious fever. The rainy season kills many of the carrapatos, and they also fall a prey to the birds; and the ciriema, in particular, is never shot by the natives, because they know the value of its services in thinning the ranks of the multitudinous blood sucking Ixodes.

Another insect torment of Brazil is the jigger, or Pulex irritans, Pulex subintrans, Pulex minimus, pulex Penetrans. These interesting creatures make their home chiefly in the human foot, and hence are known to the Brazilians as bichos de pe (foot beasts). Mr. H. C. Dent had five of these unwelcome guests from January to June, and they took up their abode in the following localities: The first on the right big toe, second on the right heel, third on the left heel and two under the sole of the left foot. He had to cut them out.

Still worse are the verne, which attack indifferently cattle and human beings. With animals they appear to raise a large, hard lump, so that they probably reside in the skin, after the fashion of the ox warble. Sir Richard Burton says that stories are current of negroes losing their lives from the berno. The grub is deposited in the nose and other parts of the body, and if squeezed to death instead of extracted, it festers and produces serious consequences. Children three months old may suffer from a visitation of the berno. Some of the natives, in the case of adults, apply a burning stick to the wound in order to destroy the worm. Mercurial ointment is also used. Mr. Dent's dog was one mass of sores from the bernos and bichos de pe, and it was pitiable to see him, when running about, turn round almost every minute and, with a pitiful whine, bite his wounds until they were raw. Such are some of the pleasures of the insect world of Brazil.—New York Star.

Destroyed by Bad Boys.

No one but a builder can realize what annoyance and loss he is compelled to endure from the depredations of mischievous boys. No sooner is the foundation for a building laid than the trouble begins. When the workmen leave the place then the boys take possession. They begin by throwing stones, sticks and everything they can get hold of into the mortar beds, sometimes entirely ruining them by shoveling in all the surplus sand and refuse that are left near the mortar vat. They break and otherwise destroy the finely finished bricks that are used in the fronts of residences, break up slate, carry away laths and do all sorts of devilish things.

When the house is nearly completed it is then the mischievous boy does his worst acts of vandalism. When the plastering is fresh on the walls it is his delight to take a stick and scratch and mar the fresh plaster as much as possible. Nothing pleases these boys more than to make rude figures and scratch names and initials in deep lines on the smooth surface of the freshly plastered walls. The loss to builders in St. Louis every year by the depredations of young hoodlums is simply inestimable. It is almost impossible to find out the guilty parties, and the builder has to bear his losses and annoyances with as good grace as possible.—William Cochran in Globe-Democrat.

Different Kinds of Courage.

Illustrative of the different kinds of courage observable in different races, Lord Wolseley tells us that at the storming of Lucknow our troops found themselves in presence of a gate house, from the upper stories of which a severe fire was kept up on them. The only access to the upper stories was by some very narrow winding staircases, hardly admitting one man at a time. The English soldiers shrank for a moment from what seemed certain death. But the Sikhs rushed in, went up the staircases without a moment's hesitation, and in five minutes had thrown every rebel out of the windows. Yet the Sikhs would not have stood up man to man against English infantry. There is also the courage peculiar to certain individuals and certain races which arises from contempt for death and the belief that it only leads to a better and happier life. This was Gordon's courage. This was the courage of the Ironsides. And this is the courage of the Turks.—London Standard.

From Top to Bottom.

A representative American thinker lately said to me, that, contrasting the operation of Anglo-Saxon institutions in England with those in America, the most important result, in his opinion, with which we may credit ourselves on this continent is the facility of individual movement from the bottom to the top of the social scale. This is a broad, patent fact, which underlies and largely causes that hopeful energy which permeates even the lower strata of society in America, and forms a striking contrast to the social inertia and consequent mental inactivity of the lower classes of England.

I think, however, that we are bound to qualify our satisfaction on this point by the equally manifest fact that the facility of descent from the top to the bottom of the same social scale is infinitely greater in America than in England. Taking our society as a whole, there is comparatively little conservation of force and culture along family lines. The weakening influences of wealth and high social position on the young have no adequate corrective. The ruling names in the society or politics of one generation seldom repeat themselves in the next. Each generation has to hew its best class out of rough material taken from beneath. Now, success in life which fails to transmit as an inheritance force or culture or superiority of some kind has failed in that point which makes success most of all desirable. Society itself is an immense loser where the results of success end with the individual. It is a national calamity when the grand advantages given by wealth for attaining personal excellence are thrown away.—George R. Parkin in The Century.

The Swell of Paris.

The swell in Paris does not need a title, though his blood must not be too recently mixed up with trade. He must, above all other things, possess an agreeable and taking manner, sharpened by wit and cleverness. The French laugh at the solemnity and stupidity of Englishmen of high social pretensions, and fail to understand how any man can succeed in society or in club life whose main object seems to be to render himself as disagreeable as possible to the people whom he meets. The popularity of the Parisian river depends almost entirely upon his jollity of manner and brilliancy of talk. He invariably has some pursuit. He is a capital swordsman, rides skillfully, writes or dabbles in some of the arts—but whatever he does is well done.

His life is one that would kill an Anglo-Saxon. He breakfasts at 2 in the afternoon, dines at 8 and sups at 2 in the morning. The one pursuit in life which engages all of his energies is the chase for the favor of the woman who happens to have Paris by the ears for the moment, and he invariably runs several establishments, devoting a portion of his time with punctilious politeness to his wife and children. He plays bezique and baccarat with a nerve that would make a Mississippi gambler blush, and looks 60 years old before he has passed his 35th year.—Blakely Hall's Letter.

In a Human Hair Market.

There is a human hair market at Morlans, in the department of the Lower Pyrenees. It is little known, except perhaps in Paris, where it has a high reputation. The market is held every other Friday. Hundreds of trafficking hair dressers throng to the little place from far and near to buy up the hair of the young peasant girls. The dealers wander up and down the long narrow street of the town, each with a huge pair of bright shears hanging from a black leather strap around his waist, while the young girls who wish to part with their hair stand about in the doorways, usually in couples.

The transaction is carried on in the best room of the house. The hair is let down, the tresses combed out and the dealer names the price. This varies from three to twenty francs. If a bargain is struck the dealer lays the money in the open palm of the seller, applies his shears, and in a minute the long tresses fall on the floor. The purchaser rolls up the tresses, places them in paper and thrusts them into his pocket. Of course a maiden can rarely see her fallen tresses disappear into the dealer's pocket without crying. But she consoles herself with the thought that it will grow again and by looking at the money in her hand.—Emile Nouveau in Philadelphia Times.

The Tailless Manx Cat.

These tailless cats, by the way, merit a paragraph by themselves. The Listener is not aware whether they raise a special breed of these creatures in Vermont, but would not be surprised if they did. Vermont has a way of improving upon whatever animals she imports from abroad, and getting up superior breeds of everything, from human beings down through Morgan horses, Holstein cattle, merino sheep and shepherd dogs to (no doubt) tailless cats. The tailless cat is supposed to have originated in the Isle of Man, but if The Listener is not mistaken, he has also heard them called Cornish cats. The two individuals just referred to are in color something between a tortoise shell and a maltese. One has a sort of rudimentary stump tail, like a rabbit's, and the other has not so much as the vestige of a tail. Both have a marked resemblance in the hinder parts to the rabbit, and when they run it is with a series of bounds like a rabbit. One would say that the Manx cat and the rabbit were at least distantly related. They are queer birds, take them altogether.—Boston Transcript "Listener."

Time the Bath Takes.

How long does it take to use the morning "tub?" Mr. Chadwick says twenty minutes, which is surely an excessive estimate. But for those who want to save time over the operation, here is the latest hint of sanitary science: "A French colonel ascertained that he could wash his men with tepid water for a centime, or one-tenth of a penny per head, soap included. The man undresses, steps into a tray of tepid water, soaps himself, when a jet from a two handed pump plays upon him tepid water, and he dries and dresses himself in five minutes, against twenty minutes in the bath, and with five gallons of water against some seventy in the usual bath."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Blaine on Trusts.

When Hon. James G. Blaine, in a speech made at Portland some weeks ago, referred to the difficulty of the national government dealing with "trusts," they being combinations of individuals or corporations, and keeping always carefully within the line of the statutes as existing, the democratic press and orators proceeded to set up a grand howl about Blaine and the republican party being in favor of trusts; and this, too, in face of the fact that Mr. Blaine had merely stated the case exactly as it had been previously stated to Congress in the report of the democratic chairman — southern democratic at that — of the democratic committee of the democratic house of representatives appointed to investigate the trusts, and report as to what the national government could do in the premises.

Mr. Blaine, however, is not a man who is afraid to take the bull by the horns, and in one of his speeches in Indiana last week he again referred to trusts; and it is safe to assert that however much noise the democratic organs may make about that speech, none of them will print it in full, or that part of it which related to trusts. The sugar trust's manager and ruler, Mr. Havemeyer, is one of the heaviest contributors to the democratic fund, and had such influence with the Mills committee when they were getting up their dark-lantern assault upon protection, as to induce them to so alter their proposed schedule on sugar so that if the bill should go into effect it would put $6,000,000 annually into the pockets of the sugar trust, without taking off one farthing from the "poor man's sugar." The chief of the salt trust is the democratic candidate now running for governor of Michigan. The organizer and head of the cotton-bagging trust which has so stirred up the southern planters, declared himself before the congressional committee to be a democrat and a free trader, and that all his associates were democrats. The cotton-seed oil trust is also composed wholly of southern democrats. The whiskey trust has for years been, and now is, one of the most liberal-handed contributors to democratic campaign funds in nation and states. And the Standard Oil trust is manipulated by a millionaire democrat who occupies a seat in the national senate chamber. And Mr. Blaine might have added, but did not, that the latter-named trust is represented in the Reform cabinet of the democratic president of the United States.

At the close of his brief remarks concerning trusts, Mr. Blaine said that if any democrat could point out a single trust managed by republicans of political influence, or which essayed as an organization to exert political influence in favor of the republican party, he would be glad to have it pointed out, either right there in the meeting or in the papers. It hasn't yet been done.

[Special to the Chronicle.]

Would Like a Little More Boodle.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12th.—The strait to which the democratic national committee is reduced is well illustrated by its official announcement to-day: "The campaign fund at democratic national headquarters is well nigh exhausted. Hundreds of contributions came in daily, but they are so small that their aggregate covers but a small part of the expenses, and as a consequence Captain McClelland, secretary of the committee, says that certain plans for the closing days of the canvass must be abandoned. A second appeal to the people is contemplated. This is the only source from which the sinews of war can be drawn, as democratic office-holders are contributing almost nothing, and no checks come from them will be useless.

Judging from the above despatch, we should suppose that the sugar trust, the salt trust, the whiskey trust, the cotton-seed oil trust and the Standard Oil trust, have got tired of contributing money to a cause in aid of which "no checks come from manufacturers."

The Voice of Niagara.

In an article on Niagara Falls, an evening paper observes, ament the mighty roar of its waters: One can never forget the effect of listening to this mighty voice for the first time, nor is it an unpleasant sound which assails the ear. The roar is positively musical, they say, and a few years ago a distinguished American organist spent a long time in studying it, and trying to learn the measure and compass of its tones. He finally came to the conclusion that the deepest tone made by the falling cataract was that which would be produced by an organ pipe about 160 feet in length, and of proportionate dimensions as organ pipes are made. Now, 160 feet, which is about the height of the falls (this varies from 160 feet to nearly 180 feet), is much longer than any organ pipe is made, and the sound emitted by such a pipe would not be sensible to us as a musical sound. Therefore our ears could not apprehend the music of the deepest tones; and as our ears are at fault, we give this deep tones music which discordant epithets as noise and roar.

This story, according to one account, seems incorrectly stated. The organist in question suggested a sound not nearly three octaves below thirty-two feet C, but about F sharp below that note. The present writer tried to define the vast harmonic hum of the great waterfalls, and came to the conclusion that the task was all but hopeless, although a steady kind of tone seems to be maintained, and certainly the imagination might readily seize upon such a note as the authority in question named, but whether the indefinite sound could be described as of foundation or upper partial tone character it would be altogether impossible to say.—London Musical World.

Unusual Storage of Life.

From the facts at our command, there is evidence that individual storage of life may be far greater than the vast majority of people either expect or hope for. The mean duration of life in England may be taken at 41 years. But we have instances upon instances in which this storage of life is doubled, and some in which it is trebled. I recently had, in the consulting room, at the same time, three gentlemen, whose united ages reached the total of 262 years, or over 87 years each, and each with a fair promise of from four to five years of life at least. I also, within the present quarter, saw, on the same day, two gentlemen, whose united ages gave 186 years, or an average of 93 years each. I have seen, and carefully examined physically, a woman who had attained the age of 105 years, and who lived afterward for three or four years; and I once conducted an autopsy of a man who had passed his 93d year.

There was nothing in the social condition of the individuals concerned that could of itself account for such an unusual storage of life as that which they presented. Two of those specially referred to were men of the highest class of mental power; the other has come down from one of the oldest of the noble families of Europe; a fourth has fought his own way from the lowest position to one of affluence and power; while the oldest of all was, from first to last, in abject poverty and was in a workhouse. —Dr. Benjamin Ward Richardson.

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reestablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go th ough the summer."

National League games, Oct. 12th: Washington 3, Detroit 1. No other games played.

The league season closed Saturday, the games being as follows: Boston 5, Pittsburg 1; Boston 3, Pittsburg 3; Indianapolis 6, New York 4; Detroit 7, Washington 4; Philadelphia 9, Chicago 0,—game defaulted. This leaves New York at the head of the list, and Boston fourth, just enough ahead of Detroit to be ahead, and that is all. The Boston base ballists are not at all pleased at the showing made by their club this season.

Friday evening made a straight nomination for mayor, Mr. Joel B. Erhardt, and the fight will now be a three-cornered one, with the County democracy, who are for Hewitt, and the Tammany braves, who are for Hugh J. Grant, ready to trade off the national ticket to strengthen their individual mayoralty tickets. The World is venomous against Hewitt; the Sun champions Hewitt, but anathematizes "the mugwump crowd," who also support Hewitt, but oppose Hill for governor, whom the Sun supports. It is a very pretty quarrel as it stands—for the republicans.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating Sick Headache Heart-burn Sour Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

REPUBLICAN RALLY TO-NIGHT.

There will be a republican rally in Music hall this evening, when Cyrus A. Sulloway, Esq., and others, will present the political issues of the present campaign as viewed from the republican standpoint. Mr. Sulloway is said to be one of the most dashing and interesting orators on the stump in New Hampshire, and very apt to call things by their right names; nobody will go to sleep while he is speaking. The Portsmouth band will furnish music. All are invited.

The Harrison veterans and all those who voted for General Harrison in 1840, now residing in this vicinity, are requested to meet at the Republican headquarters on Congress street this (Monday) evening at seven o'clock, to be escorted to Music hall stage. PER ORDER.

REPUBLICAN MARCHING COMPANY.

Many of the young voters employed at the Portsmouth Shoe factory met at Republican headquarters on Saturday evening, organized a marching club and elected officers as follows:

Captain, G. A. Brown;
First lieutenant, W. B. Mitchell;
Second lieutenant, A. W. Blaisdell.

The uniform adopted consists of ordinary apparel with linen dusters and tall white hats, each member to carry a cane.

It was voted to parade on Monday evening, the 15th, to the Rockingham house, from which to escort the speakers to Music hall and receive visiting delegations as they arrive, the republican club loaning the services of the Portsmouth band.

It is hoped the "Mother Hubbards" of 1884 may join in doing escort duty.

The company are to meet at headquarters this (Monday) evening at 7:15 o'clock.

POLICE COURT—BATCHELDER J.

SATURDAY, Oct. 13th.

Charles Eaton and Frank Fowler, of Seabrook, were brought to this city on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. The complaints were pros'd and the prisoners discharged.

Frank Fowler, charged with criminally assaulting Nancy Fowler of Seabrook, a girl under ten years of age, had his case continued to Monday afternoon, the 15th, at three o'clock, and was held until that time without bail.

HAS NOT "BACKED DOWN."

There should not be too much reliance placed upon the despatches circulated by the Associated Press in New Hampshire, as that trust is under democratic control. One day last week a high-sounding despatch was sent out announcing that A. P. Davis of Warner had backed out from a proposition for joint discussion with W. Channing Harriman, Esq., formerly of this city and at one time solicitor of Rockingham county by virtue of republican votes, but now a democrat, and that Mr. Davis makes "a square admission of inability to cope" with the new recruit's "logic and array of facts." Since Channing has found rest in the bosom of the democracy, the adjectives employed by the party managers and papers to describe the Harriman family have changed somewhat. Mr. Davis pronounces the report that he is afraid to discuss the situation with Master Walter as entirely untrue; indeed, he describes the author of the falsehood in language terse and in its import unmistakable—as plain as that which the late Gen. Walter Harriman was wont to use when speaking of the democratic party during and immediately after the war.

PERSONAL.

Capt. Daniel W. Marden and wife, of Kittery, start this week for an extended visit to San Francisco, Cal.

Mr. B. A. Burns, for some time past the assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. for the Dover district, which includes this city and vicinity, has been transferred to Portland district, Me., to a similar position, going there this morning. The agents in this district, including Messrs. Wm. H. Fields, Wm. H. Snell and Thomas Taylor of this city, assembled in Dover on Saturday evening, and presented Mr. Burns with a handsome gold-headed cane.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The training ships Saratoga and Portsmouth, at this navy yard, went out of commission on the 8th inst. They had been out of active service, and out of water, for several weeks prior to that date.

The U. S. S. Constellation will be towed down river from the navy yard this morning by the yard tug Leyden, and sail for Newport, R. I., with the naval apprentices from the Portsmouth and Saratoga, provided the weather is favorable.

Carpenter Henry R. Philbrick is detached from the Portsmouth navy yard, and placed on waiting orders. Carpenter Nathan H. Junkins is ordered to the Portsmouth yard.

Mrs. Moore, wife of Chief Engr. John W. Moore, U. S. N., on Saturday night, Sept. 29th, gave a reception and dancing party at the engineer's quarters at the Mare island navy yard, in honor of the Misses Graham, daughters of Lieut. Col. W. M. Graham, U. S. A., commanding the Presidio, Cal., who were visiting Mrs. Belknap, wife of Commodore George E. Belknap, commandant of the yard.

Lieut. Kossuth Niles, U. S. N., inspector of ordnance at the Midvale iron works, was in New York last week. Lieut. Comdr. W. W. Rhoades, U. S. N., and wife, are passing a few days with friends in Philadelphia. Both these officers are well known here, having previously been stationed at this navy yard.

MARITIME NOTES.

Among the charters reported last week was one schooner from Norfolk, Va., for this port, with 700 tons coal at $1.25 per tons. From Norfolk to Boston coal rates were quoted at $1.15.

It was rumored in Washington on the 13th inst. that the navy department had received advices that the U. S. S. Tallapoosa, on the South Atlantic station, had been ashore on the coast of Brazil, and got off with the aid of a Brazilian man-of-war, badly injured.

Herring are reported as very plentiful off this harbor just now, the small boats getting from five to twenty barrels each per day in their nets, most of them being sold to E. Newton & Co. of Commercial wharf. The same firm have bought of Messrs. Mitchell, Tobey & Co., of Kittery, about 500 barrels of herring which are in the weir at Pocahontas point, and which are being brought to Herbert's wharf, where they are salted.

The ladies of Storer Post Relief Corps, No. 1, will give a literary entertainment and hot supper in Grand Army hall on Tuesday evening of next week, for the benefit fund of the G. A. R. Tickets to the entertainment, including supper, adults, twenty cents; children under twelve years of age, fifteen cents. We hope our citizens will patronize the entertainment liberally, as this organization of ladies is doing a vast deal of good in the community.

A few teaspoonfuls of Preston's Cologne added to the bath, renders it delightfully refreshing.

Col. James S. Peirce of this city has successfully organized companies for the enterprises in New York, Brooklyn and Detroit. He says that one of the best places he has ever seen for the manufacture, having plenty of room and an inexhaustible supply of "free raw material," is in the vicinity of Wallis' sands, Rye beach.

We would advise all to have a rubber water-bottle in the house, as it is more handy to use than a stone jug filled with hot water, and is always useful. W. D. Grace, druggist, is offering some of the different sizes at very low prices.

Flakes of snow fell on Sunday morning for an hour or so, at intervals, but the whole fall amounted to nothing, not even to making the streets any more muddy than they were, that being impossible.

Ladies are invited to attend the fall and winter opening of Trimmed Hats and Bonnets at Mrs. Tebbetts' on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 16th and 17th insts.

MUSIC HALL.

"Ruddygore," Gilbert and Sullivan's popular two-act comic opera, will receive its initial presentation at Music hall on Friday evening, Oct. 19th, being sung by the famous Stetson Opera Co. from the Globe theatre, Boston. This opera will be cast with the full strength of Stetson's company. The favorite artistes Helen Lamont, Alice Carle, Mabella Baker, Signor Brocolini, James Gilbert, N. F. Burnham and other accomplished vocalists, sustain the principal characters, while the chorus of over thirty fresh young voices is the best talent obtainable. The company brings its own scenery and appointments, and an augmented orchestra.

Blaine At Indianapolis.

Gen. Benjamin Harrison and Hon. James G. Blaine were in Indianapolis together on Friday last, and the republican demonstration on the occasion was one of the greatest ever held in Indiana. More than 60,000 visitors were attracted to the city, and there was a procession of campaign companies comprising about 12,000 men, and taking an hour and a half of steady marching to pass the reviewing stand. Mr. Blaine in the evening addressed a throng which crowded to suffocation the largest hall in the city, and thousands were unable to get into the building.

The Yellow Fever.

The pestilence is evidently dying out in Jacksonville. On the 11th the weather was clear, cool and bracing. Reported, forty-seven new cases, twelve of the patients being whites, and two deaths; total cases to date, 3429; total deaths, 304. The disease has so decreased that there are now more nurses than are needed, but they cannot be sent home, as neither Louisiana, Texas, Alabama nor Mississippi will receive them until after the frost has come.

In Jacksonville, 12th, new cases sixty-six, (nineteen whites,) and four deaths. There were rumors of a sad state of affairs at South Jacksonville, on account of an alleged attempt to conceal cases of fever; there being no resident doctor there, the Jacksonville committee of health will investigate. At Fernandina on the 12th there were fifteen new cases, two of them white, a mother and child; money and provisions were greatly needed at that point.

A despatch of the 12th from Jackson, Miss, said: "The quarantine was raised this morning. Business has been generally resumed, but it will be several days before passenger trains on any of the roads will stop at the depot here."

A Farmington woman and her children earned $149 the past season picking berries.

The Tilton woolen mills are being run three evenings a week on account of a press of orders.

NEW HAMPSHIRE TRUST COMPANY,

Manchester, N. H.

CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. The CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing: It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount. The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 5 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

SSS TRADE MARK

An Important Announcement

About a year ago, my wife was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack that I took my bed immediately, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and sleep was driven from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using liniments and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine will not cost you anything."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted, in three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been required at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries touching the subject, either personally or by mail. THOMAS MARKLEE,

11 W. 126th Street, New York City.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I have warded off a severe attack of rheumatism by a timely resort to Swift's Specific. I feel that where a permanent relief is sought this medicine commends itself for a constitutional treatment that thoroughly eradicates the seeds of disease from the system.

Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

NEW YORK, 51 TH AVE.—After spending $200 to be relieved of Blood Poison without any benefit, a few bottles of Swift's Specific worked a perfect cure. C. PORTER.

VIENNA, GA.—My little girl, aged six, and boy, aged four years, had scrofula in the worst aggravated shape. They were puny and sickly. To-day they are healthy and robust, all the result of taking S. S. S.

JOE T. COLLINS.

LADY LAKE, SUMTER CO., FLA.—YOUR S. S. S. has proved a wonderful success in my case. The cancer on my face, no doubt, would have soon buried me in my grave. I do think it is wonderful, and has no equal.

H. H. EVANS, Postmaster.

WACO, TEXAS, May 9, 1888.

S. S. CO., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—Knowing that you appreciate voluntary testimonials, we take pleasure in stating that one of our lady customers has regained her health by the use of four large bottles of your great remedy, after having been an invalid for several years. Her trouble was extreme debility, caused by a disease peculiar to her sex. Yours truly,

Three books mailed free on application. All druggists sell S. S. S.

OH, WHAT A COLD!

This is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their Head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.

C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and Croup. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.

"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN MCLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

OREN BRAGDON & SON, NO. 24 MARKET STREET.

Scheel for Training.

It is rumored that an association is to be formed by several of the auctioneers, the purpose of which is to encourage the flow of oratory and descriptive power among these slaughterers of goods, wares and merchandise, and private. It is felt that something must be done so that business may be more equally distributed among this brotherhood. No name has yet been decided upon for the association, though it is rumored it has been suggested that it should be called the Auctioneer's School of Oratory. A meeting, it is also rumored, was held recently, at which various plans of organization were considered, the matter being finally left in the hands of a committee to prepare and submit a constitution and by-laws at a future meeting. Some of the ideas promulgated were interesting, and showed that many of the auctioneers are anxious to rid the craft of the monotonous system of selling now commonly in vogue.

It was shown that in conducting a sale even ordinary articles of household furniture might have their value enhanced considerably by being mellifluously described, and thus invested with an interest that would divest those present of their capital. One very silvery tongued dweller on the rostrum said that in selling a fancy rocking chair it should be described as a sermon in leather; a cheval glass as the joocse production of a Scandinavian artisan; a couch as a dream in plush, on which to seek and find repose; a parlor set as having caught the rays of a vanishing rainbow; another, as entrancing as the gleam of the stars or the splendor which dies with the moon; a parlor set possessing a placid yet tepid aspect; a dining room in antique oak, a perfect gush of voluminous euphony; an easy chair, a caprice in raw silk; a davenport, beauteous but mingled with a sweet half sadness, and an ordinary refrigerator as a symphony of Siberian frigidity.—New York Graphic.

How Lord Clive Won His Wife.

About the middle of the last century a young cadet named Maskeleyne went to India, where he became acquainted with Lord Clive. The acquaintance ripened into intimate friendship and led to constant association. There hung up in Maskeleyne's room several portraits, among others a miniature which attracted Clive's frequent attention. One day after the English mail had arrived Clive asked Maskeleyne if he had received any English letters, adding: "We have been very much misunderstood at home and much censured in English circles." Maskeleyne replied that he had, and read to his friend a letter he then held in his hand.

A day or two afterward Clive came back to ask to have the letter read to him again. "Who is the writer?" inquired Clive. "My sister," was the reply; "my sister, whose miniature hangs there." "Is it a faithful representation?" further asked Clive. "It is," replied Maskeleyne, "of her face and form, but it is unequal to represent the excellence of her mind and character." "Well, Maskeleyne," said Clive, taking him by the hand, "you know me well, and can speak of me as I really am. Do you think that girl would be induced to come to India and marry me? In the present state of affairs I dare not hope to be able to go to England." Maskeleyne wrote home, and so recommended Clive's suit that the lady acquiesced, went to India, and in 1758 was married at Madras to Clive, then rising to the highest distinction.—Chicago Times.

The Swells of the World.

I suppose everybody has noticed that it is more difficult to pose as a swell in a big town than a small one. The same may be said in the cities of the world. It is somewhat on the following plan: In Chicago—A man may be a swell if he has a pot of money. It is permissible to be engaged in business.

Berlin—Military prestige.

Paris—Money, manners, recklessness, originality in sin and a popular fad. Business not to be thought of.

London—Blood, title, but not necessarily money, if endowed with natural aptitude for imitating the leaders of fashion. No connection with any business venture, absolute correctness in every detail of attire and outward circumstance, and an endless amount of admiration for recognized social leaders.

It struck me that men of distinctive tendencies toward swelldom in Chicago missed the details small and attractive of both life and attire, while, to be frank, there are, in New York, very few men who approach anything like the standard reached by their models across the water.—Blakely Hall's Letter.

Teaching Dogs Stage Tricks.

The pointer is the most easily trained of short hair dogs. The bulldog is much more intelligent than is generally supposed, and, while less ferocious than is commonly believed, none is capable of greater affection. Mr. Stevens insists that kindness is the principal factor in training dogs. Other fanciers, however, have long contended that brute force only can be relied upon.

Most stage tricks are done by cues or signals, without attracting the attention of the audience. "Romeo" selects any number given by one of the audience. Blocks upon which the ten numerals are painted are arrayed in a row on the stage. The dog has been taught to commence at the extreme right, and a slight clearing in the throat by the master, unheard beyond the footlights, is a cue for the dog to pass the first, second, third, etc., until he reaches the correct block. Silence then gives consent, and the trick is successfully performed. It required two years of patient training to teach Romeo to pick out those numbers, his trainer said, although the dog is a remarkably bright animal.—Newark Advertiser.

Implantation of Teeth.

Dr. Younger's plan of implanting natural teeth in place of those lost has proven less successful than was hoped, as the roots gradually undergo absorption, causing the teeth to loosen and fall out after a year or two.—Arkansaw Traveler.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Took First Prize.

The State board of pharmacy recently analyzed twelve of the most popular medicines in order to see whether they were what they were recommended to be. After two weeks of careful work work, they awarded the first prize, a gold medal, to Messrs. A P. Ordway, & Co., proprietors of Sulpher Bitters, it being in their opinion the best and only strictly pure blood purifying medicine in the ket.—Weekly Chemist.

The presidential election will be fought out on the lines laid down months ago. President Cleveland has been accused of having shrunk from the free trade policy he then advocated. The accusation is unjust. * * * President Cleveland is substantially in favor of a financial policy which will impose duties mainly for revenue purposes, will take duties off raw materials, and so widen the market of the American purchaser. These are the aims and this is the policy of the free traders of all countries.—London Saturday Review, Sept. 15th, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Double Help for the Bilious.

In addition to that chief remedial measure—the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—persons suffering from an acute bilious attack, will facilitate recovery by the use at first of milk and lime water and thin gruels, and by a very gradual return to the use of solid foods. Fatty substances should be excluded from the diet. Blue pill is a remedy of doubtful safety, particularly if there be nausea and vomiting, frequent concomitants of liver trouble. The bitters, provided its reformatory action be not retarded and marred by gross indiscretions in diet, will soon restore the equilibrium of and action of the liver, stomach and bowels, all these disordered by billiousness. In all forms of malarial disease, which in every one of its phases presents indications of liver trouble, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the foremost of specifics. The light of over thirty years' experience also shows it to be a fine remedy for rheumatism, kidney troubles, dyspepsia, nervousness and debility.

Persons prematurely gray can have their hair restored to its youthful beauty, by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best article in the market.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

Every wife and mother in the country should know the great value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as a blood purifier. It gives tone, health, and strength to the vital organs, corrects all irregularities, and expels impurities from the system. Young and old use it. Price $1.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Are You Going

To travel? If so you must be very careful of your health, or your doctor's bills will cost you more than your travelling expenses. A bottle of Sulpher Bitters will protect you from all sickness incident to change of climate.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla, Sold by all druggists.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester. Geowjans9

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. nonwedfrl,o6a1

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds, does it is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles at 50c and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

INVENTION AND DISCOVERY.

Two words which glibly enough fall from the lips of the average man in a careless sort of indiscrimination as if they were synonymous. But there is a vast sea of distinction between them. Literally, they are not so widely separated; but they have come to represent two totally different aspects of human action. To the writer's thinking, the terms have been greatly confused. Columbus hardly discovered America, he invented it—that is, as to its cognizable existence. He studied, figured, applied the laws as he knew them, and determined that there must be a continent there, and he plodded on till he proved the fact, and reduced his invention to practice.

Newton discovered the law of gravity, one might say, without either mental or physical effort. Watt invented the steam engine and Stephenson invented the locomotive. They felt and knew the goal was ahead, but how to reach it was the question which required invention of the highest order. Eli Whitney saw the painful and laborious methods of cleaning out cotton and shredding it, intuitively felt it could be done by machinery, went to work and gave the world one of his great inventions, the cotton gin. Howe's great inspiration to place the eye at the point of a needle may be said to have been a discovery. It unfolded a picture to his mind prophetic of good to almost countless millions, but invention had to be invoked to give the picture life, and the sewing machine, in all its beauty, came slowly forth from the chrysalis of Howe's discovery. The irregular lathe and the modern harvester were inventions; their dim, indefinable forms loomed up in the mists of their inventors' minds, they felt the impulse of improvement, the value of the goal gained, and they went to work and at last succeeded, and the wood carver and reaping hook lost their usefulness to that extent.

The electric telegraph was never discovered; it was consistently invented. Countless devices and methods were designed, tested, thrown away—to be afterwards revivified, many of them—new appliances and systems laboriously worked out, the midnight oil unsparingly sacrificed, until at last a perfected and practical system and apparatus were given to the world.

It is hard to say whether the dynamo was invented or discovered, considering its prototype, the magneto machine. The probabilities are it was an accidental discovery. The arc light was a discovery pure and simple. Electric incandescence was a discovery, but the incandescent lamp in its commercial form stands forth as one of the most beautiful examples of man's inventive faculty. The countless experiments on material, the bulb, the seal, the standardizing, the pumps, and all the appliances that go to provide us with the beautifully glowing luminary, all are incradicable proofs of invention of the very highest order. Midnight oil and noonday sun, morning's vigor and evening's reposeful ruminations, were all called into requisition to complete the work. This is true invention.

The phonograph was originally a discovery, a happy thought of Edison's, but invention of a high order was necessary to produce the beautiful instrument of the present day. It was like Howe's needle—the germ was there, but the machine had to be devised to make it practicable. The undulatory telephone was a discovery, a brilliant one, but still a discovery. A happy thought supplied the missing link in an incomplete chain, and when the weld of that link was accomplished the whole world was enchained in admiration, the wonderful utility of the device was quickly recognized, and the discoverer reaped a rich harvest. The pneumatic process of Bessemer was an invention of high grade and far reaching importance, and the Siemens regenerative furnace has proved its equal in merit as a methodical and logical invention beautifully carried out.

The inventor sees his goal, and constantly strives for it. He knows the object is there, and he goes energetically after it, sometimes straight to it, but oftener is many times lost in the wilderness of deluded fancy. He sees a light ahead, sighs relief and darts after it, only to find it a will o'-the-wisp. Undaunted, he starts again, only perhaps to meet other and worse misfortunes. But he struggles on hopefully, and at last reaches the shrine of his adoration and is for the time content.

The discoverer walks along calmly toward some goal, or lies on the roadside meditating, and happening to cast his idle eyes downward, sees a gem sparkling at his feet, and he sometimes picks it up and adds it to the galaxy of the world's diadem, but he as often fails to note the scintillations that betoken its preciousness, and spurns it back into the deeper dust, to lie unseen and unknown perhaps for ages. Which of these two promoters of the world's welfare merits the highest praise, it is needless to ask. —Electrical Review.

Soldiers' Antiseptic Ammunition.

According to The Medical Press a useful suggestion is being carried out by the Netherland government, by which provision will be made for supplying each soldier during the time of war with a cartridge containing some antiseptic dressings. Each cartridge will be made of convenient size, namely, about three inches in length by two in width, and will be secured at one end with a safety pin. The dressing contained in each will consist of a bandage about three yards long, and two pieces of gauze, all of which have been rendered antiseptic by a sublimate solution. Hence in the event of wounds being received a ready means would be at hand for the immediate application of antiseptic dressings. Soldiers in the case of slight injuries would probably at once avail themselves of the dressings, and the latter could not fail to be of much use to the surgeons. The idea is well worthy of the attention of the military authorities in this country, and might even with advantage be adopted, as it has been for years past in the German army. In the wars in which, during the past few years England has been engaged in tropical climates, the early application of antiseptics to the wounds received by the men was admitted to be a matter of the utmost importance by the army medical officers attached to the forces.—Science.

American Women in London.

The presence of American women in London society has had an influence on conversation as it has on other things. Youth and beauty and cleverness are often to be found in the same person; it would be wonderful if they were not to be found in the same group. The American girl who marries in England has begun life earlier than her English cousin. She has met men and even talked to them while yet unmarried, a thing which few English girls venture to do. She has probably lived in Paris; part of her education is French; she knows three of the great capitals of the world; her ideas are not bounded by the horizon of Mayfair. She is fresh, original, independent. She cannot always be clever, but she has been taught to think for herself, and never was there a more apt pupil in that science. Above all, perhaps, she was not born into a respect for rank, or even for royalty, and she catches therefore at once that note of equality which is essential to social success—in London as much as anywhere in the world—as well as to intellectual freedom.

It was always said that the secret or one secret of American popularity in royal circles was in this American freedom from the purely conventional notion about royalty which prevails in England. A girl from New York talked to the Prince of Wales as if royalty had no more rights than republicanism. She spoke her mind, as she expected the prince to speak his. I don't know that he always did, but he was delighted by the girl's frankness. It is many years since he began to covet American society, and there has never been a time when there was not some one or more American women who, in the current phrase of London, had to be asked if you wanted the prince.—G. W. Smalley in New York Tribune.

Holland's Arm of Defense.

There is, however, another matter, ridiculous as it may appear to those who have not studied the topography of the country and its adjacent territory, why Holland feels secure as to its continued independence. Not far from Utrecht there is a strip of land that either belligerent must cross in order to invade the enemy's country. That strip of land is sufficiently broad and long for the passage of many corps d'armee should either the Germans or French violate Holland's neutrality. This entire strip can be put under water "in less than no time," drowning the invading armies, with ample safety to the inland retreating Dutch forces.

It will be remembered that while Belgium was used as territory for "interning" French soldiers, making this entire kingdom virtually a shelter for all those thrown hors de combat, Holland was not even scratched by the foot of a single foreign soldier during the Franco-German war. The little country was on the alert ever and anon. She had her army of 90,000 men on a war footing, but with one hand on the sword, the other on the sluices, she stood ready to fight with water any one daring to violate the merest inch of her territory. The experience then gained has been improved upon since, and during the past eighteen years the dikes and duinen have been so improved for the purposes of defense against sea and foe that the Hollanders of our day can as effectually make use of the water as an arm of defense as did their forefathers over 200 years ago against the then powerful Spain.—The Hague Cor. New York Herald.

Police Surveillance in Russia.

The only shade of discomfort which an American may meet in traveling in Russia comes from their system of espionage, and that is more in imagination than reality. Probably no country in Europe has such a thorough system of police surveillance.

As soon as you reach their border your passport is given up and registered. When you arrive at your hotel you give it up again and it is at once sent to police headquarters, and you are again registered. Whenever you change your location you do the same thing, and in this way the landlord everywhere is made responsible to the government for the foreigners under his roof. Then, when you wish to leave the country, you must again send your passport to the police office and obtain a permit, which is good for only three days, and which is attached to your passport and removed at the last Russian station on the Austrian or German frontier. So that your passport contains a complete record of when and where you entered the country, just where you have been and how long you have remained. Yet with all this you have no consciousness of being watched, and you probably are not, when the authorities are once satisfied as regards your nationality and good character. And after all the plots that have been formed against the government in foreign countries, is it any wonder that they should consider these precautions necessary?—Henry M. Wright in Detroit Free Press.

Flower Gardens for Show.

Oswald Crawford, in The Fortnightly, has a charming article on "Summer Time in Rural Portugal." He gives an account of the survival of the fittest in the noble gardens that are found as relics and reminders of Moorish taste. He says that "it humiliates his national pride to contemplate the pleasure gardens of his English friends; even to pass by train, in summer time, through the land and see no garden that is any refreshment to the spirits, save those of the cottagers." In other words, the northern garden is a show place for flowers, but in the southern garden "flowers of infinitely less importance than the walks, the shades of branching trees, the greenery of leaf and spray, the cooling breezes in summer, the warmth of the sun in winter, and at all seasons the golden fretwork that the sunlight makes upon the ground through overhanging boughs." We are young in a good many ways; but in the art of the beautiful we have most of all to learn. Such notes as Mr. Crawford gives us are especially valuable, not to England only, but to America. We have a superabundance of show gardens without a thought of comfort and refreshments. The one need of Americans is recuperation. Even our gardens are wearisome and formal.—Globe-Democrat.

"To the Victors Belong the Spoils of the Enemy."

It is over a half century since Wm. L. Marcy, in the senate of the United States, gave utterance to the above significant statement, which has since become a principle of the democratic party. That the party in power should have its friends in political offices; that the men who administer the laws, as far as the executive portion of the government relates, should be in sympathy with the executive of the nation, no reasonable person, be he politician or theorist, disputes. But when it comes to the administration (no matter for its profession as to its modes of promoting efficiency in the management of public affairs) taking upon itself the responsibility of utterly discommoding the entire people of this country by disarranging the postal service, the previous efficiency of which had been attained only by years of patient progress, the careful and methodical education of postal clerks who possessed sufficient comprehension to acquire a knowledge of geography which could be used always properly at a second's notice, when men who had spent their best years in acquiring a knowledge of persons, places, routes, connecting mail lines and the entire detail which goes to make up a successful and indispensable postal clerk,—when such men are summarily set aside and told to stand down, "as the department is happy to say for no fault in the official discharge of their duties," then it is that the people have a right to complain.

Everyone knows that our postal service has become lamentably inefficient. For a while experienced men were retained on important lines where a heavy amount of mail matter was daily handled. One by one, the long tried and eminently faithful men, who knew the business and had devoted their best days to master the intricacies of their calling, were notified to step out, as a politician in accord with the principles professed by Mr. Cleveland must have the place occupied by the experienced clerk. Superintendents of mail service knew this would cripple the service, but they were allowed no discretion. Then came the blunders. Democratic postal clerks asked democratic postmasters not to report their errors, delinquencies and omissions. Every effort was made to help the favored politicians. No one objected to their coming into the possession of their political patrimony, if they would only become as able, in the discharge of their new duties, as were the men to whose places they succeeded. But this was not the rule. The new men in very many instances were not inclined to perfect themselves in their vocation. At the end of their runs, instead of studying geography, increasing their knowledge in regard to various routes over which mail matter might most speedily and surely reach its destination, they yielded for the most part to the fascinations of a new position. To the most of these men it did not occur that a reliable postal clerk was one who knew just where to indicate at a glance the short, sure and best route by which a piece of mail matter should be transported. These men had a soft snap, as they termed it, and a windfall or a short term of office, which was expected to end before they could become perfectly familiar with its many details.

The result of this is that the public suffer, while the few favored politicians are rewarded. Complaints are frequent all over the country. These come, not from postmasters, whose duty it is to report them, but from persons whose correspondence is hindered, miscarried, lost and neglected. While the democratic postal clerks stagger under the load of illegally-franked democratic campaign documents, the patron who expects the regular arrival of his daily newspaper is doomed to disappointment. At one time the trouble seems to relate to one paper, then again another is missing. Some weeks ago the New York Daily Tribune began an era of irregularity. Sometimes it was three or four days behind time in its arrival, and again it disappeared entirely. Then the precaious New York Times was lost to sight. For three Saturdays in succession this paper, which affects to love Hill less, but Cleveland more; the embodiment of a free trade journal, which like an old maid giving advice to young married people upon housekeeping economy, seeks to extend its fostering care over the democracy as long as the party conforms to its behests; this able and well arranged New York Times, upon whose daily inspiration so many reputable quandam republicans depend for information as to which side of the political fence they are really to be found on in this political campaign, has been missing. Possibly some of its patrons in this vicinity might be able to keep Sunday without the perusal of Saturday's Times; but how would Sunday be kept?

Patrons grumble at the non-receipt of their papers, but they will not admit the cause of their complaint to be the inefficiency in the postal service, brought about by the new impulse to removals by President Cleveland's post-master general. This officer, in obedience to the president's orders, started to make a clean sweep in the interest of Mr. Cleveland's re-election. He builded better than he knew. As long as the offices were apportioned to the faithful and the public suffered not, there was no complaining on the part of the people at large. But now that every man and woman in this great country is obliged to wait until raw recruits can be perfected as postal clerks, there goes up all over the land the wail of dissatisfaction.

And yet we are asked to vote to continue in office this administration, which not only has done nothing to improve our postal service, but has exerted its influence to crippling our mail carriage by sea and diminishing our conveniences for rapid and safe delivery on land. The interference with the mail service, and reducing it from a state of acknowledged efficiency to its present demoralized condition, in one of the many blunders of the Cleveland administration which will tell severely against the party in the coming contest.

Admiral Whitney to the Rescue.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14th. The political tongues were set wagging yesterday by the sudden appearance in this city of the secretary of the navy, Hon. William C. Whitney. He had come post haste direct from the White House, and he lost no time in hurrying to the democratic national headquarters. He was there for several hours, closeted with Chairman Brice, in a most earnest and confidential interview. Rumors as to the real object of the visit were various, but it was generally agreed that it all had to do with the local fight in New York, where in the democratic factions are more decidedly than ever at variance with each other. Whitney, the current report had it, came on to employ every means to prevent the impending slashing match. The local bosses, Croker and Powers, were again summoned to a conference, but neither put in an appearance; in fact, the invitation to help save the president seems to have been absolutely ignored. Powers was busy trying to whip his regiment into line for Mr. Hewitt, while Croker was engaged in the endeavor to make a deal with Coogan the labor candidate

Close friends of Mr. Whitney did not deny that that gentleman had declared that the president was alarmed over the situation here, and had repeated his desire for a union candidate for the mayoralty. The president it is well known also expressed a wish that if the factions failed to effect a compromise on the mayoralty ticket, they would at least favor him by uniting upon Congressional nominees. In this way he hopes to secure a solid free trade delegation from this city; but Whitney arrived a day too late, and it was with unconcealed indignation that he learned of Tammany's game of bluff in having passed resolutions advising union on Congressional candidates, and then turning around and naming successors to Cummings in the sixth, Fitch in the thirteenth and Cox in the ninth districts, in direct violation of their declaration.

The breach between the county democracy and Tammany only widens, and Mr. Whitney's visit appears to have had no soothing effect on the warring rings. A Tammany sachem, hearing of the visit of the president's aid-de-camp remarked openly in the Hoffman house, "What's Grover Cleveland ever done for us; we want the next mayor, and that is what we are after." Another prominent Tammany man said, when spoken to on the matter, "Nothing can change our position; we are in for this fight on the lines as they are now drawn. We would like to see Cleveland re-elected, but we at the same time would like to save our own bacon. The presidency of the United States is a very nice thing to have, but there is a good deal more patronage for us under the mayor.

Political Campaigning in Hayti.

Political campaigns are conducted with vigor in Hayti. President Saloman having been deposed and driven out of the country, the provisional government ordered an election of members of a constitutional assembly to elect a new president. The candidates for president were Gen. Legitime and Gen. Thelamaque, and the election returns showing more members elected for Legitime than for Thelamaque, the latter at the head of 4000 troops attacked the seat of government atm Port au Prince, but was defeated, and himself and many of his troops killed. Gen. Legitime will now have a walkover, and peace will be maintained if everybody on the island has to be killed to secure it.

The Boston Journal says the federal officials in that city are comforted over being assessed a second time for funds to aid in carrying on the reform campaign, by being told that the first assessment was levied by unauthorized persons! It is no doubt hoped by the squeezed office-holders that a third assessment will not be levied on the ground that the second was not authorized.

The Memphis Avalanche, democratic, is not over-confident that Tennessee will much longer remain in the "solid south." It says: "If Cleveland carries New York, Indiana, and New Jersey or Connecticut, and loses Tennessee, Harrison will be the next president of the United States. We cannot afford to shut our eyes to the evidences of weakness which every day make themselves manifest. There is hard work to do if the full democratic vote of the state is to be brought out. The margin is narrow and there are no votes to lose."

It will be remembered that during the presidential campaign four years ago the National Civil Service Reform Association sent out a circular to republican federal officials threatening them with prosecution if they contributed to the republican campaign fund. What position does the association take on the matter now? Has it warned democratic officials against making such contributions this year? If not, why not? The "voluntary contributions" of office-holders of all classes and both sexes, made on "invitations" of democratic committees which they do not dare to decline, are more widespread just now than ever before. Where is George William Curtis and his righteous wrath?

On top of the exposure of Secretary Endicott's order to displace women and children of republican connections, employed in national armories, to make places for able-bodied democratic office-seekers, comes the information that Reformer Benedict, government printer, has assessed the girls in the government printing office to get funds for carrying on the civil-service-reform campaign. Even before there was any such thing as a civil service law the female employes of the printing office were invariably exempted from political assessments. But President Cleveland's "reform principles" are different.

The Yellow Fever.

In Jacksonville, on the 14th, all the volunteer physicians of the medical bureau resigned in a body, on account of an attack upon them in a communication printed in a local paper on the evening of the 13th. On being remonstrated with they consented to act for a while longer. New cases on the 13th, eighteen; deaths, two. Total cases to date, 3544; deaths, 313.

There were republican and democratic torchlight parades in Dover last Friday evening, and the Democrat of Saturday said: "A republican and a democrat living on Washington street were to illuminate for their respective parties last night, but by some mistake the republican illuminated for the democrats and did not for the republicans, and the democrat did the same for the republicans. Neither found out his mistake until this morning, and now each wants the other to kick him."

Blood Will Tell.

William Nowlin is under arrest in Boston for conspiracy to rob and murder his employer, W. L. Russell, a milkman. Nowlin is a brother of Edward Nowlin, who was hanged for the murder of Mr. Codman, a milkman of Somerville, Mass, by whom he was employed. William is about twenty-one years old, and has served a term in the house of correction for breaking and entering, and attempted robbery. Another brother, George Nowlin, who was employed by Russell, was recently discharged for stealin $10, but on his promise to repay the money was not at the time prosecuted. He was arrested last Friday for embezzlement. The whole pack are evidently imbued with crime, and it would be a good thing to hang the lot.

An attempt was made to rob the pay car on the Black Hills & Fort Pierre railroad near Lead City, Dakota, Oct. 13th. The train was thrown into a gully by the removal of two rails near a curve, and three masked men immediately attacked the pay car. The paymaster opened fire with a Winchester rifle, fatally wounding two; the third man escaped. None of the railroad men were hurt.

"Did n't know 't was Loaded"

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reestablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

Music hall was packed with intelligent people, including a very considerable number of ladies, on Monday evening, when the republicans of Portsmouth had their first extensive rally during the present campaign.

The marching campaign company organized Saturday evening, with the Portsmouth band at their head, escorted the speakers of the occasion from the Rockingham house to the hall. The meeting was called to order by Mr. William H. Moore, who introduced as president of the evening Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., president of the Portsmouth republican club, who announced the following as the officers of the meeting:

VICE PRESIDENTS.

SECRETARIES.

Israel P. Miller, Joseph R. Curtis, Lewis W. Brewster.

The first speaker was Hon. Frank D. Currier of Canaan, secretary of republican state central committee; he is a very pleasing speaker, and his address was received with many marks ofsatisfaction by the great audience. He was followed by Cyrus A. Sulloway, Esq., who made the principal speech of the evening, and held the close attention of all until he closed. Hon Alonzo Nute of Farmingington, who is to succeed Mr. McKinney as Congressman from this district, was present, but did not address the meeting. During the evening Mr. Wetherell of this city sang a campaign song which was well received. On the stage, as vice presidents, sat a number of men who have previously always acted with the democratic party, but have been wearied by the present adminstration. The hall was crowded, and the rally was a great success.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

MONDAY, Oct. 15th.

Richard Berry. hailing from Gloucester, Mass., and charged with stealing a pair of rubber boots that were hanging in front of E. S. Fay's store last Saturday evening, was sent to jail for twenty days, costs being taxed at $6.90.

William Hurley, for an assault on James Gorman, was fined $5, costs $6.90; county farm in default of payment.

Frank Fowler, of Seabrook, was adjudged probably guilty of feloniously assaulting a little girl, and was held in $500 for a higher court.

Frank Fowler, on a charge of breaking and entering John W. Locke's store in Seabrook on the night of Oct. 7th, was held in $500. [A similar charge against him was nol. pros'd on the 13th, but new and very damaging evidence having been secured, he was held as stated.]

CIRCUIT COURT.

In the United States Circuit court on Saturday afternoon, the jury having been unable to agreed upon a verdict in the case of the United Gas & Improvement Co. of Philadelphia against the Manchester Gas Light Co., were discharged. The suit was brought to recover for the patent and machinery for a plant for water gas, which the Philadelphia Co. claimed was contracted for by the Manchester Co., but which the latter company declined to take or pay for.

In the Knibbs valve suits against Portsmouth and the other New Hampshire cities, the cases were by agreement of Mr. Norton's counsel entered judgement for defendents without costs as to all plaintiffs except Ruel Phibrick, who claims to own the patent by an assignment. Mr. Philbrick was in court Saturdry, and has been granted a short time in which to furnish security for costs. The cases will probably be discontinued.

THE TEMPERATE ZONE.

The north millpond was skimmed all over with ic on Monday morning, Oct. 15th.

THIS EVENING.

The ladies of Storer Relief Corps will give a literary entertainment and hot supper in Grand Army hall this evening, for the benefit fund of the G. A. R. Admission, including supper, for adults twenty cents, for children under twelve years, fifteen cents. They should have a crowd.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Pickering, wife of Mr. John J. Pickering, died on Monday morning, the 15th inst., at the Intervale house at Intervale, North Conway, to which place she had gone for the benefit of her health. Her husband was with her at the time of her death, and brought the remains to this city on Monday evening. Mrs. Pickering was widely known for her energetic interest in behalf of humane reform; she was the founder of the New Hampshire Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and an active worker in it up to the time of her decease; was largely instrumental in the organizing of the New Hampshire Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children; and was a vice president of the American Humane Association, which holds its annual session this week in Toronto, Ontario.

FIRE AT RYE BEACH.

A large barn on the lower part of the South road at Rye beach was burned early Sunday morning, with a quantity of hay stored there by George White; twenty-five barrels of apples belonging to Eli Bunker of North Hamdton, and some hay also owned by him; also an omnibus belonging to Edward H. Balch. The barn belonged to the estate of the late Richard Jenness, and was burned by an incendiary. There was a small insurance. A mowing machine and lot of farming tools were burned with the building.

PERSONAL.

Messrs. Fred A. Dennett and George A. Pickering started on Monday for a week's trip down in Maine.

Miss Carrie A. Marston of Clifton, Mass., is passing a few weeks with friends in this city.

Mrs. H. A. Wells, of San Francisco, who has been passing the summer in this city, started for her home on the 15th inst.

Mrs. Elma Staples of Fitchburg, Mass., formerly Miss Mattie Fernald of this, city is visiting her mother on Lincoln avenue.

Mr. Dan M. Camp, manager of the restaurant at the Boston & Maine railroad station in this city, has returned from a vacation trip to the mountains. We shold think he would be glad to get back alongside a good warm fire.

Hon. John Wentworth of Chicago is reported to be dying.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS ELECT A SECRETARY.

The Board of Railroad Commissioners met at Concord recently. The president, Col. Putney, stated that he was glad to note so many of the board present, as by reason of the expiration of the term of office of Ex-Commissioner Sanborn, there was a vacancy in the office of secretary. It was important that the office should be filled at once. He paid a glowing tribute to the efficiency of Ex-Sec. Sanborn, and expressed a hope that his successor would be as fortunate in his discharge of the duties of the arduous position, as had been the gentleman from Franklin.

Commission Prescott was glad to add his tetimony as to the capabilities of their late associate. He moved to proceed to the choice of a secretary, and a ballot was had, with the following result:

Whole number of votes,	2
Necessary for a choice,	2
Hon. B. F. Prescott had	2

and was declared elected. Mr. Prescott came forward and was congratulated by the chairman. He allowed that the election, though in some degree a surprise to him, was gratifying in its implied expression of confidence in his ability to do the duties. These duties he knew were onerous, responsible and at times peculiar, but he hoped he should accomplish all that was required of him to the acceptance of the board.

Mr. Prescott then assumed the duties of secretary and the business of the board proceeded in order.

The Ward Two Republican committee are requested to meet at the headquarters on Congress street this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

The October term of the supreme court for Rockingham county commences this morning at the court house in this city, Judge Carpenter presiding.

Mayor Hodgdon has received from Mr. D. T. Gerow, acting mayor of Jacksonville, Fla., a letter acknowledging the receipt of $113 from the citizens of Portsmouth, and expressing thanks for the aid rendered and the sympathy thereby indicated.

The daily call at Staples' Dry Goods store: "Got any more of those remnants of drilling at 6 1-2 cents?"

We have.

The agents in this city of the Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. of New York have hired the office No. 23 Hanover street, formerly Nathan Jones' back office, and are fitting it up for the central office of the company's business here.

Mr. Thomas H. Philbrick has accepted a position as carpenter of the fruit steamer Clarksville, running between the West Indies and a northern port of the United States, and will join her about Nov. 10th.

The U. S. S. Constellation left the navy yard between nine and ten o'clock Monday morning, the 15th inst., in tow of the tug Leyden, on her way to Hampton roads. After having some repairs made at the Norfolk navy yard she will go on a winter cruise to the West Indies with the naval apprentices from the Saratoga and Portsmouth.

The statement telegraphed from Concord relative to the Knibbs valve suits was not correct in all particulars. An agreement was signed by all the plaintiffs, through an attorney in New York, consenting to a judgement against all the plaintiffs except Mr. Ruel Philbrick. Mr. Philbrick claims to own the patent and the entire interest in the law suits by means of an assignment. The cases are still pending as to Mr. Philbrick, but it is thought they will be dismissed before long. Mr. Philbrick has been ordered to furnish security for costs in thirty days.

Most of the Portsmouth members of the Grocers' Excursion party which went from Boston to New York state last week got home Saturday afternoon, the party having reached Boston Saturday morning by the Fall River route from New York. On Friday evening the excursionists assembled in the forward saloon of the steamer Bristol, and presented an elegant silver service to Mr Johnson and wife, who arranged and successfully carried out the excursion. Some of the Portsmouth delegation did not get home until Sunday evening, and a few arrived back on Monday.

The democrats of ward three have organized a campaign club and chosen the following officers: Capt. T. F. Cronin, 1st Lieut. George Magown, 2nd Lieut. Daniel Crowley, 1st Sergt. Timothy Quill, 2nd Sergt. John Ragan. The company has been named the Eldredge Guards, and has a membership of nearly seventy-five. A uniform consisting of white coat with red trimmings, white helmets and leggins has been adopted.

Naval Intelligence.

Surgeon Frank L. DuBois has been promoted to medical inspector, vice Med. Ins. John C. Spear, retired.

Paymaster George A. Lyon is promoted to pay inspector, vice Pay Ins. Charles F. Guild, retired.

Passed Asst. Paymaster John W. Jordan is promoted to paymaster, vice Paymasters George R. Watkins, dismissed, and Charles D. Mansfield, retired.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

TRUST COMPANY,

Manchester, N. H.

CASH CAPITAL, - - $250,000.

The quarterly statement herewith presented indicates the continued growth and prosperity of the Institution. The confidence reposed in its securities is attested by the fact that they are held by most of the leading banks, and by nearly all the Fire Insurance companies in New Hampshire; by Banks, Insurance companies, Religious, Educational and Charitable institutions, and by a multitude of private investors in this and other states. The business has grown steadily from a small beginning to its present proportions because the public appreciates the conservative policy of the management. THE CAPITAL was paid up in CASH, and nothing of a doubtful nature is counted in its assets. The power of the Company TO CREATE LIABILITIES IS LIMITED; its stockholders cannot borrow its funds; it is managed by men of experience and well-known financial standing. It is not only "under supervision of the Bank Commissioners" of New Hampshire, but is ANNUALLY EXAMINED by them in accordance with law, and the findings of the Commissioners published in the annual Bank Report.

It loans money in the West through salaried employees, and on FIRST MORTGAGES ONLY. It has not impaired its capital by guaranteeing loans at high rates of interest, on inferior security, or to an unsafe amount The Company offer for investment 6 per cent First Mortgages on Real Estate with its guaranty, covering principal and interest, in amounts from $200 upwards, running from 3 to 5 years. Also, ITS OWN 6 PER CENT BONDS running 10 years, coupons payable semi-annually, amounts from $100 to $1,000 each. These bonds besides being the direct obligation of the Company are further secured by First Mortgages on Real Estate pledged with the Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company as Trustee for the payment of these bonds and for no other purpose. The bonds are listed at the Boston Stock Exchange; they can be registered in the owner's name if desired; can be held without publicity and transferred without trouble; they are as safe as any security can be and combine a good rate of interest without the risk attending the ordinary Western investments.

Other desirable securities are occasionally offered, of the more conservative class, such as municipal, county, school and other bonds. No security is offered or recommended which has not been carefully investigated and believed to be worthy of confidence. It is the intention to avoid the more hazardous investments and hence no unreasonable rates of interest can be offered.

The Company is also authorized to act as Trustee in the management of trust funds; to serve as Trustee in corporate mortgages; and to assume all similar trust business. Deposits are received on favorable terms.

CLEVELAND'S SUPERIOR BAKING POWDER

THE PUREST AND BEST

Is made only of strictly pure grape cream of tartar, strictly pure bicarbonate of soda, and a small portion of flour as a preservative, nothing else whatever, and is warranted entirely free from alum, ammonia, phosphates, lime, and all the adulterants frequently found in baking powders. The character of materials used, their purity, and the nicety of their combination, render Cleveland's superior baking powder the most healthful and most economical in use, and it always affords wholesome, nutritious, and delicious food.

It is recommended for purity, healthfulness and efficiency by Government and State chemists, chemists of Boards of Health, and professors in institutions of learning throughout the country.

Sold only in cans, full weight.

An Important Announcement

About six weeks ago, while at business, I was suddenly attacked with excruciating pains in my feet, knees and hands. So severe the attack, I could not walk painlessly, and in two or three days my joints were swollen to almost double their natural size, and along with it came from me. After suffering the most excruciating pain for a week, using Hunyadi and various other remedies, a friend who sympathized with my helpless condition, said to me:

"Why don't you get Swift's Specific and use it. I will guarantee a cure, and if it does not the medicine shall cost you nothing."

I at once secured the S. S. S., and after using it the first day, had a quiet night and refreshing sleep. In a week I felt greatly benefitted. In three weeks I could sit up and walk about the room, and after using six bottles I was out and able to go to business. Since then I have been regularly at my post of duty, and stand on my feet from nine to ten hours a day, and am entirely free from pain. These are the plain and simple facts in my case, and I will cheerfully answer all inquiries relative thereto, either in person or by mail. THOMAS MARKLEE,

11 W. 13th Street, New York City.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—I have waited for a severe attack of rheumatism to prove to my entire satisfaction that S. S. S. is a permanent relief in advance of this common complaint. I can now recommend it for a constitutional treatment that thoroughly eradicates the seeds of disease from the system. Rev. W. P. HARRISON, D. D.

NEW YORK, 91 3RD AVE.—After spending $200 to be relieved of Blood Poison without any benefit, a few bottles of Swift's Specific worked a perfect cure. C. CRIER.

VIENNA, GA.—My little girl, aged six, and boy, aged four years, had scrofula in the worst inverted shape. They were puny and sickly. To-day they are healthy and robust, all the result of taking S. S. S. JOE T. COLLINS.

LADY LAKE, SUMTER CO., FLA.—Your S. S. S. has proved a wonderful success in my case. The cancer on my face, no doubt, would have soon buried me in my grave. I do think it is wonderful, and has no equal. B. H. BYRD, Postmaster.

WACO, TEXAS, May 8, 1888.

S. S. S. Co., Atlanta, Ga.:

Gentlemen—Knowing that you appreciate voluntary testimonials, we take pleasure in stating that one of our lady customers has regained her health by the use of six large bottles of your great remedy, after having been an invalid for several years, during which time she was extreme debility, caused by a disease peculiar to her sex. WHAT A COLD!

This is the season for sudden changes in the weather, and a great many "take cold" either in their Head or on their Lungs, causing Coughs, Hoarseness, and Sore Throat. These troubles can be soon relieved and cured by taking Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs, entirely removing these difficulties.

Cured his boy of Croup.

C. M. BROOKS, Lowell, Mass., says: "I take great pleasure in recommending Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific as a cure for Croup, Colds and Coughs. I used it in my family last winter with the best results. Two or three doses cured my little boy of Croup, for which I am very thankful."

You can cure that Cough in a short time. You can cure your Catarrh if you persist in its use, as it will stop the secretion of Catarrhal matter in the head; it will relieve Croup in from three to five minutes.

The best he ever saw.

"The best medicine for Coughs and Consumptive Complaints that ever I saw is Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific," so says JOHN MCLAUGHLIN, of Boston.

Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.

HUNTING IN THE ALPS.

In reality Alpine sport is considerably tamer than the passing tourist usually supposes. Chamois stalking, though the few who practice it declare it to be the most exciting of all pastimes, is for the most part, at least in Austria, left entirely to the poachers. The physical exertion it requires, the dangers it involves and the rarity, or rather the entire want of, stanch and well trained hounds, account for this. Both the chamois and the roe are driven, but in a way suited to the character of the country and impossible on an English estate.

Long before dawn the guests who are invited to take part in a chamois hunt assemble at an appointed place. Then the steep climb into the valley which is to be the scene of operations begins. When the proper positions are reached, the head forester assigns to each of the guests a place near one of the passes the chamois are likely to take. All these ambushes are hidden from the heights above by rocks or bushes, and they are always from three to four hundred, usually more than a thousand, feet apart. When once a sportsman has been placed he is expected to remain where he is as silently as he can. He must not leave his post on any account, as this might not only disturb the drive, but endanger his own life. At about the same time as the hunting party leave their rendezvous a party of drivers accompanied by dogs start from the other side of the mountain range. The noise they make frightens the chamois over the crest and, if the parties have been properly organized, into the valley, where a warm welcome has been prepared for them. Except in very rare cases, those who are posted above are expected to let the herd pass before shooting, in order not to spoil the sport of their friends below. The huntsmen must, of course, always be placed so that the wind blows toward and not from them. Roe are for the most part shot in a similar way, though roe stalking is by no means unusual.

Auerhahn stalking is a far more exciting and peculiarly Alpine form of sport, and it is the favorite recreation of the emperor of Austria. It is only in the mating season, roughly speaking in April and May, that it is permitted. The cock is generally the most timid and cautious of birds at this season he becomes a prey to passion, and loses his head—at least at intervals. At dawn he flies to a spot which he knows to be frequented by the hens, perches upon an exposed bough, so that all the charms of his plumage may be seen, and begins his nuptial song. It consists of three distinct parts, with a short pause between each; and, while piping it, the cock extends his feathers and beats upon the bough with his wings. At such times he seems utterly unconscious of everything that goes on around him. This is the sportsman's opportunity; he has taken his place before dawn near a spot which he knows to be frequented and concealed himself in the best cover he can find. As soon as the bird begins its call, which is technically known as its balz, he springs forward to some nearer cover in which he can lie silently in wait during the first pause; while the second strain is in progress he must reach a point near enough to take good aim. An Alpine sportsman would no more think of shooting an Auerhahn in any other way than an English squire would think of shooting a fox. In the great part of the country the hens are legally protected during the whole of the year; they have a peculiar cry, which some foresters successfully imitate for the purpose of luring their mates.—Saturday Review.

Discipline of English Schools.

In any large and highly organized community there must always be a considerable number of people whose duties or circumstances are such as to destroy the character of home as a suitable place for educational training. In Great Britain, for instance, military and naval officers, with Indian, diplomatic and colonial officials, cannot look forward to having their children educated under their own eyes. Men in political life, distracted by the excitements of their work, and usually migrating from country to town with the legislative seasons, are scarcely better off. The preference of the landed proprietors of England for living on their own estates involves educational isolation, and makes it necessary that boys should be sent away for training.

Here we have already a very large body of people for whom the public school, with its provision for home care, as well as mental training, is practically a necessity. A larger question of expediency still remains. The sons of the wealthy very seldom get a fair chance for training in their own homes. Luxury, social distractions, the excessive environment of dependents, all militate against mental industry and moral tone. It is this consideration which leads the average Englishman of wealth to send his boy away from home to the simpler life and steadier discipline of the public school.—George R. Parkin in The Century.

A Quaint Old Custom.

"Taking the cushion" is a quaint old Spanish court custom still practiced in Madrid. The ceremony creates noble ladies "grandees of Spain," with the right to sit in the royal presence by permission of the king or queen, and recently Queen Christina solemnly followed the prescribed form, in order to admit several young ladies about the court to the higher rank. All the lady grandees of the court assembled in one of the state apartments, each holding a large cushion. In the center of the room were a large armchair and a low stool.

Queen Christina entered with her suite, took the arm chair and requested the ladies to sit down on their cushions. Then the candidates for grandeeship were introduced one by one. Each was accompanied by a sponsor, and made low reverences to the queen and to every grandee in turn. The queen next invited the candidate to sit on the stool at her feet—arranged as more convenient than a cushion—spoke a few words and allowed the lady to kiss her hand, before rising to give her place to the next new comer. The new grandee then retired and sat down upon a cushion within the charmed circle of the ladies.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. We serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The presidential election will be fought out on the lines laid down months ago. President Cleveland has been accused of having shrunk from the free trade policy he then advocated. The accusation is unjust. * * * President Cleveland is substantially in favor of a financial policy which will impose duties mainly for revenue purposes, will take duties off raw materials, and so widen the market of the American purchaser. These are the aims and this is the policy of the free traders of all countries.—London Saturday Review, Sept. 15th, 1888.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

A Double Help for the Bilious.

In addition to that chief remedial measure—the use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters—persons suffering from an acute bilious attack, will facilitate recovery by the use at first of milk and lime water and thin gruels, and by a very gradual return to the use of solid foods. Fatty substances should be excluded from the diet. Blue pill is a remedy of doubtful safety, particularly if there be nausea and vomiting, frequent concomitants of liver trouble. The bitters, provided its reformatory action be not retarded and marred by gross indiscretions in diet, will soon restore the equilibrium of and action of the liver, stomach and bowels, all these disordered by billiousness. In all forms of malarial disease, which in every one of its phases presents indications of liver trouble, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the foremost of specifics. The light of over thirty years' experience also shows it to be a fine remedy for rheumatism, kidney troubles, dyspepsia, nervousness and debility.

Persons prematurely gray can have their hair restored to its youthful beauty, by using Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, the best article in the market.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

Every wife and mother in the country should know the great value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, as a blood purifier. It gives tone, health, and strength, to the vital organs, corrects all irregularities, and expels impurities from the system. Young and old use it. Price $1.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Are You Going

To travel? If so you must be very careful of your health, or your doctor's bills will cost you more than your travelling expenses. A bottle of Sulpher Bitters will protect you from all sickness incident to change of climate.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla, Sold by all druggists.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

A Dakota Wood Chopper's Strike.

Joe. Hivard, who held a part of ticket No. 3,894 which drew the capital prize, $300,000, in The Louisiana State Lottery drawing of Aug. 7th, received his money through the First National bank of this city, and left for Canada, to purchase a home for his parents. He was a wood chopper in the Homestake camp near Brownsville, Dak., working for day's wages.—Deadwood (Dak.) Pioneer, Aug. 26th.

It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. mon.wed.fri.eojal

Interested People.

Advertising a patent medicine in the peculiar way in which the proprietor of Kemp's Balsam, for Coughs and Colds, does it is indeed wonderful. He authorizes all druggists to give those who call for it a sample bottle free, that they may try it before purchasing. The large bottles at 50c. and $1. We certainly would advise a trial. It may save you from consumption.

TO PARENTS AND TEACHERS.

Occasionally is encountered a lad who has grown up in our streets and successfully eluded the truant officers. Such a one is almost always of the "gamin" order, ill fed, scantily clothed and generally neglected. And yet, notwithstanding the hardships implied, we find him strong, active and "wiry." If pitted against a country boy of his age the chances are our city lad would "use the other up." All things considered it must appear evident to those who study the subject that because our children are sent to school at too early an age is one potent reason why they suffer so much from the contrast with their country cousins. But it is purposeless to attempt to persuade parents to keep their little ones out of school until it is safe to send them. Borrowing an expression, one might as well hope to level Gibraltar with a crowbar. In the proper authorities is our only hope of reform. They cannot be ignorant of this grave responsibility. Reluctantly accepting the situation, we will give mothers and teachers a few words of practical advice as regards their treatment of school children, in so far as pertains to health.

"Cleanliness is next to godliness." Its importance is not always appreciated, either by parents or children. Every child should have a full bath at least once a week, whereas many in our public schools know that luxury only when the public bathing houses are opened to them, which is, of course, only in warm weather. Neglect of cleanliness propagates other mean habits, and tends to develop the beast in one's nature. If a child's body is continually dirty he will soon grow low and depraved, notwithstanding all his other influences are the best. Let parents fix that fact in their minds, else by that one neglect they utterly ruin the natures of their children. Those who live in humble tenements, destitute of bathing facilities, should call the washing tub into service at least once a week, and a general scrubbing of the children take place. Some mothers take pleasure and pride in the appearance of their little ones; others seem positively indifferent whether or not their faces are washed or hair is ever combed. They should see that both is done faithfully, not only in the morning, but on going to bed.
